The public reception at night, arranged by a committee of thirty citizens of Waukesha, opened at 8 o'clock. After the arrival of a large delegation of Milwaukee bankers at 9 o'clock a short program of addresses was opened by the presentation of a gold loving-cup, the tribute of employees and directors of the Waukesha National Bank, to Mr. Frame. E. R. Estberg of the bank made the presentation.

Other speakers were Judge J. H. Jenkins, Milwaukee, Dr. W. O. Carrier, president of Carroll College, Waukesha, and Judge M. S. Griswold, Waukesha. Mayor H. W. Wilbur presided. Young women served luncheon and punch while a string orchestra supplemented the huge banks of flowers presented by friends of the guest of honor in contributing to the festival spirit of the occasion. H. E. Blair, chairman of the citizens committee, and J. G. Gredler, cashier of the bank and secretary of the committee, were largely responsible for the success of the affair.

Members of the Milwaukee Bankers Club who went to Waukesha in a special car provided by Mr. Frame included Charles Kuhnmuensch, West Side Bank; A. H. Lindsay, Marine National; John E. Jones, H. J. Dreher, Marshall & Ilsley; A. W. Bogk, E. J. Hughes, William Bigelow, Fred T. Goll, First National; L. J. Petit, Lyman G. Bournique, I. D. Adler, Wisconsin National; P. R. Sanborn, W. N. Fitzgerald, Dr. C. E. Albright, C. G. Hinsdale, Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, of which Mr. Frame is a director; W. L. Cheney, and Albert C. Elser, Second Ward Savings Bank.

Condition of Milwaukee Banks

The last statements of Milwaukee banks, issued on call of the state bank commissioner show a falling off of more than $5,000,000 since February 20th in aggregate deposits, cash and total resources. The falling off is only normal, since the February figures were unusually high, owing to the large amount of public funds in the banks at that time of the year. At present the assets of the national banks in the city are a little more than $70,000,000, a slight gain over the assets on hand in December. Deposits, over $55,000,000, are about the same as at the close of the year. Money is reported abundant in the country districts and Milwaukee bankers expect the stimulation noticeable in business throughout the state to reach Milwaukee now suffering under a general apathy.

J. T. Joyce in Milwaukee

J. T. Joyce, vice-president of the Union National Bank of Eau Claire, and president of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, visited Milwaukee on Wednesday to confer with Secretary George D. Bartlett and the committee of Milwaukee bankers relative to arrangements for the state convention to be held in Milwaukee in July 24th and 25th. The committee on arrangements consists of E. J. Hughes, First National; W. C. Post, National Exchange; E. A. Reddeman, Germania National; and Walter Kasten, Wisconsin National.

Milwaukee Man Honored

August H. Vogel, well known Milwaukee business man, has been honored with a place on the board of directors of the new national commercial organization to be known as the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America. Mr. Vogel is one of the twenty-five business men from all parts of the United States selected to serve on the board. Walter P. Bishop, president of the chamber of commerce, was elected a member of the committee on organization. Milwaukee delegates at the conference at Washington, out of which the national body originated, were August H. Vogel, F. A. W. Kieckhefer, A. T. VanScoy, Walter P. Bishop, D. F. Owen, and William George Bruce.

State Association Headquarters Changed

The headquarters of the state association and the Wisconsin Banker became infected with moving-day disease on May 1st, with the result that Secretary George D. Bartlett and Mortimer I. Stevens, publisher of the official organ, migrated to new headquarters in Room 502 of the Merrill building, forsaking the old familiar haunts on the third floor of the Caswell block to dust and chance misguided state bankers unaware that the spring disease has struck and carried off its victims.

May Purchase Bonds

Postmaster David C. Owen has announced that by applying on or before June 1, depositors of postal savings may exchange the whole or a part of their deposits for United States registered or coupon bonds in denominations of $20, $100, and $500 bearing from July 1, 1912, at the rate of 2½ per cent per annum. According to a recent report from Washington there are now approximately 4,500 postal savings accounts in the 250 depositories in the state with an average of two deposits for each account since they were opened.

"Loan Shark" Campaign Practically Ended

With the conviction of E. L. Combes, Milwaukee, manager of the City Credit Company, of usury, District Attorney W. C. Zabel has announced that the campaign against loan sharks in Milwaukee is practically at an end, the managers of all brokers' offices in the city having lowered their interest rates to the figure required by law. This announcement was made following a careful survey of the field by the combined staffs of the district attorney and the sheriff, which revealed conditions vastly improved since the opening of the campaign in January.

Counterfeiters Plead Guilty

Peter and Hugo Musa, arrested in a raid upon their counterfeiting establishment several months ago, pleaded guilty to the charge of manufacturing bogus coins in United States district court this week, although sentence was deferred until next week. The men confessed to having turned out a large number of spurious coins and circulating them in Milwaukee and its suburbs. At the time the banks notified the federal officers of the appearance of the coins, although the latter worked upon the case for several weeks before tracing the counterfeiters to their establishment, and collecting sufficient proof for conviction.

Kuolt in Favor of Mutual Insurance of Deposits

In reference to the proposed plan of the Wisconsin Bankers Association for mutual insurance of deposits, State Bank Commissioner Kuolt announces that under the state law the proposed insurance company must have 200 policy holders. This means that nearly half of the 500 state banks must accept the proposition to permit putting it into effect. Mr. Kuolt is strongly in favor of the plan, saying that it will have a tendency to wipe out reckless banking by providing insurance only for those banks paying a safe interest rate. The plan insures in full deposits upon which 3 per cent interest is paid, and 90 per cent of deposits upon which 4 per cent is paid. A depositor promised more than 4 per cent assumes his own risk.

Wisconsin Notes

According to a report issued this week by the state factory commission a total of 56,000 Wisconsin laborers are now protected by the workmen's compensation act passed at the last session of the legislature. Acceptance of the provisions of the act, which is optional, has been made by 376 employers.

An index to improving business conditions throughout the country is noted in the order of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway for $8,000,000 worth of new equipment, most of which will be turned out in the shops of the company at West Milwaukee. The order includes ten Mallet engines, fifty Pacific passenger engines, and fifty Mikados. Twenty locomotives and 3,000 cars will be turned out at the Milwaukee shops.

Articles of incorporation of the Farmers State Bank of Minong have been approved by the state bank commissioner. Capital is $10,000, and the incorporators are S. J. Keefe, L. C. Statier, and F. T. Jenks.

The First State Bank of Pound has been organized with a capital of $20,000.

ALABAMA BANKERS AT MOBILE

Secretary McLane Tilton has sent out his formal program for the Mobile convention to be held May 17th and 18th. No change has been made in the lineup of speakers from that which was announced some time ago in THE CHICAGO BANKER. Every preparation is being made by the bankers of Mobile to give the visitors a fine reception, and the entertainment committee is working over time. Almost one entire session will be given over to agricultural subjects, and almost one other entire session will be devoted to the subject of bank supervision, at which the state banking commissioner and others will tell about the successful operation of the new banking law which has been in effect in Alabama for just one year.

BANKER MCCARTHY ACQUITTED

P. F. McCarthy, former South Side banker and real estate dealer, who has been on trial in the court of Judge John P. McGoorty on a charge of embezzlement and larceny as bailee, has been found not guilty. Judge McGoorty refused to allow the case to go to the jury. The state was unable to prove the charge in the indictment against McCarthy. Thomas White, 824 West Thirty-eighth Street, was the complaining witness against the defendant. It was charged that McCarthy embezzled $1,500 on a mortgage which he collected on behalf of Mr. White. The defense set up by the banker was that the $1,500 had been tendered to Mr. White, and that the latter refused to accept the same. The secretary of Mr. McCarthy also testified to this effect.

MEETING OF KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

The board of trustees and finance committee of the grand lodge of the Knights of Pythias convened in Chicago last week. Mayor Edward Guthrie of Mattoon, Ill., former cashier of the State Savings Bank at that place, represents the bankers on the board of trustees, and Walter H. Dey, assistant cashier of the banking house of C. H. C. Anderson at Carlinville, Ill., and August Weymeyer, teller at the Ricker National Bank at Quincy, represent the bankers on the finance committee.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, May 2.—Some diversity of opinion exists as to the monetary situation and present status of general business. Certain bankers report quite a brisk demand, both locally and from the country, while others hold that things are rather apathetic. About an average between the extremes probably will accurately cover the situation. The backward season is holding down the agricultural needs, especially along the upper edge of the territory tributary to St. Louis. The continued rains are delaying seeding and planting, while temperatures are universally unseasonably low. On the whole, however, the outlook is good for crops, except in the flooded regions. The recent heavy rains have furnished an additional volume of water, which will prevent the Mississippi River returning to its natural course before the middle of May, while a week or ten days ago it was thought the large part of the lands would be free of water by the middle of April. Small crops will be more backward in the Middle West than has been the case for many years. Wholesale merchants here report a hopeful feeling, but the volume of buying to date is somewhat disappointing. Deposits with most of the leading banks are just about holding their own, while loans are said to be near the level recorded in the statement under the April 18th call. The complication in the political situation is causing unrest, and has a tendency to shake the returning confidence. This factor, however, is temporary, and it is confidently believed that after the conventions, regardless of their results, things will begin to work upward again.

Banks Council Meeting

It was stated at the Third National, that Chas. H. Huttig, president of that institution, who has been in New York for the past few months convalescing from an illness, will attend and preside at the meeting of the executive council of the American Bankers Association, to be held at Briarcliff, N. Y., on May 6th. In addition to Mr. Huttig the following Missourians will attend: F. H. Orr, St. Louis Union Trust Company; A. O. Wilson, State National, St. Louis; J. A. Lewis, National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis; William C. Harris, Callaway County Bank, Fulton; C. D. Hutchinson, Kansas City. A. A. Bowman of St. Louis will also attend in the interest of the proposed new investors' section of the national association. The St. Louis party Saturday night will join the Chicago members of the council. A special train from Chicago will convey them to Briarcliff.

Banks in Strong Position

The call of the comptroller of the currency for statements at the close of business on April 18th found St. Louis financial institutions in an extremely strong and healthy condition. In banking circles here great satisfaction is expressed at the showing made, which not only demonstrates the solidity of St. Louis financially, but indicates better general business and prospects for increased activity in the near future. Loans and discounts totaled $241,117,663, an increase of $9,012,294 as compared with the last previous statement on February 20, 1912. Deposits reached near the high water mark, $324,710,206, a decrease under the February figures of $2,399,866. The loss in deposits is made up almost entirely of withdrawals by country banks, especially in the South and Southwest, city accounts showing little fluctuation. An increase of $36,385 was shown in surplus and profits, which, recent low rates considered, is thought to be quite as good as could have been expected. Circulation decreased $13,000, and there was no change in the capital item. Total resources were $427,211,843, indicating a decrease of $2,397,080 as compared with February 20th.

Stockholders Want Receiver

Suit has been filed in the circuit court by seventeen stockholders of the Federal Trust Company asking for a receiver. The petition alleges that assets of the company have been wasted, and that certain officers conducted the business for their own personal benefit rather than that of all stockholders. One of the allegations is that Charles B. Thomas, president of the company, in 1910 induced Joseph Turley and R. D. Smith to purchase the Henrietta coal mines in Illinois, and then sold the mines to the trust company. The profit was divided among the three men, it is alleged. The petition recites that the money for the original purchase was obtained from the treasury of the trust company. It is set forth that the mines were in poor physical condition, and have been operated at a great loss to the company. The plaintiffs state that last January the company entered into voluntary liquidation, and a committee was appointed to wind up its affairs. It is alleged that large salaries are being paid to the agents settling the affairs, and that the assets are in danger of further waste.

Ball Heads Bank Clerks

Frank C. Ball, chief clerk of the savings deposit department of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, was elected president of the St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Banking at the annual election of that body. The other officers elected are: H. C. Claudy, Franklin Bank, vice-president, and J. E. Uhrig, secretary and treasurer. The board of governors consists of R. W. Bugbee, Mississippi Valley Trust Company; F. L. Denby, St. Louis Union Trust Company; John J. Sherer, Central National. Fourteen delegates were also elected to attend the national convention in Salt Lake City in August. The chapter will give its annual banquet at the Planters Hotel on May 9th. Walker Hill, president of the Mechanics-American National, will preside as toastmaster. Attorney-General Elliot W. Major of Missouri, Frederick N. Judson, and George A. Mahon of Hannibal will be the principal speakers.

Protests Tax Levy

The Forest Trust Company is not satisfied with its assessment for taxation. It has applied to the circuit court for a writ of certiorari to compel Christian Brinkop, president of the board of assessors, and City Collector Edmond Koelin to certify to the court for revival of the assessment of its property. The capital stock of the company is $100,000. It is customary to assess banks and trust companies at 55 per cent of their capital, and the district assessor, it is said, assessed the institution at its full capitalization.

To Administer Hays' Estate

A telegram requesting the St. Louis Union Trust Company to administer on the Missouri estate of Charles M. Hays, former president of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, who was a victim of the Titanic disaster, was produced by the trust company in the probate court, when it filed on the estate. A copy of Mr. Hays' will, forwarded by mail, had not yet arrived.

Missouri Fire Loss in 1911

Advance sheets of the annual report of the Missouri state superintendent of insurance, just published, show the fire losses of Missouri in 1911 to be 76 per cent of the premiums received by the fire insurance companies. Total premiums were $8,363,290, and losses $6,397,513. Eighty per cent of the total premiums were paid by St. Louisans, $3,044,012, and they received on losses $2,487,044. The 1911 figures indicate heavier losses, which may cause the fire companies to attempt to increase the rates on certain risks.

INDIANA BANKERS BANQUET AT LEBANON

Officers, directors and employees of all the banking institutions of Boone county, Indiana, were entertained on Wednesday of this week at a banquet by the banks and trust companies of Lebanon. The banquet was held at the Clute Hotel at 7:30 o'clock. Andrew Smith, secretary of the Indiana Bankers Association, together with Dick Miller, who is connected with a prominent bond house in Indianapolis, were the principal speakers. S. N. Cragun officiated as toastmaster, and there were several speeches by representatives of the banking institutions of Boone county. The affair proved to be quite enjoyable for all those present. The following bankers served on the arrangements committee: William J. DeVol of the First National Bank; William T. Hooton of the Citizens Loan and Trust Company; John Wade of the Farmers State Bank; Morris E. Richie of the Boone County State Bank; and M. C. Long of the Union Trust Company.

Editorial Comment

NEW JERSEY BANKING CONDITIONS

The ninth annual convention of the New Jersey Bankers Association drew a large attendance to the Atlantic City meeting, and a fine speaking program met all of their requirements in that direction. President H. H. Pond, who is secretary of the Plainfield Trust Company, in his annual address told of the extreme efforts put forth by the administration to bring all of the banking institutions of the state into membership, and that while the plan did not ultimately succeed, there has been a large increase. President Pond believes, along with all other organization bankers, that if the bankers who are not members could realize the work that is being done in their interest, and the benefits which accrue from membership in the association they all would join promptly. New Jersey has had a profitable year in banking, with only one small failure of a national bank at Washington. There was a private banker operating a branch at Perth Amboy who failed but neither was a member of the association. President Pond gave it as his opinion that both failures were caused by injudicious investment, and lack of technical education in banking. He took these failures as a text, backed up by a liberal extract from Comptroller Murray, quoting the comptroller as saying that fully "60 per cent of the failures of national banks have been caused by violations of the national banking act; 23 per cent by injudicious banking; 13 per cent by shrinkage in values and general stringency in the money market." The comptroller and President Pond agree that not over 4 per cent of the bank failures are brought about by the failure of large creditors, which idea in the main is the one that the public has of what causes a bank to fail. From these premises President Pond argued in favor of greater care in examinations and asserted that the assets of the banks should themselves be scrutinized closely, that all evasions of the law might be uncovered and the offenders punished. Like all other good bankers, Mr. Pond is in full accord with the comptroller's office in its efforts to put the professional bank organizer out of business. He believes that the banking wants of any community will be followed usually by the organization of a bank by legitimate banking interests. The New Jersey president also believes in restricting the issue of state charters where the banking field already is well occupied. New Jersey is very proud of her state banks, and not a failure was recorded during the year.

Agriculture has been attracting considerable attention among the New Jersey bankers, and western bankers will be amazed to learn that New Jersey farms in 1911 produced nearly sixty-eight millions, an increase of four millions over the production of 1910. This partly is accounted for by higher prices, and partly by better farming conditions, which the banking fraternity has encouraged. President Pond believes that one of the most favorable signs of the times in the banking world was the taking into the clearing house of the New York trust companies, and the appointment of a clearing house bank examiner such as has been maintained in Chicago, and other large cities for a number of years. President Pond charged openly that New York clearing house banks have lost two hundred millions in deposits owing to their system of charges for collecting checks. He went into the general subject of charges for clearings in a manner which will justify every reader of this paper in making a close study of his address, which is printed in another column of this issue.

AFTER "BLUE SKY" FRATERNITY IN TEXAS

B. L. Gill, state banking commissioner for Texas, also is commissioner of insurance. He has been a great student of every reform movement in the country and became a convert almost instantly to the "Blue Sky" doctrine so expeditiously enacted into law in Kansas under the skillful manipulation of Commissioner J. N. Dolley. There is no doubt that when the exodus took place from Kansas many salesmen of worthless securities and promoters of fake companies headed direct for Texas. They did not even stop in Oklahoma owing to certain legal restrictions upon the restricted latitude of operations in that state. It would be a good thing, perhaps, for every banking commissioner, for a few years at least, to occupy a position of influence such as is occupied by Commissioner Dolley in his state. He is chairman of the republican state central committee, and thus the things which he recommends as banking commissioner are very likely to receive his support as state chairman, and through him, the support of practically all of his active political adherents. This is why he can have laws passed or amended almost at will. Of course, the things which he asks for ought to be done—that is taken for granted.

No less than a dozen fake insurance companies began to be agitated in Texas immediately after the "Blue Sky" law went into operation in Kansas. Commissioner Gill has issued a public statement which includes one of their subscription circulars, and which certainly provides for the promoter, first, last and all the time. The subscriber agrees first to pay "Fifty dollars in cash on each share, with this subscription, fifty dollars per share, in two months, and the balance, or Capital Portion, in four months from the date hereof." The subscriber further agrees that if he fail to make further payments the previous payments shall be considered as "liquidated damages." This leaves the subscriber the option of completing the payment of $100 per share towards a company in which a surplus has not been provided for, or he can permit the promoters to keep his first hundred dollars as "liquidated damages" for their services in taking it away from him. Commissioner Gill is of the opinion that the first hundred dollars paid never gets beyond the promoter and his confederates.

It is not likely that any average business man would sign such a subscription certificate if he examined it carefully or if it were offered to him without a promise on the side that he would be made a member of the board of directors and in touch with, and in control of, "millions of money." What Mr. Gill wants is to have his state pass a law similar to the one in Kansas, or at least as good a one as is in force in Oklahoma. That would put him in a position to run these gangs of crooks out of his state. He has heard about the proposal to have such a law passed in Illinois and other northern states and is a great believer in the system. He predicts that in every state where such legislation is attempted powerful lobbies will be assembled and a hard fight made to beat it. He says that almost every mail brings him complaints of people who have been victimized in Texas. He has started a campaign of publicity on the subject, which will help some. The commissioner is not over sanguine that such a law as he desires can pass, but is intending to make a valiant effort in that direction. Col. Gill's many admirers keep talking about him as a candidate for governor. It would be a fine thing for Texas, or for any state, to have such a capable, well-intentioned man in the executive chair.

THE INCONSISTENCY OF THE COLONEL

The manifold inconsistencies of Theodore Roosevelt readily are apparent by an examination of his conduct and political speeches in his frenzied effort to seat himself in the presidential chair for the third time. Upon his election to the presidency in 1904 by an overwhelming vote, he announced that under no circumstances would he again be a candidate for or accept another nomination. A number of months ago, President Taft announced that, like most of his predecessors, he would welcome an endorsement of his administration by a re-election. At that time Mr. Roosevelt let it be known that he did not seek the presidency again. He said that he would regard his nomination "as a calamity and undesirable from every standpoint." The Colonel at least, is to be given credit for knowing in his own heart the real truth of the matter. He now comes out and assumes an attitude directly antipodal to that which he formerly took.

He says that the President is allied with the bosses, and that a vote for him means a vote for the bosses and the moneyed interests. Curiously enough, he neglects to refer to his own association with William Flinn of Pittsburgh, by means of which there is being restored to power in that city one of the cleverest municipal bosses in the history of Pennsylvania. He also fails to state that he is receiving the support of Walter Brown in Ohio, one of the most potential factors in machine politics in the Buckeye state; nor is any mention made by the Colonel of his alliance with William Ward of New York and Messrs. Perkins, Aldrich, Cannon, Penrose, Quay, Platt, Foraker, and other prominent and influential politicians.

At the time President Taft was engaged in the work of advocating reciprocity with Canada, he asked Mr. Roosevelt's judgment as to the soundness of the proposed measure. He received a letter from the ex-president commending his course in the matter. Mr. Roosevelt stated that he believed it to be admirable from every standpoint; that he firmly believed in free trade with Canada for both economic and political reasons; that he believed the President was amply justified in his platform. Now Mr. Roosevelt has come out and stated that he is opposed to such a measure. In his recent campaign in Illinois, when speaking to the farmer element, he reiterated this. This but further exemplifies the fact that he is what is known as a "grand stand player." He is ready and willing at all times to advocate and support any proposition which he believes will enhance his popularity with any particular class. Emerson once said, "consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds." No doubt Mr. Roosevelt is sufficiently broad-minded to occupy Emerson's point of view.

Mr. Roosevelt charges that the President is receiving financial aid from the big corporations, and the political bosses in the conduct of his campaign for renomination. Under the publicity law (once opposed by the ex-President), it has developed that Roosevelt's New York City campaign cost in the neighborhood of $60,000, of which $45,000 were contributed by Mr. Perkins, Morgan's former partner, director in the steel trust and organizer of the harvester trust; Frank A. Munsey, also connected with the steel trust pool, and Alexander S. Cochran, a director of the Northern Pacific Railway. In return for this large expenditure the Colonel secured seven delegates at a cost of more than $8,000 each, and about 15,000 votes at a cost of $4 each. Then he has the audacity to come out and say that President Taft's victory in New York is attributable to fraud in the conduct of the primaries. In Oklahoma as high as $75 has been paid for a single vote. In Arkansas the law is evaded by paying "wages" to the workers; in Pittsburgh $100,000 were used in the form of certificates amounting to $5 each, which were cashed by "messengers" upon presentation at Roosevelt headquarters. It is said that about $500,000 were spent in this way in the state of Pennsylvania. In Missouri and Oklahoma special trains of negroes—and sometimes of whites—were run to district conventions in an effort to further the interests of Mr. Roosevelt. The ex-president always pretends to be fighting machine politics, and to be championing the rights of the people. He always is making a loud clamor about being on the square with the people; yet, in his frantic effort to secure the presidential nomination he resorts to the very methods he so caustically denounces. He is trying to subserve the interests of both the people and the bosses by openly avowing his advocacy of the right of the people to rule, and secretly accepting campaign contributions from the moneyed interests.

NEW LEGISLATION IN NEW YORK

Two very important bills recently have been passed by the New York legislature. The passage of these bills is considered another victory for the American Bankers Association in its campaign for uniform banking laws. The two measures are known as "the Pollock bills," the first of which provides that any person who shall wilfully make a false statement regarding the financial status of himself, any firm or corporation for the procurement of credit or other advantage shall be considered guilty of grand larceny in the first degree, the penalty provided being a fine of $1,000 or imprisonment for one year, or both. The second bill provides that any person guilty of the alteration of any books of account with the intent to defraud creditors shall be deemed guilty of forgery, in the third degree. The act, however, does not apply to any bookkeeper or clerk who shall make such alteration at the direction of his employer. The latter act is an amendment to the forgery act so as to make it applicable to guilty employers as well as to guilty employees. It also was passed to cope with the situation presented by the case of People vs. Isaacson, decided in the appellate division, in which it was held that while an employee who falsified books was guilty of forgery, an employer who ordered them falsified was not guilty.

CINCINNATI BANKS

The thirty-one state banks and trust companies in Cincinnati, at the close of business April 18th, had total reserves of $11,608,769, which is $2,938,358 more than the legal requirement. If these banks were to merge on the basis of their present capital, surplus and undivided profits the stock of the combination would have a book value of $223.50 per share of $100 par.

The State Bank of Rock Valley, Iowa, has increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $35,000.

Five Hartford Banks Don't Balance Pass Books

We have issued a "Systems Bulletin" which tells how five Hartford, Conn., banks have discontinued the very troublesome balancing of customers' pass books.

All of these banks, and a great many more in other cities, have adopted the statement system. Instead of waiting for all their customers to dump a great stack of pass books on top of a big day's work, they send statements at their convenience to all customers.

Mr. A. H. Cooley, of the Security Company of Hartford, who wrote the new Bulletin, says the pass book is the bane of the bookkeeping department.

He shows how the statement system solves the problem.

Bank men have found customers negligent about leaving their pass books but quick to see the advantages of the statement system, because they can always have deposits properly entered in their pass books, and for the very human reason that men like to keep their receipts.

A copy of this Bulletin will be furnished without charge to every bank asking for it. Just ask for Systems Bulletin No. 494, or "The Bulletin on Bank Statements."

WONDERLANDS OF AMERICAN WEST

The three great national play-grounds—the Yellowstone, the Yosemite, and the Grand Canyon—are set forth in color and in text almost as bright, in the new "Three Wonderlands of the American West," by Thomas D. Murphy, author of "British Highways and Byways," and "In Unfamiliar England." There are sixteen reproductions in color of Thomas Moran's famous paintings, twoscore duogravures, and maps of the three great parks.

In this volume Mr. Murphy turns to our own country, and both text and pictures tell a story that may well engage the attention of any one interested in the beauty and grandeur of natural scenery. The book will come as a revelation to many who have had a vague notion that possibly there may be something worth seeing in America—after one has "done" Europe. The author himself admits of such skepticism before he made the tour described in the book. He says, "I found myself wondering if there could be such an enchanted land as Mr. Moran portrays—such a land of weird mountains, crystal cataracts, and emerald rivers, all glowing with a riot of coloring that seems more like an iridescent dream than a sober reality."

A tour through the three wonderlands gives the answer—neither pen nor picture has ever told half the story. The illustrations from paintings by Moran come nearer, perhaps, than anything excepting a personal visit in presenting to the eyes the true grandeur of the wonderlands described; and these are supplemented by splendid photographs, reproduced and printed in a rich shade of brown. These features make the book one of the most notable ever coming from the American press, and it will serve the purpose of a guide to intending visitors, as well as a beautiful and appropriate souvenir for those who have visited one or all of the wonderlands so graphically portrayed.

L. C. Page & Co., Boston, who make a specialty of books of travel, are the publishers and the press work, and binding are superb. The price is but $3.00 net for a book which, if sold by subscription methods, would cost ten dollars. Every loyal American should have a copy of this revelation in American scenery, this proof that he who has not seen America first has little business abroad, and is unequipped for comparisons.

RECENT VISITORS

C. S. Jobs, president of the Security National, Kansas City, Mo.; William Ontjes, cashier of the Sioux Falls (S. D.) Savings. Mr. Ontjes formerly was vice-president and cashier of the American Exchange State of Sioux Falls until its consolidation with the Sioux Falls Savings. He reports that the deposits of the two banks now are up to $1,800,000, which makes the Sioux Falls Savings the largest bank in the matter of deposits in the state of South Dakota. Mr. Ontjes says that their customers apparently are well satisfied with the new arrangement. Crop conditions in South Dakota are considered most favorable. There is plenty of moisture. Farmers, bankers and business men are exceedingly hopeful of the business prospect for the coming year. E. F. Goodell, vice-president of the Stuart State Bank, St. Charles, Ill., was a Chicago visitor recently. Charles H. Utz, vice-president of the First National at Appleton, Wis.; Joseph C. Carr, president of the Grundy County National Bank, Morris, Ill., and H. B. Wilson, assistant cashier of the Columbia National Bank, Indianapolis, also were in the city.

John H. Holliday, president of the Union Trust Company of Indianapolis, visited Chicago last Wednesday. Mr. Holliday is one of the leading bankers and financiers of Indiana. He is a student of and writer on financial subjects. His addresses always are instructive and appreciated by the members of the banking fraternity. He served a term on the executive council of the American Bankers Association and took an active part in important committee work during his term of service; J. W. Boyden, vice-president of the Farmers State Bank, Sheffield, Ill., and John C. Paddock, cashier of the Merchants National of Peoria, are two down-state banker fans who watched the Pirates eat up the Cub pitchers last Tuesday; Dr. F. S. Whitman, president and B. F. Harnish, cashier of the Peoples Bank at Belvidere, are enthusiastic in their support of agricultural and educational development work. The Peoples Bank is offering cash prices for the best acre yield of corn during the season of 1912.

John Puelicher, cashier of the Marshall & Isley Bank of Milwaukee, with his daughter, visited Chicago last Wednesday en route to New York; J. E. Garm, cashier of the Joplin (Mo.) National Bank, who has been visiting friends at Beardstown, Ill., stopped long enough in Chicago last week to say that Joplin bankers are expecting a large attendance at the convention of the Missouri Bankers Association to be held at that place this year, and that they hope to please the visitors with their program and entertainment features; John Skinner, president of the Astoria State Bank and of the Farmers State Bank at Lewistown, took a Woods Electric home with him week. Mr. Skinner is a pioneer citizen of Illinois and is familiar with agricultural and road conditions. He expressed the opinion that country roads will not be improved to any great extent until the farmers themselves do their share in improving them. He says there must be constant agitation and organization among all classes of people in the state to the end that the farmers will recognize this patriotic duty.

S. P. Mott, assistant cashier of the Iowa State Bank, at New London, Iowa, has been elected cashier, succeeding Mr. McGrew.

New Jersey Bankers on National Incorporation of Trust Companies

The discussion at this time as to whether or not trust companies of our state should become members of the Central Reserve Association when formed can, at the best, be only academic, and have only an educational benefit and effect upon our minds, for as yet congress has not passed the bill authorizing the formation of the Central Reserve Association, and no favorable action is expected at this congressional session.

As was feared by the formulators of the Central Reserve Plan, the whole subject has become involved in politics and regardless of its value to the country at large, the existing dominant party in congress will not permit its enactment into law.

The members of this association are all too familiar with the provisions of this proposed bill to require any description of its terms at this time, and after a most careful study of its provisions and full consideration of the benefits to be gained by the nation in its adoption, I am convinced that it is a wonderful constructive piece of legislation, which seems to provide for every known or unlooked-for trouble, based upon past experience, and to provide a magnificent banking system for this country, sufficient to meet the varied and unusual demands of a country as broad as ours, and of such varied and different resources, the handling of which in the past has been such a severe strain upon our banking facilities. As such the report of the National Monetary Commission and the remedy proposed have my entire approval, for, while, in all probability, it is not perfect in all of its details, and while experience under its terms may develop crudities and unlooked-for difficulties, yet the general principles involved are sound, and such charges as may be necessary in their application can be made.

The original report of the commission did not include trust companies in its provisions, and I am inclined to believe that as applied to trust companies in cities or towns other than reserve and central reserve cities the failure to include trust companies was proper, for while the joining, or not, of the association will be entirely optional on the part of each trust company, the practical effect will be the undoubted joining of the association by the larger trust companies, should the bill become a law. In the discussion of a subject of such vast importance as is this, I fully realize the necessity of doing so from a broad viewpoint, and without giving too much consideration to the effect that the proposed legislation will have upon individual cases, but when such legislation will involve the entire modification of the business of the institutions of a state, which has had the sanction of a quarter of a century of successful operation, then we should carefully study the question from all of its view-

W. H. McCarter, of Newark, treats the subject broadly in a talk before New Jersey bankers at the Atlantic

points, and before reaching a final determination give full consideration to the broad national questions involved, as well as their local application.

In reserve and central reserve cities there will be no hesitation on the part of trust companies in their adoption of the act, as moneys kept by country trust companies with trust companies so situated can be counted as a part of the legal reserve of the depositing company, while the money which any subscribing trust company in New Jersey may keep with any other subscribing bank or trust company in that state cannot be counted as a part of its reserve, and the result will be that intra-state relations which have existed many years between New Jersey institutions to the mutual profit and satisfaction of the contracting parties will either have to be entirely eliminated or so seriously reduced as to amount to practical abandonment. This will prove to be a matter of serious consequences to the company with which I am connected, as we have at the present time reserve accounts of other institutions aggregating a very large amount. Our company in turn keeps one of its most important reserve accounts with a national bank within the state, with which it has affiliated relations, both of which class of relations would be seriously interfered with, if not entirely done away with, in the event of our joining the association.

To be equally beneficial to all trust companies it would seem to me that the character of the business of the different companies so affected should be of a similar kind, which is not the case throughout the state, as some of our companies buy commercial paper, and hence can readily come under the beneficial effects of the proposed legislation, while the direct advantages of those companies not doing a commercial business are not so prominent, for while provision is made in the proposed act for the borrowing of money upon the direct obligations of a subscribing member upon the deposit of satisfactory collateral, still, the machinery involved in the obtaining of such loan is so involved as to make the remedy worse than the disease.

The underlying intention throughout the entire act is to prevent what is called speculative borrowing (i. e. borrowing for the promotion of speculative enterprises), and for the extension as far as may be of the credits for agricultural and mercantile pursuits.

One of my reasons, therefore, for hesitation as to the wisdom of the adoption of this bill by our trust companies is the fact that it is not designed to meet the requirements of the old line trust company, which does not do a commercial business; secondly, it will drive a large amount of money now kept on deposit as reserve within the state, outside of our state; thirdly, in my judgment, it will tend to force the issue of judicial incorporation of trust companies, and the enforced surrender of state and more favorable charters.

This subject of national incorporation of trust companies is a very live one at the present time. At the conventions of the American Bankers Association, and as a member of the executive committee of the trust company section of that association, and later as a member of the association, I have for years worked against the association taking a favorable stand on that subject.

Many trust company men from different sections of the country advocate it strongly, and I greatly fear that a universal adoption of the principles of the proposed so-called Aldrich bill by the trust companies of the country will give an impetus to this subject, which may be difficult to stem—in that the carrying out of the requirements of that set may raise important questions as to states' rights and federal interferences.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

"Bankers and business men generally seem to be playing a waiting game in this part of the country," observed Thornton Cooke, vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City to the correspondent of THE BANKER. "I do not believe that some of the alarming reports about wheat being winter-killed are well founded. Of course some damage has been done, but there is still ample time for an average crop in the Central West. From all accounts conditions seem to be a little better in the East than in the Central West. Here there is just enough business to keep things moving, but nobody is in trouble. There is a strong undertone, and with average crops I look for business to pick up wonderfully later on in the season."

Kansas State Banks Report

Bank Commissioner Dolley of Kansas has just compiled a statement showing the condition of the 896 Kansas state banks based upon the call issued April 2d. The deposits have increased $1,753,751 over what they were on December 27, 1911, when the previous call was issued. The total deposits in the Kansas state banks amount to $102,128,200. Mr. Dolley in his statement says: "The call statement of April 2d shows a very pleasing condition. We were surprised to know that the deposits had increased in a very substantial amount. Reserves have increased nearly eight points; there has been a very decided decrease in overdrafts, and a marked increase in cash and sight exchange, all showing the banking conditions in Kansas to be very satisfactory, and the banks in a very strong financial condition. The farmers have passed through a very expensive winter, but have strong hopes for the present year as a crop year. Wheat in some counties has been more or less winter-killed, although not a very large per cent of it has been damaged in this way. We still have bright prospects for a ninety-million bushel crop. Business has improved materially during the past sixty days in all lines; is strong and promises a brighter future than at this date one year ago. The banks are having a steady demand for money for legitimate purposes. The "blue sky" speculators have ceased to interest the Kansas banker. A banker who loans these individuals money now is not classed as one of our best bankers. They have been driven from Kansas by statute and their credit terminated, and I believe this to be an important factor in the noticeable increase in deposits during the past three months. There is an unlimited field for investment in Kansas to develop Kansas, and such investments will bring a fair rate of interest. 'Keep Kansas money in Kansas, to develop the unlimited resources of the greatest state in the American union,' should be the watchword. I do not believe national politics, whatever the result may be, will seriously affect business in Kansas and the Central West. No state in the Union is in as strong a position against national political conditions as is Kansas."

Condition of Kansas City and Omaha Banks

The recent call showed the deposits of the fourteen national banks of Kansas City to amount to 105½ million dollars, which varies less than $200,000 from the figures of two months ago, although there are some large changes in individual banks, the New England showing a gain of one-half million dollars and the Interstate a gain of one million, while the National Reserve's deposits decreased $600,000 and the Commercial, of Kansas City, Kansas, showed a decrease of three-fourths millions. The large changes are attributable to the handling of drainage funds. The total cash and exchange amounts to practically the same as two months ago, and the loans and discounts vary only a small fraction of 1 per cent. The total resources of the national banks of Kansas City are 124½ million dollars, differing only $18,000 from those of two months ago. The total deposits of the national banks of Kansas City on April 18th this year were $3,400,000 less than on March 7, 1911, and $3,680,000 more than on June 7, 1911. These figures show that the demand for money and the volume of deposits and cash resources are remarkably uniform. The total cash and exchange in the national banks amounts to 45.5 per cent of deposits compared with 42.7 per cent on June 7, 1911. The total deposits of state banks and trust companies are practically the same as two months ago, and about $1,800,000 larger than on June 7, 1911. There is less idle money in the Omaha national banks than was shown by the last preceding call. Bankers in Omaha are well satisfied with conditions. The total deposits of the ten national banks in Omaha are, $59,674,941 as compared with $59,773,190 on February 20, 1912. The loans and discounts of the Omaha banks are $39,719,310 as compared with $37,733,972 on February 20, 1912.

State Bank for Omaha

For many years there has not been a state bank in Omaha. To supply this deficiency a number of Omaha capitalists have organized the Omaha State Bank, which will have a capital of $500,000, and will be the only bank in Omaha to be protected under the Nebraska state guaranty law passed three years ago. Albert S. White, native of Nebraska, who has been in the banking business for fifteen years in Missouri, and L. A. McConnell, who comes from Chicago representing eastern capital, are moving spirits in the new organization. The Omaha men who are interested are G. H. Payne, John T. Yates, Ralph Kitchen, W. C. Lambert, A. T. Klopp, R. E. Wilcox, B. F. Thomas, George W. Ryan, E. H. Westerfield, A. Hospe, J. W. Elwood and F. T. Stroup. The present offices of the organizing committee are in the Omaha National Bank Building.

Kansas City Chapter

The Kansas City Chapter of the American Institute of Banking held its annual meeting at the Kansas City Athletic Club last week with an unusually good attendance of the 200 members. The business session was preceded by a dinner at which the Kansas City Athletic Club minstrels furnished the chief entertainment. One of the questions that was discussed at length was the number of delegates that will represent the chapter at the national convention in Salt Lake City, August 17th and 18th. It was finally decided to send two delegates who will be chosen later. The following chapter officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, C. A. Burkhardt of the National Reserve Bank; vice-president, H. L. Larson of the National Bank of Commerce; secretary, Lloyd Garrett of the First National; treasurer, P. A. Adam of the Title and Savings Trust Company, and an executive board, composed of G. G. Moore of the New England National; A. W. Kennedy of the National Bank of Commerce, and Joseph T. Heydon of Houston, Fible & Co.

No Bank Failure in Three Years

The Kansas banking department has issued a report covering the transactions of the state bank deposit guaranty fund during the past three years. In that time the fund has not paid out a single penny on account of bank failures. For the first eight months after its enactment the law was tied up in the federal courts. There are now 444 state banks participating in the funds. They have deposited in the state treasury through the banking department a total of $325,909 in Kansas municipal bonds. This amount comprises a guaranty of good faith on the part of the banks. The banks collect interest on these bonds, and the total amount is sufficient to pay off the indebtedness to depositors should almost any state bank in Kansas fail utterly. When the law was under consideration by the legislature it was argued by many bankers that the plan proposed would tie up too much of their money; that it would take too much out of circulation, and put it in the hands of the state treasurer. At the present time the state has on deposit $80,744 in cash belonging to the banks participating in the guaranty fund. The same banks have nearly $100,000,000 on deposit, so the state has in actual possession less than one-tenth of 1 per cent of the total deposits of the banks. It has been necessary to issue certificates of deposit against the fund but once since the law went into effect. That was in the case of the failure of the Abilene State Bank, which was wrecked by John A. Flack. As soon as the state took charge of the affairs of the bank the assets that could be turned quickly were cashed and depositors paid off in proportion to their deposits. The other property was taken over by the state, and is being disposed of as rapidly as possible. Each depositor was given a certificate of deposit bearing interest for the remainder due him. The state and national banks at Abilene are holding these certificates. They purchased them from the depositors. It is not likely that it will be necessary to pay a single cent out of the guaranty fund to the depositors after all the property has been turned into money.

Bankers Mortgage Loan Company, Omaha, Organized

Omaha will have a new and important financial enterprise as soon as the organization can be completed. Articles of incorporation have been authorized for the Bankers Mortgage Loan Company with a capital stock of $2,000,000, which will make a specialty of loaning money on real estate and furnishing capital for public utility projects in Nebraska. The officers of the company are: President, Thomas B. McPherson, president of the South Omaha Live Stock Exchange, director of the Union Stock Yards Company, and director of the Corn Exchange National Bank; vice-president, F. McGiverin, president of the Commercial National of Fremont, and president of the Nebraska Bankers Association; secretary, E. M. Reynolds; directors, George N. Seymour, president of the State Bank of Elgin, and the Atlas Bank of Neligh; H. A. Peters, banker and live stock dealer of Hay Springs, Neb.; W. E. Farlow, capitalist, New York.

Bank Robbery at Midland, Ark.

Robbers visited the Bank of Midland, thirty miles south of Fort Smith, Ark., the night of April 24th, and after a sensational fight with citizens escaped with $8,000. The robbery had been carefully planned. All telephone wires in the village had been cut. Awakened by explosions, a number of citizens armed themselves and went to the bank, where they were received by a volley of shots from the robbers' lookouts. That was a signal for a fight which lasted two hours. After the robbers got all of the money in the safe, they set fire to the bank building, and, sheltered by the flames, they outflanked the posses and escaped. The loss of the papers in the fire will seriously cripple the bank's business for some time.

Death of H. M. Holden

Howard M. Holden, a veteran banker of Kansas City, died at his home last week at the age of 75 years. Mr. Holden was born in Malden, Mass., in 1835. He located in Muscatine, Iowa, and began his career as a banker. After remaining there three years he went to the American Exchange Bank in New York for one year. Returning to Iowa he established a bank at Washington, of which he was the first cashier, and later president. In 1866 he located in Kansas City, where he bought a controlling interest in the old First National Bank, which under his management became the leading banking house west of St. Louis at that time. Mr. Holden was one of the leading spirits in the organization of the Kansas City Live Stock Exchange, and was the first treasurer, and later president of the Kansas City Board of Trade. In 1878 the First National Bank failed, and Mr. Holden spent several years settling up its affairs. In 1893 after the failure of the Kansas City Safe Deposit and Savings Bank, Mr. Holden was appointed assignee, and devoted several years to closing its affairs. During the last few years Mr. Holden had been in retirement.

Central West Notes

The fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City, which owns the old Federal Building at Ninth and Walnut street, will add two stories to the structure, thus increasing the office room. The improvement will cost about $20,000.

Business men of Waco, Texas, are planning for an extended eastern and northern trip to begin June 14th. Publicity matter will be distributed setting forth the advantages of Waco for investments. A special train will carry the boosters, who will visit a grand circuit to include Chicago, Detroit, Buffalo, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

R. L. VanZandt, national bank examiner for the eastern district of Texas with headquarters at Fort Worth, has been chosen by the New Orleans Clearing House Association as special bank examiner for the association to have jurisdiction over the banks of New Orleans.

J. C. Hopper, president of the Citizens National of Ness City, Kansas, gave an octagonarian dinner one day last week to four cronies, J. F. Borthwick, Thomas Nicholson, Phineas Snyder and Aaron Bowser, and their ages aggregated 330 years.

Sam Burns, Jr., J. A. C. Kennedy, and C. M. Wilhelm are a committee of the Omaha Commercial Club recently appointed to frame a law to protect people from investing in worthless stocks or schemes of fraudulent nature. The law is to be patterned after the Kansas "blue sky" law.

The bankers of Grady county, Okla., met last week and effected a permanent county organization. The object of the association is a better co-operation among the twenty banks of the county. After the business meeting the delegates enjoyed a banquet and smoker.

M. D. Timberlake, for several years cashier of the First National, Ada, Okla., has resigned to engage in private business.

Banking Commissioner B. L. Gill of Texas has announced the appointment as assistant bank clerk in the department of C. E. McCutcheon of Megargel. Mr. McCutcheon was cashier of the First National of that place.

A large number of northern Nebraska bankers attended their annual convention in Norfolk last week. The following officers were elected: President, T. A. Anthony, Wausau; secretary, R. H. Mathewson, Wakefield; treasurer, M. L. Mote, Plainview.

The second group of the Nebraska Bankers Association met at Fremont last week with an attendance of more than 150 delegates, and many guests from Omaha. One of the most important discussions of the convention was on the subject of the national reserve association. L. B. Howey of the City National Bank, Lincoln, introduced the subject by reading a paper in which he indorsed the plan. The group registered its formal approval of the national reserve system. The group sent a congratulatory telegram to H. W. Yates, president of the Omaha National, on the occasion of his golden wedding anniversary. The following officers were chosen: President, C. C. Marshall, Arlington; vice-president, Chris Hirschman, West Point; secretary and treasurer, Jesse McNish, Wisner.

Max Church, who two years ago was arrested for receiving money as cashier of the Holyrood State Bank, Holyrood, Kan., while that bank was in a failing condition, was fined $500 last week. Church fled after his arrest, and was recaptured recently in California.

Henry M. Dearing, seventy-two years old, and his son, Palmer M. Dearing, forty years, were taken to the federal prison at Leavenworth last week to begin serving sentences of five years each for embezzlement. Henry M. Dearing was cashier of the Albion National Bank of Albion, Mich., and his son was a clerk. They admitted having taken $150,000 of the bank's money to finance private enterprises.

In conclusion, my judgment would lead me to the belief that if the Aldrich bill were made to apply to trust companies in reserve and central reserve cities only, and if the trust companies in the other cities of the country were permitted to carry on their business under a system of more uniform legislation as to supervision by their several state departments, and were still able to secure accommodation when required from their reserve banks as at present, the reserve banks being in a position always to extend such accommodation by reason of their membership in the reserve association, that our trust companies would be better off out of the association, but if the failure of the trust companies throughout the country to join the association jeopardized the successful carrying out to its fullest function this magnificent creation of a national banking system, or if their failure to join the association would disturb their present method of securing financial assistance when needed, then in either of which events I would be in favor of subordinating individual views to the good of the many, and I have entire confidence in the loyalty and devotion of the trust companies to their country's needs to lead them to join in with their sister institutions in favor of any legislation looking to the safety of the nation regardless of the effect upon individual cases.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Import of the last Minneapolis statement on call, bankers say, is that the Northwest is on a firm business basis, that the financing incident to the opening of the crop season was well done in advance of requirements, that the volume of distributing, manufacturing, railroad and other lines of business is holding steadily to the higher basis over a year ago, first indicated in the statements, and that the general business outlook is good. Business volume reflected through the banks was practically on a basis of $10,000,000 more than a year ago.

Total deposits on April 18th were $103,606,835, as compared with $102,653,873, February 20, 1912, and $94,101,806, March 9, 1911. Of the first total $84,455,652 was in commercial banks and the balance in savings banks. The deposits of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank alone were $13,917,899. Loans and discounts for the three periods above were $62,751,472, $63,214,262, and $56,344,096. Deposits in excess of the February statement were $1,042,962, and in excess of March, 1911, $9,595,029. The loans and discount increase was $598,348 over February, and $6,103,552 over 1911. Deposits of the three largest banks were: Northwestern National, $26,306,240; First National, $22,472,087; Security National, $19,579,415.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Orde have closed their town house in Summit Avenue, and are at their country home, Longridge, Orono, Lake Minnetonka.

Predicts Bumper Crop

J. W. Wheeler, president of the Capital Trust Company, St. Paul, sees a bumper crop ahead. Mr. Wheeler came from Crookston, where farmers are psychic about crops long ahead. He says: "Crop conditions throughout the Northwest are better than for fifteen years. Seeding has been done nearly two weeks earlier, and the recent rains will bring the grain right along. There was a shortage of fall plowing in North Dakota, but so many farmers own traction plows that this can be largely remedied. At present there is nothing in the way of a bumper crop for the entire Northwest."

Recommends Sale of Bonds

The Minneapolis council committee has recommended the sale of $200,000 bonds to cover prospective expenditures at Hopewell, the city tuberculosis hospital. The committee will advertise $80,000 playgrounds bonds, $50,000 sewer pipe bonds, and $10,588 certificates of indebtedness. The common sinking fund was checked over April 29th to find where it is at.

Curtis L. Mosher Addresses Office Men's Club

Curtis L. Mosher, secretary of the Citizens League of Minnesota, told the Minneapolis Office Men's Club at its Thursday meeting that the present banking system is obsolete. He discussed the national monetary commission. He said among other things:

"Two important points should be realized in a new monetary system. The bank should be able to guarantee the depositor the opportunity to withdraw his money whenever he sees fit. The depositor also should be assured that he could secure loans whenever he had satisfactory security without the incident grilling through which he now has to pass.

"The monetary commission proposes to form banking districts. There would be local association comprising groups of banks which would join in district association. The district association would federate in the central association of the United States, which would hold the idle funds of the smaller organizations. It is probable that one of these district associations would have headquarters either in Minneapolis or St. Paul.

St. Paul Banks

Nine St. Paul banks showed a falling off in deposits as compared with February 20th. Officers said the call came at just the wrong time for a good showing, when there was dip in the deposits. They amounted in February to $47,879,980 as compared with $45,915,936. Loans and discounts for the two periods were $31,641,237 and $30,713,926. It is said that had the call been April 15th the banks would have shown a notable increase in deposits, or $200,000.

New Wisconsin Bank

The Farmers State of Minnong, Wis., has incorporated at $10,000. The incorporators are S. J. Keefe, L. C. Stadler, F. T. Jenks, and others.

Pay Bills Before May 1st

Of Assessor Frank L. Powers at St. Paul, the newspapers say, speaking of the new credit law of the state, "He has come to the conclusion that everybody involved in the transaction will be better off if debts are paid before May 1st. He points out that any person having money in bank May 1st will be assessed for it. In addition, he points out that any person who has bills due him May 1st will be assessed for them as credits. For that reason it will simplify things if the man with money in bank will use it in paying his bills."

ized by business men to loan to salaried people, in the two months of its history just closed. Since establishment 825 applications have been filed and money was loaned to about one-half. Bankers are interested in the company.

"About one-third of those who have applied were loan shark victims," said A. W. Gutridge, manager. "We do not expect so many calls for loans from now on. It has been a hard winter, and many applications are due to that. There have been many cases of real want relieved in the first two months."

To Prevent Sale of Bonds

A statement calculated to block sale of the Virginia state bonds held by Minnesota has been prepared by the state auditor. The bonds amount to $2,145,000. The statement shows that by October 20, 1912, enough revenue will have come to the treasury to care for all applications for loans now on file, and leave $373,387. The sale of the bonds is being agitated on the ground that the state is in need of funds to care for applications for loans from various sources throughout the state, and that these loans will bring in a greater income to the state than the funds invested in Virginia bonds.

An additional argument against the sale is the fact that by July 1, 1913, $561,000 worth of Louisiana state bonds mature, making this sum available for state loans. State Treasurer Smith is the only member on the board who has urged the sale of the bonds. It takes an unanimous vote to authorize the sale.

INDIANAPOLIS BANK DEPOSITS INCREASE

The individual deposits in the national banks of Indianapolis, Ind., have increased remarkably during the last year, according to a report made by the comptroller of the currency, based upon the last call, April 18th, as compared with the call of March 7, 1911. It shows individual deposits amounting to $21,758,980.90, as against $20,663,360.99 a year ago. Total resources of Indianapolis banks increased during this period from $55,844,419.45 to $57,513,810.14, and loans and discounts from $28,469,336.38 to $29,320,926.65.

ALBION BANK CREDITORS TO GET A DIVIDEND

Creditors of the defunct Albion (Mich.) National Bank will undoubtedly soon get their first dividend, 20 per cent, or a total of $8,000. The receiver has so recommended to the comptroller at Washington. This is the bank for the wrecking of which the Dearings, father and son, are serving time at Fort Leavenworth.

ANDREW SMITH
Vice-President

Frank D. Stalnaker will be the president of the bank.

The capital of the new bank will be $2,000,000, and the surplus $1,000,000. It will have total deposits of about $15,000,000, and total resources of about $20,000,000.

It was announced that few changes would be made either in the officers or the working force of the two banks after the consolidation. The shareholders of the Indiana and the Capital banks will meet May 29th to vote on the ratification of the action of the boards of directors, and the Indiana will vote on increasing its board to not fewer than fifteen or more than twenty-five members. It was announced, also, that the business of the two banks would continue uninterrupted up to the time of the consolidation.

Originally Branch of State Bank

The Indiana National Bank was originally the Indianapolis branch of the Bank of the State of Indiana, and began business on February 1, 1857. It was organized under the national banking act and became a national bank March 12, 1865, and was the first national bank to begin business in Indianapolis. It has capital and surplus of $2,400,000 and deposits amounting to about $7,500,000.

Its officers are as follows: Volney T. Malott, president; Henry Eitel, vice-president; M. W. Malott, second vice-president; Edward D. Moore, cashier; Thomas Kaylor, assistant cashier; Volney T. Malott, Charles H. Brownell, John H. Holliday, Samuel Rauh, L. C. Boyd, Charles C. Perry, W. J. Holliday, Edward L. McKee, Elisha Havens, Arthur D. Brown, George B. Yandes, and Henry Eitel, directors.

Capital Twenty-Two Years Old

The Capital National Bank is about twenty-two years old, and has a capital of $1,000,000; surplus and undivided profits, $500,000, and about $6,500,000 in deposits. The officers of the bank are: Frank D. Stalnaker, president; Andrew Smith, vice-president; Gwynn F. Patterson, cashier; Leroy Kahler, assistant cashier; J. Kurfis, auditor; A. G. Lupton, A. Q. Jones, J. W. Lilly, Fred Dickson, John J. Appel, Sol Meyer, E. I. Fisher, Andrew Smith, H. J. Milligan, E. H. Darrach and Frank D. Stalnaker, directors.

This is the third consolidation of national banks to take place in Indianapolis recently. The first was the consolidation of the Fletcher and the American, under the name of the Fletcher-American National Bank, and the second was the consolidation of the Union and the Columbia under the name of the National City Bank.

"Farmers throughout the Spokane country were never so well satisfied with conditions and the prospects for large crops," said R. Lewis Rutter, vice-president and manager of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, on returning to Spokane from a trip of 450 miles by motor car in southeastern Washington. With him were C. W. Winter, vice-president, and Mrs. Winter and Conner Malott, manager of the mortgage department of the bank. Mr. Rutter added:

"The country banks of the southern part of Spokane county and Whitman, Asotin, Garfield, Columbus, and Walla Walla counties, are full of money and reserves are running as high as 60 per cent. Farmers are borrowing practically nothing on mortgages. The only real estate loans to be had are the result of an occasional sale when some one buys an adjoining parcel of land. In many cases the resulting mortgages are handled by neighbors. One farmer in Whitman county is credited with having $200,000 loaned on mortgages. We were looking for the purchase of good mortgages, but not a single one could be offered by the banks we visited.

"Substantial increases in live stock were noted, though we are yet a long way from producing our quota of pork, eggs, poultry and butter. Land values now range from $60 to $100 an acre. One of the most impressive things is the uniformity of the land and the constantly increasing acreage under cultivation. Practically the entire country in the Palouse is now in grain."

Condition of Spokane Banks

Spokane banks have larger deposits today than reported at any time previously in the history of the city. Sixteen banks responding to a call of the comptroller of the currency for statement at the close of business on April 18th, reported total of $33,121,716.22, as against $27,888,370.27 on March 7, 1911. Loans and discounts have increased more than $1,000,000 in the same period, and there is an increase of $30,640.10 in surplus and undivided profits, and a gain of $3,575,270.72 in cash on hand.

Investment of Boston Capital in Apple Lands

Colonel William N. Mears, president of the Boston and Washington Apple Orchard Association, said in an interview a few days ago that more than $1,000,000 of Boston capital will be invested in developing apple lands in Okanogan and Chelan counties, Washington, in the next few years. The associations project, he added, will be completed as rapidly as possible. The Okanogan Orchards Company of Tonasket, Wash., also is financed by Boston money. The Beebe Brothers of Boston are putting in a 400-acre orchard near Chelan. Three hundred acres of land was planted to apples last year, and it is given out that too acres will be set this season. The land is not for sale, but will be developed as a commercial orchard proposition.

Washington Convention

Charles A. McLean, cashier of the Traders National Bank of Spokane and president of the Washington Bankers Association, says the seventeenth annual convention at Tacoma and Olympia. June 27th and 29th, will be interesting and instructive. The business sessions will take place at Tacoma June 27th, and on the morning of June 29th. June 28th will be given over to the entertainment of delegates and visitors, who will be the guests of the bankers of Olympia. The Tacoma Clearing House Association will provide the entertainment June 27th and 29th. While the program for the three days has not been completed, it is announced that one of the principal addresses will be given by John Perrin, chairman of the board of the Fletcher-American National of Indianapolis, a member of the currency commission of the American Bankers Association. Mr. McLean and W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National of Spokane, also will deliver addresses.

Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railway Company and the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company have just closed for the purchase of property in Spokane involving $1,250,000. The ground, in Front Avenue, between Howard and Washington streets, will be used for station purposes.

Large Bond Issue

State Capitol Commission of Washington has authorized the issuance of $920,000 bonds at 4 per cent, the money to be used to complete the new $350,000 temple of justice, and take up all outstanding debts against the building fund. Some of the warrants have been drawing interest so long that the interest due exceeds the face of the warrants, and it is to put the fund on a sound basis that bonds are authorized. Part of the issue may be placed on the market, the balance being taken up by the state board of finance.

Group 1 Holds Meeting at Waterville

W. D. Vincent, Old National Bank; E. Vaughn Klein, Traders National Bank; W. L. Clarke, Spokane and Eastern Trust Company; O. M. Greene, Exchange National Bank; Thomas H. Brewer, Fidelity National Bank, and W. T. Day of the Day-Hansen Company, of Spokane, attended the annual meeting of the North Central Washington Bankers League, Group 1, at Waterville, Wash., April 24th and 25th. G. P. Wiley, cashier of the Waterville Savings Bank, presided. The group includes the bankers of Douglas, Okanogan, Chelan and Grant counties.

Receives $4,000 from Failed Bank

Henry Tobin, a resident of the Soldiers' Home at Los Angeles, has received $4,000, which he lost through the failure of the Walla Walla Savings Bank in 1893 and interest from J. K. Edmiston, formerly president, now living in Egypt. Tobin chased Edmiston through the streets of Walla Walla after the bank closed, and shot at him several times with an army revolver, believing that the banker deliberately robbed him of his money.

Seattle

All of the banks of Seattle having savings departments have organized the Savings Bank Association of Seattle, said to be the only city organization of the kind. One object is to watch and initiate legislation which will be beneficial to the savings banks of the city and state. The Seattle association is designed to be the nucleus of a state organization. The officers chosen are: President, J. E. Chilberg, vice-president Scandinavian-American Bank; vice-presidents, J. H. Edwards, vice-president Washington Trust and Savings Bank, and Ralph S. Stacy, vice-president National Bank of Commerce; secretary, E. Shorrock, president Northwest Trust and Safe Deposit Company; treasurer, G. K. Betts, cashier American Savings Bank and Trust Company.

LOS ANGELES BANKS REPORT GROWTH

Practically all the national banks in Los Angeles show a gain in deposits, while the cash reserves and loans have been slightly increased. The statements made to the comptroller show that the total deposits in the national institutions at the close of business on April 18th aggregated $69,870,233. Since March 7th, last year, there has been an increase of $14,181,170. The increase over the total on February 20th is $7,798,161, and the gain over the total for December 5th is $10,581,359. The loans and discounts on April 18th were $46,803,010. This is an increase of $10,748,183 in the loans, compared with the statement for March of last year, and the total is $2,725,384 greater than on February 20th. The cash items show that the reeserves of the national banks aggregate $29,439,920, which is $5,004,236 more than the total for March 7th, last year. The increase in cash reserves compared with the statements in February aggregate $4,010,508.

SAN FRANCISCO BANK MERGER

Formal announcement has been made of the consolidation of the Merchants National Bank with the Western Metropolis National Bank. The new institution will have a capital stock of $1,500,000, and deposits of more than $6,000,000. The shareholders of each bank will retain their proportion of the capital stock of the consolidated bank, and the directorate will be increased to take on directors from both banks. It is understood that Alfred M. Meyerstein, president of the Western Metropolis National Bank, will be the president of the merged institution, and its cashier will be W. W. Jones, now cashier of the Merchants National Bank.

Plans are being discussed looking toward the merger of the Marine Trust and Savings Bank with the Fugazi Banca Popolare Operaia Italiana, but nothing definite has been arranged.

The State Bank of Rock Valley, Ia., has increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $35,000.

NORTH CENTRAL WASHINGTON BANKERS LEAGUE

At Waterville, Washington, on April 24th and 25th convened the second annual meeting of the North Central Washington Bankers League. The convention was held in the Masonic Club rooms and was a success in every respect.

In attendance were the following bankers: O. M. Green, Exchange National, Spokane; P. M. Snider, Commercial, Okanogan; A. Kirkpatrick, Mansfield State, Mansfield; H. T. Jones, Hartline State, Hartline; Frank D. Case, Columbia Valley, Wenatchee; E. F. Stowell, Cashmere State, Cashmere; J. L. Mohundro, state bank examiner; Geo. R. Gangler, Tumwater Savings, Leavenworth; W. D. Vincent, Old National, Spokane; E. V. Klein, Traders National, Spokane; Thos. H. Brewer, Fidelity National, Spokane; W. L. Day, D. S. Thompson, Geo. Kincaid and A. B. Dorsey, of the Waterville Savings Bank, Waterville. In addition were many active local members of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union.

Contributing largely to the success of the convention was the presence of several Spokane bankers who took an active part in the various programs and discussions. The attendance of Seattle bankers was noticeably lacking. Aside from banking matters in general, the chief topic of discussion at the different meetings was the "back to the farm" movement including agricultural and vocational training for the youth of the rural districts and the diversifying and intensifying of methods of farm production.

On Wednesday afternoon, April twenty-fourth, after an informal gathering, the convention was called to order by Geo. P. Wiley, president of the league, at 3:00 p. m. The address of welcome for the town of Waterville was delivered by Attorney Arthur McGuire, which was responded to by Geo. R. Fisher, cashier of the First National, Wenatchee. Letters of congratulation and encouragement received from A. S. Burrows, superintendent of schools, King county, and P. C. Kauffman, secretary Washington State Bankers Association, were read. A. L. Rogers, member of the Country Life Commission and member of board of regents, State University, read a very able paper on the subject of agricultural and vocational training in the rural schools. Louis Delivuk of Quincy discussed the "Banker's Relation to the Marketing of Grain," followed by a very pointed and eloquent address

Des Moines, May 2.—All records were broken for increase in the deposits of the state and savings banks and trust companies of Iowa as shown by the reports for the condition on April 3d which have just been compiled by the state banking department. In the ten months from May 29, 1911, to April 3d this year the deposits increased $23,161,578.29. This is declared to be the greatest gain ever shown in a ten months' period. The deposits increased $7,746,793.75 between the calls of February 7th and April 3d. This is also regarded as a fine showing. The reserve in the meantime is held at 3 per cent above that required by law. There are 720 savings banks, 282 state banks, and 14 trust companies, and the average reserve is 21.5. The undivided profits also show a first-class increase. The total amount which the depositors of Iowa have in three classes of Iowa institutions is $272,091,110.71. The figures showing the changes in conditions as compared to the preceding statement and with that of May 29th last year are as follows:

Des Moines National Banks

If the condition of the national banks in Des Moines is any criterion, the national bank deposits have averaged about the same between the bank call issued earlier in the year and that calling for conditions on April 18th. Of the four national banks in Des Moines, two show an increase in deposits, and two show a decrease. The condition of deposits in the four institutions at Des Moines is as follows: Citizens National, April 18th $2,045,632.32; preceding call $2,120,773.78. Des Moines National, April 18th, $5,965,935.65; preceding call

$5,735,935. Valley National, April 18th, $2,536,773.18; preceding call $2,486,832.45. Iowa National Bank, April 18th, $7,600,000; preceding call $7,798,000.

Will Realize Thirty Cents on the Dollar

It is thought that the depositors in the Citizens Bank at Story City will realize about thirty cents on the dollar following the disappearance of the cashier, M. V. Swan, and the subsequent closing of the institution. A hearing was held in Des Moines before Referee in Bankruptcy French last week. S. R. Corneliusen, a business man at Story City, was named trustee to sell the entire estate of the president of the institution, John Swan, father of the missing cashier. It is known that the entire fortune of the father will be far from ebbing enough to make good the losses of the depositors for the son took every available asset with him, including the cash at hand, with the exception of some small change. The elder Swan is crushed, and it is predicted that his health will fail rapidly since his desertion and enforcement into bankruptcy. In an earlier letter, the story of the escape of the cashier was told, his desertion of a wife three days before she was to give birth to a child, and of his efforts to borrow money throughout Iowa upon the bank's securities. For downright "cussedness" Young Swan has not been exceeded in Iowa in many years.

Capture Notorious Forger

The Burns Detective Agency and officers of the Iowa Bankers Association were successful in effecting the capture of Fulton C. Van Camp, alias C. J. Nelson, alias William Gallo-way, alias G. A. Work, etc., who was picked up at Hot Springs last week. Van Camp et al. is wanted in many places over the country, and it is probable that he will never be brought to trial in Iowa, where he is wanted for carrying out some smooth forgery projects. Van Camp came to Des Moines several years ago with a remarkable story from California. He declared that he had murdered his wife because of her unfaithfulness, but that he had been acquitted, and wanted to start in anew. He had recommendations on some of Luther Burbank's letter heads, and claimed to be an expert gardener. He was given a position, and was doing well until he suddenly turned up missing, and the next heard of him was when two checks turned up on the Citizens National of Des Moines with forged signatures. Van Camp was again heard from at Waterloo, and again at Algona, and forged checks followed his appearance in both cases. The Iowa Bankers Association was notified, and Secretary Hall came within a few minutes of getting his man at Algona.

izers of the Mahaska County State in 1883, and was cashier of the institution for many years until forced to resign because of ill health. Mr. Barnes had filled many responsible positions in his life. He was county treasurer, county commissioner, member of the school board, and filled other offices in the earlier days. He came to Iowa in the early days, and in 1850 began a mercantile business at a town named Rochester on the Des Moines River. The funeral was held April 24th.

New Means of Forgery

Here is a new idea in the way of a forgery. In September two years ago, a Greek deposited a small amount of money in a bank at Jamaica. When his certificate of deposit was handed him, a blank slip was torn off by accident. The slip was missed because each was numbered, but it was thought that the printer had made a mistake. The incident was forgotten until the other day, a year and a half later, the certificate showed up filled out for $410.50, and signed by the president of the bank in a manner that the president would never recognize as his own signature. The deposit slip had been cashed, but it is not known by whom.

Black Hand Scare at Seymour

Seymour, Iowa, has had a black hand scare that appears to be related in some way to the failure of the Farmers and Drovers Bank there some time ago. It seems that many letters have been received, but when Mr. O. A. Cover received one threatening the life of his little child unless he would place a sum of money at a certain place, the case was turned over to the postoffice department. It was discovered that the letters were being mailed on the train. But evidently the sender grew suspicious for shortly before the postal inspectors reached the city, the person under suspicion left Seymour.

Iowa Banking Notes

Officers have been chosen for the new bank which opens at Woden with a capital stock of $15,000. A. C. Ripley, representative in the legislature from Hancock county, is president; F. M. Hanson is vice-president, and J. J. Cosgrove is cashier. It is expected to open the institution, May 15th.

Ernest R. Moore, well-known Cedar Rapids banker, has made formal announcement of his candidacy for national republican committee-man from Iowa to succeed E. E. Hart of the First National at Council Bluffs. John T. Adams of Dubuque is also a candidate.

The directors of the First National at Davenport have declared a semiannual dividend of 5 per cent. It was payable May 1st.

A. B. Leach & Co. of Chicago successfully bid in the refunding bonds of \$147,500 issued by the Des Moines school board. The company pays a premium of \$3,425. The bonds bear $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

According to reports in Des Moines, Thos. Lockman has purchased a controlling interest in the Albia State at Albia.

G. W. Hammond has been chosen cashier of the Citizens Savings at Dallas Center.

The Gravity Bank at Gravity has changed hands, and will be known hereafter as the Gravity State. Thomas H. Read is president; C. B. Baily, vice-president, and J. N. Banks, cashier.

The Farmers Savings at Guthrie Center has opened its doors. The officers are H. A. Elliott, president; A. L. Hager, president Commercial Savings, Des Moines, vice-president; A. H. Sayre, for nine years treasurer of Guthrie county, is cashier.

The Citizens National at Cedar Falls is in its new quarters. This is one of the finest bank buildings in Iowa, modern, up to date, and thoroughly equipped. The bank was opened with a reception, and a stream of pleased visitors passed in and out all day.

The German Savings at Melvin is a new institution. The capital stock is $20,000. Geo. Schee is president, and G. A. Schee is cashier.

President Carskadden of the Muscatine Savings at Muscatine has retired from active service in the management of the institution after many years. He is a partner of Congressman I. S. Pepper, and the latter's business in congress has caused Mr. Carskadden to keep too busy to devote the attention to the bank that it requires.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

Slightly more deposits and slightly less available cash is indicated by the national bank statements of this city for the close of business April 18th, as called for by the comptroller. The available cash totaled $5,277,465.83, as compared to $5,746,101 at the last preceding statement; while the deposits amounted to $14,649,706.10, as compared to $14,282,356. Itemized, the banks made showings as follows:

J. F. Toy Back from California

James F. Toy, president of the Farmers Loan and Trust Company, has returned after a winter spent in California. He has resumed his duties at the bank, delighted to get back to Iowa. Mrs. Toy will remain in Los Angeles until June. Mr. Toy has decided he prefers his home state, despite the fact that southern California is having a wonderful growth, and land values are "out of sight" as compared with those of Sioux City.

Appointed Trustee of Failed Bank

S. R. Cornellsusson, a retired business man of Story City, Iowa, has been appointed by the referee as trustee to sell the property of the failed Story City private bank, of which the aged John Swan is president. The bank, owing to the defalcation of the cashier, will not nearly pay its creditors in full.

A Narrow Escape

Charles Worcester, a banker of Witten, S. D., may thank his lucky stars that Dick Fool Bull, a renegade Indian, did not have a gun when he thought he had. Mr. Worcester was hitching a horse on the main street of the town, when the red skin, who has served time in the South Dakota penitentiary, and is known as a bad man as well as a dead shot, appeared on the scene drunk as a lord, and looking for gore. When he sighted Worcester, he reached for his overcoat pocket, announcing that he was going to "get" him. The gun was not there, for the reason that another Indian had robbed this fellow of it, so the gore had to go unshed.

Banking Notes of Interest

Group 10 of the South Dakota Bankers Association, at its meeting in Faulkton, S. D., elected the following officers: President, G. C. Meadows, Ipswich; vice-president, G. A. Dixon, Seneca; secretary-treasurer, G. C. Pierce, Selby.

Chris. Schmidt, Sr., father of Chris. Schmidt, president of the Blair, Neb., National Bank, was found dead in a field five miles south of Blair. He had started out with a by Prof. W. O. Dow, of Wenatchee, on the subject of intensified and diversified farming, comparing our inefficient methods with the more productive methods of Germany, France and England and calling attention to the fact that if the sum spent for the manufacture, equipment and maintenance of one battleship only were expended in the improvement of our farming methods, an agricultural experiment station could be established in every county of every state of the Union and a necessary sum provided for the maintenance thereof. After a brief discussion by W. T. Clark, of Wenatchee, on the marketing of fruit the afternoon meeting was adjourned.

In the evening a banquet was spread by the ladies of the Methodist church, after which the following program was rendered: Reading by Mrs. Jasper, of Spokane; Sleight-of-hand by E. V. Klein, of the Traders National, Spokane; address by H. G. Sampson, of Spokane.

On Thursday morning, April 25th, after a twenty-mile automobile excursion, the meeting was called to order by the president at 10:30 A. M. W. D. Vincent spoke on the "back to the farm" movement and agricultural and vocational education. Thos. H. Brewer interested his auditors by a relation of his eastern trip and the effect of the Panama Canal on the transportation and industrial problems of the Northwest. He stated that the canal would bring a great influx of immigration and tend to solve the labor question. He also spoke of the experience of eastern fruit dealers with the western apple. The eastern fruit dealer claims that the eastern apple is just as good as the western apple, but the perfection of growth and appearance which the western apple attains easily makes it the best seller, bringing as much as ten cents and even fifteen cents apiece. Charles E. Cline, of the Pullman Agricultural College, stated that the agricultural and industrial development and the problem of properly marketing farm products were the two great questions to be solved in the Northwest. W. L. Clark, of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, complimented the members of Group 1 on their enthusiastic meeting. He stated that from the standpoint of the member and from the standpoint of efficient work, the opportunities the group meetings presented to originate ideas made them an important and indispensable adjunct of the State Bankers' Association and predicted that their influence would continue to widen. At this meeting the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, E. C. Davis, cashier, Davis & Bassett, Ephrata; vice-president for Chelan county, Robt. B. Field, cashier, Leavenworth State Bank, Leavenworth; vice-president for Okanogan county, Roy Dorothy, cashier, First National Bank, Brewster; vice-president for Grant county, H. T. Jones, president, Hartline State Bank, Hartline; vice-president for Douglas county, M. E. Lies, cashier, Douglas County Bank, Waterville; secretary, E. C. Carter, assistant cashier, the Waterville Savings Bank, Waterville.

The next place of meeting was left to the executive council. Group 1 will ask for recognition on the program at the next State Bankers Association convention to be held in Tacoma and Prof. W. O. Dow, of Wenatchee, will be their orator. After adjournment A. L. Rogers presented each banker present with E. Davenport's excellent book on "Education for Efficiency."

President Hulley, of Stetson University, Before Florida Bankers

This able educator sums up the good points in the National Reserve Association plan in a most telling way. His address in part

A remark by one of your members on the floor makes it necessary for me to preface the exposition of this bill by a statement of my own position in regard to it. Dr. L'Engle, in the goodness of his heart and in all kindness, stated to you that Governor Jennings and myself are opposed to this bill. I cannot speak for Governor Jennings, but I want to emphatically correct the impression you received with regard to myself. I am heartily in favor of this bill. (Applause.)

When I first began the study of it, I saw some objectionable things in it, but on the whole it is a good bill. I am not here as an advocate of it and hold no brief for it, but would merely expound the matter as I understand it, and then leave it to you for discussion. I understand that some of you are in favor of the bill, and that some of you are opposed to it, and I also understand from some of you that you do not know anything at all about the bill. (Laughter.)

At the start we must distinguish 3 things: (1) This bill now before Congress, (2) The Report of the Monetary Commission, and (3) the work of the National Citizens' League. This bill is not Mr. Aldrich's report, but is based on it, and further this bill is not the child of the National Citizens' League, although they seem to have adopted it. The bill stands on its own merits; it has back of it, to be sure, the careful researches of the monetary commission and the wisdom of the American bankers expressed through the National Citizens' League. The latter league was organized to promote a system of sound banking and currency. It is a little like the Sound Money League of New York City. The agitation for better banking and currency laws brought about investigation, research, co-operation, and the result is this bill. It is not a perfect bill, it cannot possibly embody everybody's views, but it is the best working hypothesis before the American people to-day. I have made a chart analyzing the bill into its parts and have placed it on the wall before you to help us as we proceed. Following the divisions on the chart, we will discuss the National Reserve Association under 5 heads: (1) Its Organization; (2) Its Administration; (3) Its Functions; (4) Its Profits; (5) Its Purposes.

Organization of the National Reserve Association

As to its organization, it is to be a National Reserve Association. Those who get no further than the name imagine that it is to be a huge monopoly, an octopus. They confuse it with the Second United States Bank, which Andrew Jackson put out of business. This bill has none of the offensive features of the Second United States Bank.

This Reserve Association is to be located in Washington, the political and administrative center of the country's life, rather than in New York City, which is the financial center. This removes it from Wall Street, and indicates the purpose that runs all through the bill—to keep it away from the control of any so called money trust. The capital of the National Reserve Association is a variable quantity. It may be put approximately at three hundred million dollars. The amount will vary in proportion to the number of banks that go in. Those who enter must subscribe to the stock of the association up to 20 per cent of the capital of their own bank, no more and no less. The capital stock of the Reserve Association will, therefore, vary according to the number of those who join it. National banks, state banks and trust corporations are eligible, but none of them have to go in. Individuals cannot subscribe. Since no one knows how many banks will subscribe, no one can say what the capital stock will be. Of the amount subscribed, 10 per cent only must be paid in, the other 10 per cent represents a liability, which may never be called. It is merely a liability. Only 10 per cent of the unimpaired capital of a subscribing bank is paid into the association.

Objection might be made to locking up 20 per cent of a bank's capital in this reserve association, but the bank locks up only 10 per cent, and this is more than compensated for by the larger power of note issue, which will be given to every bank under the law. If it seems objectionable, it is not so when compared with advantages elsewhere conferred by the association, and also compared with the disadvantages of the limited note issue under the present national banking law.

One should not lose sight of the fact that this association does not take in individuals. Its stock is not transferable to individuals, nor can any bank have more or less than 20 per cent. It is a sort of bankers bank; it does not interfere with any bank's services to individual stockholders, or customers of individual banks. It is in no sense a competitor of the banks, nor is it in any sense a creature of Wall Street, nor of a money trust. It deals with all banks alike in this country. In its provisions for banking in foreign countries it does give rights to individuals.

In calling the reserve association a sort of bankers' bank, I do not mean to imply that it does all kinds of commercial banking. In one sense it is not a bank at all. It is a kind of clearing house where banks get together for mutual service.

Administration of the National Reserve Association

How is this mechanism to be worked? To begin with, every bank is to manage its own affairs just as it does at the present time. It elects its own board of directors, chooses its own officers, builds up its own list of customers, charges its own rate of interest, and performs its own local business in its own way just as at present. In none of these important things does it take orders from anybody above it. There is not anybody with any more control over it than the government exercises at the present time. A state bank going in would have to conform to the present law controlling the capitalization of a national bank; but that is to put them on a plane of equality and does not interfere with their method of doing business.

When individual banks form themselves into local associations, they control those associations; they elect the directors and make the by-laws of the local association. The little and the big banks all have an equal voice in the selection of three-fifths of the directors of the local association and in the selection of the other two-fifths they vote in proportion to their size—the bigger the bank the more votes it has for the reason that it has more capital at stake. All the directors of the local association will thus be composed as the Congress of the United States is. In the senate the big and the little state are equally represented. In the house, the bigger the state in population the bigger its representation. But every bill to become a law must go through the two houses. You can apply this analogy to the three-fifths and the two-fifths of the local association.

I might say that the bill takes precaution to prevent the formation of a bank's monopoly, or a politician's monopoly, or, in other words, it aims to democratize the institution. It safeguards the business, industrial and commercial interests of the country by requiring that the directors shall not be merely bankers; and in some respects it keeps out the politicians altogether.

Just as the individual banks control the formation and the elections of the local association, and just as the local association controls the election of directors of the districts, so now the districts control the election of the board of directors of the National Reserve Association itself.

The Functions of the National Reserve Association

We must not dwell any longer on the structural form of the association. An analysis of it ought to kill any bogies in our minds in regard to centralization. We pass now to the consideration of its functions.

In the first place it is to act as the fiscal agent of the United States government. That does not put it in politics, as the captious critic objects. The United States will bring its deposits from the treasury to this association in its various branches. The government will make its disbursements through this bank and its branches. Government bonds and securities will be handled by this association. In addition, it shall be the fiscal agent of the banks in its membership. It will not pay interest on deposits, neither will it prohibit its members from depositing elsewhere where they can get interest. It will act as reserve agent. It will act as a clearing house. It will guarantee the credit of its members. All of these things it will do under safeguards and limitations, consistent with security. The new Reserve Association may purchase prime bills, and bonds, and gold and silver, checks and bills of exchange, not as a competitor, but as a co-operating agency of the banks. It makes a special provision for any of its banks to open up banking accounts in various countries and to establish agents abroad. This is needed to bring to America some of the world's trade which we are losing.

The Profits of the National Reserve Association

Those who fear the central bank monopoly idea such as Andrew Jackson hit in the Second Bank of the United States, would do well to compare that bank with this association. That was a bank, this is an association; that bank was run for profit, this association for the convenience of its members; that bank made its stockholders rich, this association aims to make conditions right all over the country, making it possible for the whole country to prosper without the danger of panics, and without barriers in the way of legitimate progress. This association aims to earn a small dividend for its shareholders, and turns all other profits over to the general government.

The Purposes of the National Reserve Association

This head will run into that of functions somewhat. The great purposes of this association are with respect to reserves, currency, banking co-operation, the establishment of a foreign business, and the broadening of the home market. These five things will be discussed now in that order.

Taking the bill as a whole, it is a good one. Remember that no bill could meet the requirements of all persons. No one wanted the United States Constitution just as it was formed. It was a system of compromises. It is just what this bill is, a system of compromises, between the conflicting and varied ideas on the subject held by many persons. It is the best thing, however, on the subject that has been submitted to the American people since the Civil War. Many minor qualifications of the bill I have omitted in the discussion due to lack of time. The bill is its own best commentary.

THE BEST OF THE NEW BOOKS

A book by Charles Major is an event in the literary world. His newest one (Macmillan Company, New York) is "The Touchstone of Fortune," and is rated the best yet from this gifted writer. Major knows how to turn out stories that insist upon being read, and is wise enough never to overcrowd. Several years have elapsed since the publication of the last new Major novel. Therefore, "The Touchstone of Fortune," being the "Memoir of Baron Clyde, who lived, thrived and fell in the doleful reign of the so-called merry monarch, Charles II," of England, is warmly welcomed indeed.

Like its predecessor, this long and stirring romance is built around real people—Frances and Sarah Jennings, Nell Gwynn, John Churchill and others—the crux of the plot being the sale of the city of Dunkirk to the French. A closing note admits that "Baron Clyde seems to be the only writer of the period, who mentions the part taken by the fair Frances and her ardent lover, George Hamilton, in "that disgraceful affair," and that "there appears to be some ground for the criticism" in this and kindred particulars. "But in all essential respects the baron's history is held, justly, to be true to facts and conditions," and it certainly makes good reading.

From the moment when Frances prepares to redeem the fallen family fortunes by taking service as maid of honor to the Duchess of York, wife of the heir presumptive, until the time when, Hamilton being off for France, she dares all to go with him, the reader's interest is held taut and true as a bowstring. And scarce one of the three hundred closely printed pages but is thronged with exciting incidents and scenes. "The Touchstone of Fortune" has a full measure of the charm of "When Knighthood was in Flower."

Also from the Macmillan Company comes "White Ashes," the joint work of Sidney R. Kennedy and Alden C. Nobel, in a collaboration on a big fire, and on insurance underwriting.

The hero is general agent of a New York company, the vice-president of which plays the part of a lordly villain, deserting to become president of a rival company. How the older organization is harassed and crippled; how enormous losses, due to a great conflagration, operate for its rehabilitation; the wiles and devious ways of brokers and agents and the attitude of the average insurer toward those willing, for a consideration, to assume his possible burden of loss—these are main factors in the author's elaborate attempt to infuse romance into the strictly modern process of dividing fire losses among all the members of a community.

The character types—mostly from the insurance world—are sharply drawn, with touches of realism savoring at times of pure description rather than imaginative invention. They move and aberrate largely in regions unknown to contrivers and readers of fiction. The devices they employ in plotting and counterplotting, in open action or in secret intrigue, are complicated and unfamiliar at first sight, and remain so to the end.

"The One-Way Trail," by Ridgwell Cullum, is a charming story from the George W. Jacobs Publishing Company, Philadelphia, and is the very latest romance from the cattle country. It is a tale of ranching in Montana, in which realistic descriptions of rude, wild life are assembled in a series of dramatic episodes, with the love of two men for one woman as an inspiring and dominant motive.

It is the wrong man whom the heroine has chosen, as appears later in the narrative, when the fortunate one turns cattle rustler, and his luckless rival becomes the central figure in a near-lynching party.

A sturdy, philosophic miner; a free-spoken, masterful doctor; a big rancher, with many herds; a malevolent, crippled boy, brother of the heroine; a snarling, spiteful storekeeper, with numerous minor characters peculiar to rough life in districts devoted to cattle raising—with this diversified personnel the novelist creates many vivid scenes, brightened with rough native humor and reflecting strongly the salient characteristics of western ranch life.

There is appositeness and a certain nervous strength in the contrasting types. Novelist Cullum is a master hand at this form and in this field of native fiction—and the story swings along powerfully and picturesquely to the end.

From the same publishing house (Jacobs, Philadelphia), comes "The Stake," by Jay Cady. It is a New England coast story in which there is fine local color, which relates largely to a love affair between a pretty Boston girl and a young man who has saved her from death in a storm off shore. The "stake" includes a valuable copper region in Michigan, owned by the hero, and coveted by the heroine's father. Quaint New England characters and customs are sketched in the narrative with accuracy and spirit.

From the Harper Brothers Publishing Company of New York, comes another romance, which deals with the fascinating life of a man and a woman in the far north, on the shores of Hudson Bay. It is by James Oliver Curwood, and is entitled, "The Flower of the North." Mr. Curwood's more recent successes have been "The Danger Trail" and "Philip Steele." The scene is laid in a country which the author has made attractive to thousands of readers all over the world. In former times frontier stories were laid in our own western country, but civilization has moved forward until the romantic adventures of conquest in a new country have been transferred to the wilds of the Canadian Rockies. Other writers, who have made this form of fiction attractive are Grey, Bindloss and Carleton, but it can be said truthfully that Mr. Curwood seems to get closer to nature and to give his characters the truest of adventurous spirits. Mr. Curwood himself is an adventurer and explorer, and has spent years in traveling in the very country which he so faithfully describes in his "Flower of the North." He places his hero, a young American, in charge of the interests of one of the great Hudson Bay fisheries companies, and surrounds him with an involved plot, full of intrigue and deadly peril. There are conspiracies against him at headquarters as well as dangers awaiting him in the field. He rescues his sweetheart from a band of desperadoes and defeats his opponents, winning in the end the heart and hand of the mysterious girl, who figures in so many thrilling episodes. The price of the book at all book stores is $1.30 net.

From the author of the "Colonel of the Red Hussars" and "Beatrice of Clare" we have a splendid new volume entitled "The Last Try." This is rated one of John Reed Scott's very strongest efforts, even surpassing the "Princess of the Dehra." The scene of this strong attractive novel is in Valeria, Mr. Scott's land of romance, and the scene of nearly all of his other fiction successes. It is a charming and captivating romance, and remains fascinating until the end. The dialogue is lively and sprightly and compares favorably with the author's best work. In the matter of incident every care has been taken to bring out all of the mystery, romance, love and beauty, which abound in bewildering profusion. There are dukes, kings, court ladies and court jesters in great plenty. The ending is in Mr. Scott's happiest vein, and will be entirely satisfactory to his large army of readers. The book is beautifully illustrated, and splendidly bound. It is published by J. B. Lippincott Company of Philadelphia, at $1.25 net.

The Guaranty State Bank of Hooks, Bowie county, Texas, has been incorporated by E. L. King, J. W. Smith, J. W. Stewart and others.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safeguard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

ROBERT T. LINCOLN CORRECTS ROOSEVELT

Newark, N. J., April 29.—"My personal feelings," writes Robert T. Lincoln to President Taft, "are unimportant, but I am not only impatient, but indignant that President Lincoln's words and plain views should be perverted and misapplied before trusting people into support of doctrines which I believe he would abhor living."

Mr. Lincoln's letter was written, he says, in answer to a request for an opinion of "repeated assertions by Mr. Roosevelt that his attitude on certain radical doctrines is supported by the recorded views" of the martyred president, his father.

Mr. Lincoln in his letter says:

"The government under which my father lived was, as it is now, a republic or representative democracy, checked by the constitution, which can be changed by the people, but only when acting by methods which compel deliberation and exclude, so far as is possible, the effect of passionate and short sighted impulse.

"A government in which the checks of an established constitution are actually or practically omitted—one in which the people act in a mass directly on all questions, and not through their chosen representatives—is an unchecked democracy—a form of government so full of danger, as shown by history, that it has ceased to exist, or exists in communities small and concentrated as to space. A New England town meeting may be good, but such a government in a large city would be chaos.

"He (Abraham Lincoln) loved the government under which he lived, and when at Gettysburg he prayed (if I may use that word) that a government of the people, by the people, and for the people may not perish from the earth, he meant, and could only mean, that government under which he lived, a representative government of balanced executive, legislative and judicial parts, and not something entirely different—an unchecked democracy.

"These often quoted words of President Lincoln are now deliberately altered and argument founded on their altered form. I may be permitted to say that I do not think the public wishes the Gettysburg speech to be rewritten and its words changed by any one, however distinguished, for any purpose, least of all in order to support a proposition that President Lincoln could not possibly have had in mind."

NEW YORK BANK MERGER

Announcement has been made of the conclusion of negotiations for the absorption of the Gallatin National Bank by the Hanover National Bank. Deposits of the Hanover National are around $100,000,000, and its capital and surplus $16,500,000. The Gallatin's capital is $1,000,000, its surplus 2,000,000, and its gross deposits around $10,000,000. In connection with the proposed absorption of the Gallatin National Bank by the Hanover National Bank a special meeting of the stockholders of the Gallatin National has been called for May 27th to approve a resolution for the voluntary liquidation of the bank.

MINNESOTA BANK ORDERED CLOSED

Winnebago City, Minn., May 2.—The Bank of Commerce of this city was closed to-day by the state bank examiner and accountants are at work on the books. H. W. Parker, vice-president of the institution, is said to have left the city suddenly on Friday. It is reported he cashed a Bank of Commerce draft of $2,000 at another bank before going. Until the accountants report, it will not be known whether a shortage exists. The bank is capitalized at $20,000, has a surplus of $3,000 and deposits of $210,000.

PROMINENT PHILADELPHIA BANKER DIES

James H. Ritter, president of the Chelton Trust Company of Philadelphia, died on Monday of this week. He was fifty-three years old. Prior to his taking the presidency of the Chelton Trust upon its organization in 1906, Mr. Ritter was president of the Biddle Hardware Company, and of the Hardware Dealers Association. He also was president for many years of the Credit Men's Association. Mr. Ritter was a public-spirited citizen, taking a deep interest in civic matters.

AMERICAN LIBERTY AND PROPERTY ASSOCIATION

New York and New England manufacturers and business men have organized the American Liberty and Property Association, advocating self-help versus state help. It is to be a non-partisan organization for the upholding of property rights, maintaining the freedom of contract, and restricting paternalistic legislation. Robert Schalkenbach is chairman of the executive committee. Headquarters have been established at 29 Broadway, New York, where statistics are being collected and literature prepared for circulation, which is to combat the growth of socialism in the United States.

CINCINNATI BANKER HELD

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 2.—E. E. Galbreath, former president of the Second National of this city, was arrested here to-day by a United States marshal on a charge of misapplying the funds of the bank.

The warrant for Galbreath's arrest charged him with having wilfully and unlawfully misappropriated funds of the bank to the amount of $33,000.

He pleaded not guilty to the charge and waived examination. Bond was fixed at $15,000.

NEW BANK OPENED IN INDIANAPOLIS

The Marion County State Bank, the youngest financial institution in Indianapolis, closed its first day's business at eight o'clock on May 1st, with a record far in excess of the volume of business the officers had expected to transact. The opening day was a combination of business and pleasure, the officers forming a receiving line to greet the visitors. Souvenirs, flowers and cigars were given the callers.

The bank officers are: President, B. D. Brooks; vice-president, J. M. Gaston; cashier, John L. Duvall, and assistant cashier, Clarence C. Deupree. The directors are: Ora Powell, J. M. Gaston, B. D. Brooks, Everitt L. Deupree, and John L. Duvall.

Interest will be paid on time deposits. The bank is capitalized for $25,000.

BANK ROBBERS GET MONEY

Hammond, Ind.—Bank robbers hacked their way into the First National Bank of Dwyer, seven miles below this city, shortly after midnight last Saturday morning, and cleaned out the contents of the cash drawer, taking a sum of money, the amount of which the bank officials refuse to make public. They were frightened away while in the act of dynamiting the steel vault, leaving their tools and explosives on the floor. Had they blown the safe, $50,000 in cash awaited them.

New York.—The report compiled by the state banking department for the week ending April 27th shows total deposits of state banks outside of Greater New York to be $111,577,000, a decrease of $820,300.

the banking business in the metropolis. Those who knew him out west believed that he could do it, and he has made good.

IT has been arranged that those who reach Briarcliff Lodge in advance of the big Chicago special train will have special notice of its arrival time. This will be attended to by the railway company so that there will be no delay whatever, when the members of council disembark at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson.

LATE reports from Briarcliff indicate that the golf course is in first class condition, and that the members taking their clubs along will not be disappointed. Recent photographs taken of the course show that it is one of the most attractive in the country.

THOUGHTFUL endeavor and service upon equitable terms are reflected in almost 50 per cent increase in the business of this bank during the past three years.—National Stockyards National Bank.

NATIONAL CITY BANK of this city invites "bankers and individual depositors to confer with its bond department in regard to the purchase or sale of securities. The bank carries a list of high-grade bonds, which have been purchased primarily for its own investment, and have passed the scrutiny of its careful investigation. The department gives special attention to the business of those who are unable to keep in close touch with the security markets, and who seek an unbiased recommendation in regard to their investments."

THE tabulation of the condition of the twenty-eight national banks of Pittsburgh, as published in response to the call of the comptroller of the currency, discloses a new high record for deposits, eclipsing that of last September by nearly $3,000,000.

WITHIN the past year deposits in the Pittsburgh national banks have increased over $6,000,000, and within the past sixty days $4,000,000.

THIS reflection of the improvement in industry and business in that district is most gratifying. The aggregate deposits of the national banking institutions included is $218,200,000, an impressive exhibit of the prosperity of the people of Pittsburgh.

SECRETARY KEYSER has sent us a green sunflower with bronze seal of the state in the center. It can be used by careless persons as a pen wiper, but is pretty enough for a souvenir of the Joplin convention, for which it will be used.

YARDE, OTIS & TAYLER, Chicago investment bankers, are sending out an individual signature blotter of rare beauty. An order for a few thousands of municipals will open negotiations for one.

FARMERS NATIONAL BANK of Hillsboro, Texas, is the oldest bank in Hill county. At the last call it showed deposits of $216,916.63. The capital stock of the bank is $50,000, and it has a surplus fund of the same amount. The bank states that its best efforts will be directed toward improving the service in every way to the end that those favoring it with their patronage may feel and know that their banking connection is dependable, and can be relied upon in hard times as well as in good. It has no public funds on deposit. W. M. Williams is president, and W. L. Embree is cashier.

THE executive committee of the Urbana-Champaign educational conference is hard at work in the preparation of a draft of a new educational bill affecting schools proposed to be established in Illinois. It is expected that the educators and bankers composing the committee will reach a satisfactory conclusion, and that the proposed bill will be decided upon in plenty of time for consideration at the state convention to be held at Peoria on September 25th and 26th.

J. FLETCHER FARRELL, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National, and treasurer of the American Bankers Association, has sent out a letter to each non-member bank in Illinois inviting it to become a member of the A. B. A. W. E. Turner of Taylorville, W. F. Schaeffer of Elkhart, and O. H. Wright of Belvidere are other members of the Illinois bankers executive council who have promised to co-operate in the matter of promoting this membership campaign. Robt. R. Ward, vice-president of the Benton State Bank; Frank G. Hudson, cashier of the First National at Charleston, and E. E. Crabtree of Jacksonville also have promised to assist in the matter.

HOMER A. MILLER, president of the Iowa National, and of the Des Moines Savings Bank, also is a director of the Equitable Life Insurance Company with headquarters at Des Moines. He speaks in glowing terms of the solid condition of this company and its management.

WILLIAM A. GIBSON, who so long and loyally supported the Chicago Association of Commerce as its executive secretary, now is assistant secretary of the National One Cent Letter Postage Association with headquarters at Cleveland, Ohio. It is understood that this association will present its proposition to the members of the executive council of the A. B. A. at the Briarcliff meeting.

"SCHOOL NEWS AND PRACTICAL EDUCATOR," for May, published by C. M. Parker at Taylorville, Ill., and read very widely by members of the Illinois Teachers Association, contains an article on the Urbana-Champaign conference of educators and bankers from the pen of J. H. Collins, superintendent of city schools, Springfield. Mr. Collins is a member of the conference.

FIRST NATIONAL of Deadwood, S. D., sends out a first-class statement. The last call showed deposits in excess of $1,300,000, and resources of $1,766,000. N. F. Franklin, president of the bank, will make the trip to Briarcliff as a representative of South Dakota on the executive council of the American Bankers Association.

COPIES of the address of Lewis E. Pier-son, president of the Irving Exchange National of New York City, made before the Louisiana Bankers Association last month, are in circulation, and are creating favorable impression among bankers. It is expected that the address will be influential in bringing additional pressure to bear on the members of the committee on interstate commerce of the senate which is considering the Clapp-Stevens bill bearing on the subject of bills of lading.

FIRST NATIONAL of Minneapolis mailed out a series of postal cards on the subject of the American Bankers Association travelers' checks on April 13th, containing a splendid photographic reproduction of the monster steamship "Titanic." The singular part of it is that the one mailed to Walter Douglas, a director in the bank, and who perished on the ill-fated ship, was delivered to his Minneapolis address on the very day that the boat went down.

A WIRELESS from New York tells us that George E. Allen of the Institute will speak on the subject of "Agricultural Education" at the Buffalo convention of the New York bankers on June 14th.

THIS is served as fair notice that Joseph Chapman, Jr., "isn't the only hayseed" on the list of eligibles in the way of "farmer" convention talks.

IT will be remembered that the directors of the New York Bankers Association arranged the program so that a "restful trip to the Falls" will be taken right after Mr. Allen's effort.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS, head of the biggest bank in America, is to speak at this convention on Thursday morning, June 13th. He has been allowed to choose his own subject and on one will be surprised if he refers indirectly to the matter of banking reform.

INDIANAPOLIS has had another important bank consolidation whereby the Indiana National takes over the Capital National, all to be under the presidency of Frank D. Stalnaker. Secretary Andrew Smith of the Indiana Bankers Association will be active vice-president of the combined institutions. The consolidation will give Indianapolis another bank of first-rank importance.

WE learn from Waterville, Wash., that those who heard A. L. Rogers, member of the board of regents of Washington University and member of the Country Life Commission, at the recent meeting of bankers, found that a new speaker of rare qualities on agricultural subjects has been discovered. The attention of state secretaries is called to this fact. The North Washington State League of Bankers will print Mr. Rogers' initial address in pamphlet form for distribution. Copies may be had by addressing George P. Wiley, cashier of the Waterville (Wash.) Savings Bank.

At Briarcliff

This was essentially a reform session of the Big Council. The "hang on" committee system of doing the work of the association was abolished. Councilmen will do the work hereafter. General Counsel Paton was raised to equal rank with the General Secretary Farnsworth. Committeemen hereafter must pay their own expenses, just as the famous Chapman agricultural committee has been doing. Some of the wiser committees saw the storm-cloud at a distance and resigned.

First Day's Session

The chairman of the finance committees of the house of representatives and the senate and the speaker of the house were told in dispatches that the executive council of the American Bankers Association, in session at Briarcliff Lodge, had unanimously indorsed the bills now pending in congress favoring the study of farming conditions throughout the country. This resolution was adopted at the meeting:

Whereas, At least twenty state bankers associations in as many different states are appointing or have appointed committees working for agricultural development and education, and

Whereas, The American Bankers Association, comprising 12,500 banks, has shown its deep interest in agriculture and these efforts in its behalf by appointing a standing committee on agricultural development and education, and

Whereas, These committees and associations are working for the field demonstration bills now before congress; now therefore

Resolved, That the executive council of the American Bankers Association hereby recommend to the congress of the United States now in session the adoption of legislation and liberal appropriations in such work.

The council was in session throughout the day. Nearly every member was present, and sat patiently through the proceedings, because there was no inducement to venture forth in the rain-soaked country.

A committee was named to formulate plans for submission to the national convention of the association in the fall to make all of the laws relating to trust funds and estates uniform.

Pierre Jay, chairman of the law committee, submitted an extensive report asking all banks to express an opinion on the subject of providing legislation to restrict the investment of savings bank deposits to certain specified securities. This report evoked much debate. The report was tabled, but it will be taken up again at the national convention.

But the greater part of the day's work was devoted to discussing the report of the committee on agricultural and financial development and education. There was no dissenting voice against the proposal that the bankers ought to take an active interest in teaching the farmers the very best methods of cultivating their farms, and how to rotate in crops so as to make the soil yield the greatest harvests, and in the general education of the youth, so that they might grow into good farmers.

Mr. Wakefield will visit San Antonio, Fort Worth, Dallas and Tulsa, and expects to be back in Chicago on May 12th.

TEXAS BANKERS ENDORSE CURRENCY BILL

San Antonio, Texas, May 9.—After a spirited fight to-day the Texas Bankers Association refused to endorse the stand of the Texas delegation in congress in its opposition to the Monetary Reserve Association plan, and adopted resolutions favoring the passage of that measure.

Galveston was selected as the next meeting place and the following officers were elected:

BANKERS RETURN FROM BRIARCLIFF

C. H. McNider, president of the First National Bank of Mason City, Iowa, stopped off at Chicago on his way back from Briarcliff where he has been attending the sessions of the executive council of the A. B. A. Mr. McNider reports that the outlook for good crops in his state is very encouraging. Geo. B. Caldwell, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial Trust, also has returned to the city, while George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National, is expected back the first of the week.

MONEY SITUATION

Country banks seem to be easy. A fair amount of commercial paper is being bought, the rates for same having a tendency towards greater ease. It is difficult to get good material above 4 per cent. Favorable conditions prevail in country banks despite the unfavorable reports which have come from the winter wheat fields. Out-of-town correspondents advise that in many cases the fields have been ploughed and seeded with corn and oats.

NEW CHICAGO BANK AUTHORIZED

State Auditor McCullough has issued a permit to H. L. Thornburgh, Lathrop Lee Brown, and Guy M. Blake for the organization of the Jackson Trust and Savings Bank, with a capital stock of $200,000, and a charter tenure of ninety-nine years.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

BRIARCLIFF special pulled out of Chicago on time, over the Lake Shore, in personal charge of George Thompson, the man who put the "Century Limited" permanently on the railroad map of his country.

EVERYTHING came off beautifully as planned, and every compartment was taken, most of them "doubly" so. The dining car man was on the train and "on the job" so that the double diners gave out good eats and good cheer as they can do under the direction of the master.

WHILE the special left immediately behind the Century, it was slowed down to let on Detroit bankers at Toledo at a convenient hour for dinner with the bunch. J. H. Johnson had his appetite with him as agreed upon in advance.

CAPTAIN and Mrs. Livingstone joined us at Toledo. The honored president of the A. B. A. is a jolly traveler and almost as good a story teller as G. M. himself.

IT is "Mr. Reynolds" at the bank, the clubs and around the earth, even with emphasis on the "Mister," but on a bankers' special he is "George," and the distinguished chairman of the "Big Council" is plain "Arthur."

AT the last moment Charley Batcheller of Fargo and E. J. Bowman of Anaconda had to cancel, and every one on the train felt the loss of their companionship.

GOLF clubs were in every hand. One might think the banker cancels checks with a niblick and clips coupons with a brassie. Right here drop a tear for one of the best of the long drivers—J. A. Lewis, St. Louis. He couldn't get to go, but kept trying up to the last.

J. S. POMEROY, cashier of the Security National up at Minneapolis, likely will be made a candidate for vice-president of the Minnesota Bankers Association at the coming convention by his friends. The bankers pretty generally throughout the state are lending their support to Mr. Pomeroy. This we learned in the interval between games of bridge in the buffet. No, won't tell who had time to tell it.

SECRETARY W. C. MACFADDEN telegraphed the "special" not to forget his convention at Jamestown, N. D., on June 19th and 20th. He promises a fine program and a good time to all who come.

EVERY one missed F. O. Watts. When one becomes "a promotor" and does big things for his city there comes a time when, as they say in the melodrama, he must sign the papers. Mr. Watts sold everything but the "Blue Sky" in and around Nashville to the Bylesby Company, and had to go to New York on Friday last to complete the deal.

MRS. N. F. HAWLEY went along so that she could visit a son at school up in the Adirondacks. Mr. Hawley is as enthusiastic in association matters as any of his Minneapolis brethren and enjoys the work.

IT was a tussel for Nelson H. Greene of Mo-line to get to go, but N. H. Lampert having strayed away with the Masons to California it was up to Nelson to help Edens make good.

E. R. GURNEY, Nebraska, always takes "mother" along, that being his affectionate title for the charming Mrs. Gurney. She enjoys such trips, but this time, owing to the threatened illness of his two-year-old daughter, felt obliged to remain at home.

B. F. Harris was on board, not as president of the Illinois association nor as the John the Baptist of bank supervision in the state, but as a fellow hayseed with Chapman, Curtin, etc., on the agricultural committee. He is amazed at the action of the city council of Chicago, in its attempt to establish supervision (police regulation) of banking. He hopes that it will help, not hinder, the general movement.

SOLOMON A. SMITH was on his maiden trip as a part of the trust company section. Both he and Mrs. Smith seemed to fit in well and to enjoy every social and business feature at the beautiful resort.

OLIVER C. FULLER, Milwaukee, was doing a double-play. He had a front seat at the trust company section banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria, as well as important duties at the Lodge.

WE hear that the score was a tie when the Bridge delegation from the Twin Cities reached the Chicago River. Don Culver, who generally "pays" when he travels with Orde and Chapman, made money by not being along.

P. W. GOEBEL of K. C. and Governor Bailey of Atchison matched up well. They were in the very middle of the car and had many callers.

JOHAN L. HAMILTON had to pay excess baggage on his report on fidelity and surety rates, etc. Clay Hollister sent on the B. of L. report by freight.

G. B. CALDWELL, in charge of the infant investment section, had several active aids. D. Arthur Bowman, St. Louis, Charles Counselman and F. R. Fenton were among the most active of the crusaders.

GRAND TREASURER J. FLETCHER FARRELL bore his honors and responsibilities meekly. Between ourselves (outre nous, as Fletcher would say) when it comes to digging up and putting over little schemes, well, he's the goods.

EBERHARD FABER, the man who makes the lead pencils, was of the pleasant company, going back to New York as the train guest of C. G. Hutcheson of Kansas City.

E. L. JOHNSON and C. G. McNider, Iowa, of amendment-to-the-constitution fame, were on board. They didn't talk shop but promise to make even more trouble at Detroit than was possible at New Orleans.

SOL. WEXLER and the beautiful Mrs. Wexler, New Orleans, went direct after all. Probably Sol. was afraid somebody might introduce him to Hollister whom everybody who was at N. O. thought to have been harshly treated in his absence.

WHEN Andrew J. Frame was asked if he'd be willing to double up with some good fellow, he said, "Yes, I'm not afraid to room with any banker who isn't afraid to room with me." He thus took in the tawney-bearded Kauffman of Tacoma and both were happy over the plan.

THE committee on agriculture held an overflow meeting at Briarcliff, for so many of the state associations are intending to take up the work. Mr. Chapman was "Farmer Joe" to everybody, and it was quite the thing to talk farming in the lobby.

CHAMBERLAIN of Texas, member of the committee, is in Europe investigating the various systems in use over there for financing the farmer at low rates, and on easy terms. Mr. Chamberlain had written to each member of the committee in a very enthusiastic tone. All the bankers present believe in the adoption of some such system here.

THE committee on amendments to the constitution composed of such men as McNider, Teter, McDougal Robinson, and others attracted great interest owing to the rumor that important changes will be recommended. That committees are too numerous, too large, and that they hang on to the expense account too long was the new gospel.

ANOTHER new thing was an Illinois boom for Ralph C. Wilson to be secretary of the Illinois Bankers Association. He seemed to have many friends in the Illinois crowd.

BRIARCLIFF LODGE was commended by the ladies present as well as by the bankers, as one of the best conducted hotels, ideally located and built, that the whole country affords. Manager Matthews was on the job early and late, and made many lasting friends.

M. P. BERRY, Carthage, Ill., carried the greetings of his state to the Oklahoma convention, and incidentally got in a few licks

THE LIVE STOCK Exchange National BANK
OF CHICAGO

C. A. Sandford on Conscience in Banking

I hold in my hand a letter from Secretary Hoopes. He wrote it to me in answer to my letter, telling him the subject on which I had chosen to speak this morning. He says:

I have yours of the 11th, giving me the subject of your address, for which I thank you. This applied to some bankers would be, I am afraid, an unknown quantity. As long as the public don't get on to it, it is all right.

It shall be my purpose before I have done with the subject, to show you that I have a higher appreciation of Texas bankers than does your secretary. The discouraging feature is that he doubtless knows you as a whole better than I do. When I seek for an answer to the question—as to why your executive committee was so good to me—and so unkind to you—as to invite me to a place on this program, I am forced to conclude that, knowing that I belong to the militant host of country bankers, they became imbued with the same spirit that characterizes the customers of every country banker, who believe their banker can go up against any kind of a proposition. Without going into the relative merits of country banking, as compared with city banking, without undertaking to show you that the pathway of the country banker is a road strewn with roses and his life "One glad sweet song," I am going to say that we country fellows have the advantage of you city men, in that our customers believe (and we are neither so cruel nor so unsophisticated as to shatter their belief) that we know everything under the shining sun.

In my own experience I have been called upon to give advice on almost every conceivable sort of question. My opinion has been sought as to whether sweet potatoes should be planted in the light or dark of the moon. I have suggested "arrow root" as the very best thing for teething babies. I have advised that an Irish potato carried in the breeches pocket certainly would cure rheumatism. I have assured an anxious mother that there was no danger at all to Tommy, simply because Tommy had the mumps. As a writer of wills—I take off my hat only to a justice of the supreme court. For some reason—I presume it is lack of instinct—I have never yet learned to tell a girl baby from a boy baby at first glance, and as I make it a rule to go into ecstasies over every baby that brings its mother into the bank, I shall deem it a favor if any of you gentlemen who have learned the trick will tell me how it's done.

But, gentlemen, it is not through idle desire to bother him with their problems that the banker's customers seek his advice. If it were so, then often his position would be easier than he finds it to be. Men come to him seeking solution for their problems, because they recognize in him a competent source to which they may go. What the minister of the Gospel is to the moral life, the family physician to the physical life, the banker is to the financial life. I am not sure but that the banker may sometime properly take—as he often does take—the place of both minister and physician. Placed upon so high a pedestal in the estimation of his customer what of the responsibility thus thrust upon him? Can he do less than face the responsibility and accept the opportunity? From a purely business standpoint, would it be "good business" for him to do less? That bankers, as a class, occupy so high a position in the regard of their fellow men is evidenced that they, as a class, deserve to occupy the position.

Sheridan financier tells convention at San Antonio his views on "Conscience in banking." Secretary Hoopes says, "Its pretty nearly an unknown quantity," meaning, of course, in Texas

From the time when Priscilla, the Puritan maiden, and bashful John Alden walked in silence through the trackless forest to this hour of automobiles and flying machines is a long stretch. If stout-hearted old Miles Standish could have looked with prophetic eye along the track of coming years, the report made by him would have caused the heart of every man aboard the good ship "Mayflower" to swell with pride. Where then were "forests primeval," inhabited only by the brothers of Hiawatha, are now villages and towns and cities inhabited by a busy and happy people. Where then was heard only the hum of the bow, as it sped the arrow on its death-dealing mission, is now heard the hum of countless spindles. Where then the stag roamed the forest in undisturbed solitude, now the fires of many furnaces nightly light the sky. To borrow the words of a writer in a late magazine: "We have planned, we have dug, we have plowed, we have builded, we have mined, we have smelted, we have made and we have sold, we have neither inherited our wealth, nor have we laid tribute upon the weaker nations, but behold—we are the richest of all!"

And what is the purpose of all this activity? Is it that men who possess wealth should receive dividends upon it, or is it that men have been busy and are now busy supplying the needs of their fellow men, because those needs must be supplied?

It is my belief that the paying of dividends is not so important a factor in commerce as the supplying of human needs. The dividend is an incident of commerce; supplying a human need is the fact of commerce.

On this basis then banks are not maintained solely to earn dividends for stockholders, or to provide positions for officers and employees, essential as are those two factors; but the bank is maintained to promote the interests of its customers. When the conscience of the banker is quickened to the point that he recognizes that he owes an obligation, first to his customer and the public with which he transacts business, then to his stockholders, and then to himself, we shall have made a long stride to the time when panics shall have permanently become a thing of the past. Hear me, gentlemen, an awakened and quickened public conscience will not permit the destruction of an institution, or an individual, when it knows that institution or that individual stands for the public's own best good.

I am not talking to-day about what we call "common honesty" in banking—I am talking about that higher, more subtle something we call the banker's conscience. I believe that every transaction between the banker and his customer should be so conducted as that no question ever can disturb the banker's conscience. It is not possible for this to be true if only the interest of the bank has been considered. Not only is it right as between men, but it's good business, for we all recognize the fact that every business connection to be mutually satisfactory must be mutually profitable.

I have in mind a certain bank in a certain city in this state. Recently I had occasion to discuss with a well posted and thoughtful business man of that city the affairs of that bank. I asked him why the bank in question had not grown in business during the past few years, as had its competitors in the same city. Without one moment of hesitation he replied: "Because the customers of that bank believe that its officers will stay with them only so long as it is to the bank's interest to do so."

Recently I had occasion to discuss with a well known Texas business man—a man known in business circles to the entire South—two young bank men known to each of us and doing business in the city in which this gentleman lived. He does business with both men and I asked him which was coming most surely to the front in his city. "Why, Mr. A.," he said. And then he added, "Mr. A. thinks his bank should be run with due regard to the interests of its customers, but Mr. B. thinks his bank should be run solely in the interests of its stockholders." When a bank ceases to be run in the interest of its customers it in fact ceases to be run in the interest of its stockholders, because it is the customers that make the bank. Good customers are just as important as good officers, and good customers will not stay with a bank that does not consider their interests as well as its own. I did not say a bank should be run by its customers. There is quite a difference in "by" customers and "for" customers.

I believe that the banker's conscience should be such that—recognizing the far-reaching influence he wields over the minds of his fellow men—it will no more permit him to take a position on any public question that is not in line with the public good than it will permit him to remain quiet on any question affecting the welfare of his fellow men. Few bankers would willingly mislead the people of their town or community, but there are members of the profession who seemingly are burdened with the belief that their whole mission in life is to pay dividends and build up deposits.

In recent years the people of Texas have been robbed of millions of dollars by sellers of worthless stocks. The usual practice of the "Blue Sky" salesman has been to go into a town and by some means interest a banker. If he could sell or give some prominent banker just one share of stock the rest was easy. Always he suggested that the banker's bank would be the depository of his funds. He would then go to his prospective victim and relate that Mr. So and So, the banker, is a stockholder in our company. His bank is our depository. The banker's name and reputation for honesty and sound judgment and the standing of his bank made the sale. This game has been worked in every small town in this state; even the rural communities have been invaded. I know of one case where the banker got one or two shares of such stock and on the strength of this, one of his customers bought and paid for $5,000 of practically worthless stock. Right here in this beautiful city of San Antonio, almost under the shadow of the Alamo, on the spot hallowed by the blood of Bowie and Travis and their band of heroes who could meet death, but not dishonor, have been hatched some of these conscienceless robberies. The bankers of this state should rise as one man and fight this practice. No set of men in the state can so successfully combat it and no man in any community can so easily run out of town a band of these "salesmen" as can the local banker.

Second only to the stock salesman in his ability to rob the people has been the "town lot" salesman. You are all too familiar with his methods for me to take time here to describe them. He ought to work in the same gang in the penitentiary with the stock salesman. You say you are not responsible if your customers will permit some slick fellow to separate them from their money. Perhaps not, but you owe it to your customers to, by every proper means, protect them from worthless or even doubtful investments. Surely your conscience will not permit you to in any sense become a party to such schemes.

The relation between the country bank and its city correspondent should be sympathetic and confidential. If either is seeking to get the better of the other, the relation cannot long continue satisfactory—and usually the sooner discontinued the better. Mutual helpfulness with adequate compensation to each must be the basis of all such satisfactory relations. If the country bank always is looking for an opportunity to "load" the city bank and if the city bank always is looking for an opportunity to "unload" on the country bank, the end of a satisfactory business connection is in sight. If a country bank has declined an oft repeated solicitation to divide his account, as most of them have done, and has concentrated his balances in any given city with one correspondent, then that correspondent should see to it that every accommodation and facility consistent with the amount of the balance kept should be extended the country banker.

On the other hand, when a city bank has given its country correspondent the benefit of its extensive par facilities, has supplied its currency and other needs, has loaned it money when its requirements demanded it, and has performed various and sundry service for it, it seems to me it is not going too far to say that the bank manager who will then slip out of his reserve a few thousand dollars to deposit as an "inactive" balance with some other bank, offering him one per cent more interest, and doing absolutely nothing else for him, needs to have his conscience inspected by a bank examiner. Some of you may raise the question as to whether or not a bank examiner would be competent as inspector of consciences.

The prosperity of the South and West is inseparably associated with the prosperity of the farmers of the South and West. In proportion, as the farmers of these sections prosper so prospers every other department of commerce in these sections. As a citizen of the Southland, I am glad this is so, for my children and for my grandchildren is thus assured continued opportunity and the question of their peace and happiness is for them alone to determine. I am not posing as the discoverer of a new fact, or the promotor of a new thought, when I say that all permanent prosperity begins and ends with the tiller of the soil.

Up to within a decade or so ago, the average banker was a retired merchant who had conceived the idea that a bank was a respectable sort of a place in which he might spend his declining years. It was not to be expected that such a man would keep in touch with the affairs of his fellow men.

To-day most bankers are leaders in their community. They are molders of thought, of sentiment, of action. Theirs are busy lives. The hours of each day seem all too short for them to do the things that need to be done. Custodians of the savings of business men, of corporations, of widows and of orphans, there is need that their consciences should swiftly and rightly respond to each call as it comes. Happy is the banker who can retire to the seclusion of his home when the busy day is done and gather his family about him with conscience void of offense to God and man.

"And the night shall be filled with music,

And the cares that infest the day
Shall fold their tents, like the Arabs,
And as silently steal away."

CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY AGAIN APPOINTED RECEIVER

On Wednesday of this week the Central Trust Company was appointed receiver for the Postal System of Health Building, a physical culture resort at 63 East Adams Street. It is alleged by the creditors that the firm is insolvent, and unable to continue business without loss; also that there are judgments about to be levied on the property. The bonds of the receiver were fixed at $1,000. The Central Trust also has been appointed receiver for the Telepost Independent Telegraph Company. The application for a receivership was made on behalf of the employees of the company, who allege that they have not received wages which are past due. The obligations of the company in Chicago do not exceed $1,000. The bond of the Central Trust was fixed at $200.

POSTAL BANK FORGERY

The first postal bank forgery to occur in Chicago was unearthed on Monday of this week, when the postal authorities arrested William Klefisch, aged eighteen, who was endeavoring to cash three stolen certificates. The certificates were made payable to Jos. Jaeger. During the morning Mr. Jaeger reported to the postoffice authorities that his house had been robbed, and the certificates stolen. The police are endeavoring to locate the accomplices of the prisoner in the burglary. It is said that Klefisch has confessed to having been one of the perpetrators of the crime.

Railway Equipment Obligations because of their fundamental soundness have become a very popular form of investment security. They combine in a high degree the three requisites of a good investment—security, marketability, and liberal income.

AGRICULTURAL COMMITTEE AT BRIARCLIFF

A meeting of the members of the committee on agricultural and financial development and education was held on Monday in Room 233, Briarcliff Lodge, Briarcliff Manor, New York, and was called to order at ten o'clock by Chairman Joseph Chapman, Jr.

The following members were present: B. F. Harris, Champaign, Illinois; Jos. G. Brown, Raleigh, North Carolina; Edward J. Curtin, Decorah, Iowa; Joseph Chapman, Jr.; and W. G. Edens, secretary, Illinois Bankers Association Committee on Agriculture, who was selected as secretary, and Thos. B. Paton, general counsel.

The following states also were represented by those in attendance on the council meeting:

Clay H. Hollister, Grand Rapids, Michigan; George E. Allen, New York City; M. E. Ailes, Washington, D. C.; P. W. Goebel, Kansas City, Mo.; E. R. Gurney, Fremont, Nebraska; John J. Sherman, Appleton, Wisconsin; L. A. Wilson, El Reno, Oklahoma; W. C. Harris, Fulton, Missouri; Nelson H. Greene, Moline, Illinois, and Arthur H. Reynolds Des Moines, Iowa.

Chairman Chapman made a statement reviewing the work of the conference held at Minneapolis last October, and of the session of the members of the committee held at Washington on February 28th-29th, when hearings were given the members before the committee on agriculture of the house of representatives and the committee on agriculture and forestry of the United States senate.

He furthermore stated that it was his understanding that the following states have standing committees on agricultural development and education or are now considering the matter of having such committees: New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin, Nebraska, New Jersey, North Carolina, South Carolina, Washington, Idaho, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, Texas, Iowa, Illinois, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Ohio, California, Oregon, and Oklahoma.

After some discussion the chairman was authorized to wire to John W. Hoopes, secretary, Texas Bankers Association, in convention at San Antonio, sending greetings from the members of this committee, and to suggest that the Texas convention be sure to appoint a standing committee on agricultural development and education.

After remarks by many of those present, it was decided, upon motion that Messrs. Brown and Harris of the committee prepare and submit, through Chairman Chapman to the members of the executive council, appropriate resolutions touching the work of this committee.

The chairman also was authorized to communicate with certain of the members of congress and senators with respect to the legislation touching these subjects now pending before congress. Mr. Chapman stated that after a conference of many of those who will attend the second annual conference of the agricultural committee representing the various state bankers organizations, that this meeting would be held at Minneapolis on Wednesday and Thursday, August 7th and 8th.

Chairman Chapman called attention to the fact that W. D. Vincent of Spokane, Washington was unable to be present on account of business engagements: ex-Governor Myron T. Herrick of Ohio, now ambassador to France, had requested that he might continue on the committee and proposed to continue the investigations of the farmers' co-operative financial systems in vogue in France; and that Edwin Chamberlain of San Antonio, Texas, the other member of the committee, is now in Europe engaged in a like investigation.

Milton E. Ailes, vice-president, Riggs National Bank of Washington, D. C., suggested to the committee that John G. Cornwall, a prominent banker and citizen at Romney, W.

Va., and E. B. White, a leading banker and farmer at Leesburg, Virginia, would be excellent gentlemen to interest in this work for their respective states.

Respectfully submitted,

W. G. EDENS, Secretary.

INSURANCE COMMITTEE RESIGNS

The committee on Fidelity and Burglary Insurance made a final report at Briarcliff and asked to be discharged from further service. The members are: John L. Hamilton, chairman, W. P. Manly, Caldwell Hardy, Col. F. H. Fries, C. Q. Chandler, Geo. L. Ramsey, and C. L. Batcheller. The committee reached a point where its work is completed, and the council being averse to going into the insurance business, the prepared plan was not presented.

EXPRESS AND MONEY ORDER SITUATION

The committee on express companies and money orders held its sessions on Monday at Briarcliff and reported progress on all of the affairs committed to its care. The Interstate Commerce Commission is investigating the express companies along the lines requested by your committee and referred to in our former reports. The traveling check system of the American Bankers Association is growing in popular favor, and is successfully meeting the needs of the traveling public. Every month of the year 1912 has shown a large percentage of increase in sales over the same month of 1911. During the last sixty days over 550 banks have ordered the checks which have never issued them before, and others are applying for them daily. Since our last report, listing the countries where banks are selling the checks, they have been placed in a number of cities in Australia. This leaves only the continent of Africa without selling banks, and one large branch bank there is now considering the adoption of the system. The acceptance of the checks by officials of the United States government in payment of duties is proving to be a wonderful convenience to tourists and importers. Many banks are selling the checks to buyers of Canadian products to use in paying duties upon goods being brought into this country. The protection afforded by the arrangement with the Burns National Detective Agency is also turning out to be of great value, and the system as a whole is developing with great rapidity. The money order proposition is having the most careful thought of the members of the committee, and we expect to be able to close our work and make our final report to the members of the association at the Detroit convention. In this report we shall make a comprehensive statement showing the amount of money that has been spent by the committee since its appointment, and will show how the association has been benefited. AT BRIARCLIFF

One of the bills now pending in congress provides that the federal government shall appropriate $10,000 to every state that will appropriate an equal amount for the development of agricultural industry. Another measure seeks an appropriation of $3,000,000 in regular annual amounts in the various states, for the benefit of agricultural growth.

Uniform Banking Practice

Representatives of the clearing house section adopted a resolution which will be submitted to the association at its annual meeting this fall, recommending that clearing houses throughout the country report total transactions, instead of balances, as the present practice is. Individual banks now report to their respective clearing houses only checks drawn upon other institutions. Under the new system they will report checks drawn upon themselves as well.

The representatives of the trust company section have appointed a committee composed of Oliver C. Fuller, of the Wisconsin Trust Company, Milwaukee; A. A. Jackson, of the Girard Trust Company, Philadelphia, and Isaac H. Orr, of the St. Louis Trust Company, to draft a resolution, to be acted upon at the meeting of the trust company section at the association's annual meeting, recommending a uniform system of handling trust accounts.

The American Bankers Association, comprising 12,500 banks, has shown its deep interest in agriculture and has a standing committee on agricultural development and education.

Investment Bankers Excluded from A. B. A.

The feature of the final session of the American Bankers Association executive council at Briarcliff Manor on Wednesday was the adverse vote taken by the members of the council on the plan to establish a separate section of the association devoted to the interests of investment bankers.

Investment bankers interested in the success of this project have contemplated, in the event of its defeat, the formation of an independent organization, which will probably be known as the American Investment Bankers Association. The plans provide that investment bankers shall work for uniform legislation affecting securities in various states; the purification of financial advertising; the co-ordination of efforts between bankers and business interests, which would tend to prevent useless duplication of capital as well as its total loss in over-hazardous undertakings.

The safeguards thrown around the admittance of members into the proposed association are that no firm shall be admitted which has a capital of less than $25,000, or that has been in business for less than one year, and members are not to be allowed to use the name of the association for advertising purposes. The committee which will organize the new association is composed of C. T. Williams, of the Fidelity Trust Company, of Baltimore; G. R. Bowman, of St. Louis, and members of various national and state banks and investment banking firms throughout the country.

Segregation of Savings Deposits

Another feature of Wednesday's session was the failure of the executive council to adopt the recommendation of the law committee for a general discussion of the annual convention in regard to the segregation of savings deposits. As a result of the council's action, it may not now be brought up at the convention except upon a two-thirds vote of delegates present.

The committee believes that the extension of the principle of segregation is practicable in other states than those that have already adopted it, in the following cases:

1. When a majority of the bankers in a state believe that such legislation is in the interest of the banker as well as of the depositor.

2. When the law requires only those deposits to be segregated which the bankers of the state agree are typical savings deposits, namely, small, inactive, accumulating accounts, whether received against pass book or certificate.

3. When the investment section of the law is so drawn as to take money neither out of the community originating it, nor out of the channels in which it is now probably employed, but permits for the investment of savings deposits the safest loans and securities available locally.

4. When the investment section of the law gives the bankers a reasonable time, say five years, to adjust themselves to its requirements.

HARRIS TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

Harris Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago has inaugurated a new plan to stimulate a desire to save upon the part of the public. By calling at the bank anyone may get a pocket coin container free of charge. The bank suggests that the individual carry it with him all the time, save at least one coin each day and register the amount saved, and before long the depositor will have money in the bank. After one coin container is used up another may be had upon application.

TRUST COMPANY SECTION

New York, May 7.—It is announced that over 650 seats have been reserved for the second annual banquet of the trust companies of the United States, under the auspices of the Trust Company Section of the American Bankers Association, which is to be held in the grand ball-room of the Waldorf-Astoria on the evening of Thursday, May 9th. A most gratifying feature of this banquet, which distinguishes it from other bankers' dinners held yearly in New York and elsewhere, is the very large attendance of people outside of New York City. Over 50 per cent of those who have reserved seats came from other sections of the country, a casual inspection of the seating list showing thirty-six states represented.

F. H. Fries of Winston-Salem, N. C., president of the Trust Company Section, will preside as chairman, assisted by Wm. C. Poillon, vice-president Bankers Trust Company, first vice-president Trust Company Section, and F. H. Goff, president Cleveland Trust Company, chairman of the executive committee of the section.

Mayor Gaynor of New York City; Governor Baldwin of Connecticut, and former Senator Chauncey M. Depew will make addresses.

The First National of Mineola, Texas, has adopted plans for a new building which will occupy the main business corner of that town.

William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, who has been attending the sessions of the executive council of the American Bankers Association held at Briarcliff Lodge this week, has been remembering his Chicago friends with souvenir postal cards of Briarcliff Lodge and surrounding territory. Mr. Edens states that the weather has been very disagreeable, it having rained nearly every minute of the time since the arrival of the bankers. He writes under date of May 6th and 7th.

BANKERS CLUB OF ST. LOUIS TABOO ECONOMIC DISCUSSIONS AT MEETING

Two hundred bankers, among them some of the most prominent in the United States, will be guests of the Bankers Club of St. Louis for "A day in the country" at the Log Cabin Club, Saturday, May 25th. The program will include golfing, shooting and fishing and will conclude with a barbecue dinner prepared by an Indian chef.

The program, sent out yesterday, bars set speeches, public discussion of banking questions and bankers association politics, and sets forth the day will be for social purposes exclusively.

Leading bankers in fifteen towns and cities of the Mississippi Valley have been invited. They will meet twenty of the leading bankers of the country—five from Boston, five from Philadelphia and ten from New York City, all of whom have formally accepted, as follows.

Philadelphia—Albert A. Jackson, Girard Trust Company; William A. Law, First National Bank; J. R. McAllister, Franklin National Bank; L. L. Rue, Philadelphia National Bank, and E. F. Shanbacher, Fourth Street National Bank.

Boston—William A. Gaston, National Shawmut Bank; George S. Mumford, Commonwealth Trust Company; Philip Stockton, Old

Colony Trust Company; Eugene V. R. Thayer, Merchants National Bank, and D. G. Wing, First National Bank.

New York—J. S. Alexander, National Bank of Commerce; F. W. Allen, Mechanics and Metals National Bank; A. B. Hepburn, Chase National Bank; J. B. Martindale, Chemical National Bank; C. D. Thorne, National Park Bank; Clark Williams, Windsor Trust Company; William Woodward, Hanover National Bank.

The affair is the first of the kind ever attempted by the Bankers Club of St. Louis. W. W. Hoxton, secretary of the club, at the St. Louis clearing house, Third National Bank building, is in charge of the invitations.

Other officers of the Bankers Club of St. Louis who will be members of the reception committee are: Breckinridge Jones, president; Edward Whitaker, first vice-president; F. O. Hicks, second vice-president; A. O. Wilson, vice-president State National Bank, treasurer, and N. W. McLeod and H. P. Hilliard, members of the executive committee.

OUT-OF-TOWN VISITORS

In addition to the out-of-town bankers who came to Chicago to join the special train for Briarcliff, Vernon T. Barker, president of the Home Savings Bank of Kalamazoo, Mich., and E. J. Miller, cashier of the Hillsboro (Ill.) National Bank, were callers in the financial district this week.

CHICAGO BANKS AGGRESSIVE IN OB- TAINING NEW BUSINESS

That Chicago banking institutions are right up to the mark when it comes to going after new business is exemplified by the fact that recently three very large institutions of this city bid 3 per cent for the municipal funds of the city of Grand Rapids, Mich., as against 2½ per cent bid by local banks and 2 per cent by two Detroit banks.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The bankers associations of various central western states and the live financial journals have had much to say during the past two years about the agricultural resources of these states. The agricultural development of Illinois especially has been urged by the Illinois Bankers Association, and by THE CHICAGO BANKER.

Attention has not been given so much to the mineral resources of the state because the agricultural work was so important that the leaders have felt that they should not scatter their energies.

However, some idea of the vast mineral wealth of Illinois can be gained from an address by Francis Peabody, president of the Peabody Fuel Company of Chicago, delivered before the engineering students of the University of Illinois. Mr. Peabody said that the coal deposits of the state are estimated at 35,000 square miles, or 22,000,000 acres, of known coal land. Of this vast area only 1 per cent has been exhausted. It is also considered by able engineers that large areas are yet undiscovered.

In 1897 there were 15,000,000 tons of coal raised from Illinois mines, and there has been since that time an output increased at about 10 per cent annually. Mr. Peabody advises the holding of Illinois coal lands as an investment, and during the past few months several large coal land deals have been made in this state, chiefly in the vicinity of Mt. Vernon, Benton and Hillsboro. The southern part, known as "Egypt," has a great wealth of mineral resources. The coal fields around Benton, Ziegler, DuQuoin, Herrin, Carterville, Marion, Carbondale, Murphysboro, and many other points in their vicinity are richly supplied with black diamonds. Farther north, the coal fields are likewise valuable, and such cities as Danville, Decatur, Bloomington, Lincoln and Springfield are mining centers. It seems that agricultural and mineral resources go hand in hand in central Illinois.

Champaign Bank in New Home

The opening of the new room of the Illinois Title and Trust Company Bank in Champaign brought a crowd into the new quarters, which was estimated at 6,000 persons. The opening was held Friday evening, May 3d, and all day Saturday and Saturday evening, May 4th.

Carnations were given to the throngs, who filled the new room almost continuously while the opening was being observed. During the evening hours Saturday, access to the building was practically impossible except to those who stood in line on the sidewalk outside and patiently awaited their turn.

Champaign people are in the habit, it seems, of inspecting new banking quarters as the First National, (the Harris Bank), and the Trevett-Mattis Banking Company have both recently exhibited to the citizens of the growing little city some elegant banking quarters. The new Illinois Title and Trust Company yields nothing in elegance of appointment although not so large as the other two.

The interior is finished in white marble, and the vault embodies all of the latest fire and burglar proof ideas. The safety deposit boxes are especially attractive, and the entire finish of the bank for the comfort of patrons and staff, rapid dispatch of business and safety of valuables is without question.

The room is lighted from the skylight, and with the exception of two mezzanine floors the banking room is two stories high. The mezzanine floor at the front is for the abstract company affiliated with the bank while that at the rear is for the meeting of the officers.

Two mural paintings, representing "Work" and "Play," adorn the two interior ends of the banking room. Both are the work of Professor Newton A. Wells of the architectural decoration department of the University of Illinois. The painting entitled "Work" portrays a harvest field in Illinois with the golden grain falling before the reaper. In the painting is an excellent likeness of Professor Cyril G. Hopkins of the University of Illinois, who is so well known to banker-farmers of the state that his name is almost a household term with them. The likeness of O. S. Fisher, assistant to Dr. Hopkins, is also distinctly seen in the painting. The painting entitled "Play" shows a critical moment in a game played last October on Illinois Field at the University of Illinois between the eleven of that university and that of the University of Chicago.

Virgil W. Johnson is the executive vice-president of the bank. Walter W. Stern, representing an old established mercantile house in Champaign and more recently in the loan business, is also a vice-president, and Ernest M. Vennum, is the cashier. T. B. Vennum is the president. The Continental and Commercial National is the Chicago correspondent.

GROUP 3, KENTUCKY BANKERS

Arrangements have been made for the annual meeting of the Third District Bankers Association, comprising Group 3. It will be held in Franklin, June 6th. The program will be unusually interesting, as F. O. Arrangements for the meeting were made by the executive committee, which met a few days ago in Bowling Green.

"Alton, Illinois"

"Alton, Illinois" is the title of a very attractive book which the First Trust and Savings Bank of that city has been circulating among some of its Chicago friends. It is described as being "The story of a picturesque and busy city of the Mississippi" and is illustrated profusely. The volume is divided into sections, the first of which treats of the boundless resources of the city and its suburbs. Among the other points covered by the book are transportation and financial facilities; manufacturing industries; Alton as a commercial center; public schools and colleges; newspapers, libraries, clubs and hotels; amusements and sports; religious and charitable life and musical, philanthropic and literary associations. Among the many photographs are those of all the city officials, public buildings, business houses and the attractive residences of some of its citizens.

CHICAGO BANKS APPROVED AS RESERVE AGENTS

Fort Dearborn National Bank of this city has been approved as reserve agent for the First National of Portsmouth, N. LOUISIANA BANKERS CONVENTION

Among the interesting features at the convention of the Louisiana Bankers Association held recently was the approval by the convention of a law proposing to limit the liability for forged checks to a year, and a law authorizing notaries connected with banks as officials. On motion of J. W. Bolton, of Alexandria, a bill was urged to provide punishment for persons connected with firms, who, by making false statements as to the standing of the firms, whether individually or through agencies, misrepresent the status of the concerns and thus obtain credit they would not otherwise be able to get. These matters were referred to the incoming executive council and legislative committee to secure passage of bills through the legislature.

The following officers were elected: L. H. Jastremiski, of Honna, president; H. D. Apgar, Monroe, vice-president; L. O. Broussard, secretary; L. M. Pool, treasurer, and J. H. Fulton, of New Orleans, chairman of the executive council.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

Following a long imbroglio over the building code, the common council committee on buildings and public grounds on Tuesday gave the First National Bank permission to erect a sixteen story building on the site at Mason and East Water streets, which is now being cleared to be ready for building operations on June 1st. Following the action of the committee the $2,000,000 structure will be commenced at once and pushed to completion by June 1, 1913. President Fred Vogel of the First National represented the bank, and H. J. White of the H. J. White & Son Co., Chicago, the architects and construction company at the hearing. The fact that the 215 foot structure will be erected through special permit, as all other tall buildings in Milwaukee have been, has given rise to a proposed amendment to the present ordinance confining the height of buildings to the width of the street on which they face.

Milwaukee Banks Flourishing

The combined reports of the six national, nine state, and three savings banks in Milwaukee published exclusively in the annual report of the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce issued on Wednesday show the aggregate deposits for 1911 to have been $2,454,443,824.48, nearly one-third larger than those of the preceding year. Bank clearings in 1911 were $38,730,206.73 in excess of those of 1910. The total resources of the banks at the close of the year were $101,551,407.70. Prefacing his report, Secretary H. A. Plumb of the chamber of commerce says:

"The remarkable improvements in the quarters of the banks now contemplated or in actual course of construction are evidence of the most substantial kind that our financial institutions are in a flourishing condition. The banks are showing a disposition to confer upon the city a share of the prosperity they are enjoying, by adding to the number of beautiful buildings with which Milwaukee is already graced, seven handsome, commodious structures completed or in course of construction and one particularly imposing sixteen-story building to be commenced in the near future."

The report shows receipts of grain, malt and flour in 1911 to have been greater than in any previous year, or an aggregate of 64,486,959 bushels. A slight falling off in the regular grain receipts is more than made up for in the increase of malt and flour receipts which, reduced to their equivalent in bushels contribute to the above total.

Alliance Between Milwaukee Road and Union Pacific

Milwaukee officials of the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul railroad on Wednesday corroborated the reported alliance between the Milwaukee road and the Union Pacific.

"Although no definite form of agreement has been entered into yet," said one official, "an arrangement is being contemplated by which the Milwaukee road will carry the Union Pacific freight east of Omaha, and be permitted to run its trains over the lines of the latter road from Chicago to San Francisco. In anticipation of the new agreement the road is double tracking its trunk route from Chicago to Omaha, besides making extensive improvements in its routes and equipment in the West."

"Wisconsin Products" Show in November

A two weeks' "Wisconsin Products" show to be held in the Milwaukee Auditorium in November was decided upon by the executive committee of the Forward Wisconsin League at its monthly meeting this week. The proposed exhibit will include not only the agricultural, dairying, and mining industries of the state, but also the manufacturing interests, with special emphasis on the products manufactured from Wisconsin raw materials. According to John P. Hume, secretary of the association, and active promoter of the show, the exposition will be the most unique, as well as the largest ever held, embracing as it does every branch of the state's varied industries.

New State Bank Opens

The new Wisconsin State Bank, Eleventh and Greenfield avenues, opened its doors for business on Wednesday morning, with a capital stock of $75,000. The building, recently completed, is of stone and pressed brick, and equipped with the most modern bank furni-

Burns to Speak at Wisconsin Bankers Convention

William J. Burns, head of the detective department of the American Bankers Association, will be one of the principal speakers at the annual convention of the Wisconsin Bankers Association in Milwaukee, July 24th-25th. According to a proposed program a one-half day session of the convention will be devoted to agricultural topics, and the reports of the various agricultural contests held under the auspices of the association during the past year. A special feature of the meeting will be an adding machine contest in which employees of many state banks will be entered.

Milwaukee Notes

William B. Weller has resigned as president of the Milwaukee Title and Abstract Company to accept a position with the Citizens Saving and Trust Company, of which he is one of the original incorporators.

New city bond issues amounting to $365,000 have been sold to the S. A. Kean Company, Chicago, for $376,862.52 or a premium of $11,862.52. A Milwaukee firm had the next lowest bid. The interest is 4½ per cent.

Forgers have made their reappearance in Milwaukee, their depredations being confined chiefly to small grocery store and saloon proprietors, many of whom have been swindled out of small amounts during the past week.

Stephen Bull

Stephen Bull, pioneer manufacturer and banker of Racine, who celebrated his nintieth birthday a few weeks ago, has resigned as a director of the J. I. Case Threshing Machine Company, of which he is one of the founders, and Stephen Bull II was elected to fill the place left vacant by his grandfather's resignation. Mr. Bull was one of the organizers of the Manufacturers Bank of Racine.

State Banking News

The State Bank of Maribel has been incorporated with a capital stock of $12,000. Incorporators are William J. Warm, Thomas Dewane, and James A. Kellner.

The incorporation of the LaCrosse Trust Company was authorized by State Bank Commissioner A. E. Kuolt this week. The capital is $100,000, and the incorporators are L. C. Coleman, George H. Gordon, and John M. Holley.

The Citizens State Bank of Fond du Lac has purchased a site on South Main Street, and will erect a new building during the coming summer.

Tennessee Program

Secretary F. M. Mayfield of the Tennessee Bankers Association has prepared a list of the principal speakers at the annual convention which will be held in Knoxville, May 29th and 30th. Addresses of welcome will be made by Hon. Sam E. Hill, acting mayor of Knoxville, and H. T. Ault, president of the Knoxville Clearing House Association. After the response by Frank K. Houston, assistant cashier of the First National of Nashville, President Wesley Drane will deliver his annual address, and Hon. L. P. Padgett will talk on the "Benefits of a Proper Banking and Currency System." Two other important addresses will be delivered by B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, and vice-president of the First National at Champaign on "The Banker and His Relation to the Public Welfare," and by Bank Commissioner J. N. Dolley of Kansas on "The Kansas Blue Sky Law." A paper will be read by the winner of the contest among the state chapters of the American Institute of Banking on the subject, "Should Banks, Other Than Savings Banks, Pay Interest on Deposits?" The remainder of the sessions will be devoted to the reports of officers and committees, and to the discussion of the proposed banking law for Tennessee and of the proposed changes in tax laws.

NEW JERSEY ELECTS OFFICERS

Atlantic City, N. J., May 6.—At the second day's session of the ninth annual conference of the New Jersey State Bankers Association Saturday the following officers were elected, after the various reports of the officers and committees were read and accepted:

President, W. M. Van Dusen, cashier National Newark Banking Company, Newark; vice-president, Bloomfield H. Minch, Bridge-ton; treasurer, DeWitt Van Buskirk, Bayonne; secretary, William J. Field, Jersey City; executive committee, Edward F. Pierson, Jersey City; E. B. Bartlett, Atlantic City; R. W. Howell, Trenton, and E. S. Carr, of the City Trust Company, Newark.

Three resolutions offered by General Bird W. Spencer and seconded by Uzal H. McCarter were adopted by the conference.

The first provides that the support of the association be extended to the National Citizens League in its campaign for the education of the public as to the weak spots in the present banking system, and recommends that each bank appropriate one-tenth of 1 per cent of its surplus for this purpose.

The second recommends the retention of the present laws governing bank taxation, and the third provides for the appointment of a committee, including Colonel W. C. Fiske, to confer with the secretary of state to obtain the revision of the laws covering depositions by banks of bonds for the faithful performance of trusts. The resolution recommends that this matter be taken out of the prerogative court and placed in the hands of the commissioners of banking and insurance.

St. Louis, May 8.—There is some complaint among certain bankers of apathy in the demand for credits and quietness in general business. Disappointment is felt because the inquiry from the country has not been heavier. This latter fact is attributed to the backwardness of the season, and specifically in a large area to the floods. A cry has gone up from the lowlands along the rivers, but it was not for funds for agriculture, but for relief from dire need. The total loss from high water this season will be many million dollars greater than the greatest previous loss from that cause. While the flooded area is only a small part of the total region, it is rich and fertile, and contributes enormously to the wealth of the Mississippi Valley, so that the prosperity of the whole Middle West is bound to be more or less affected by the calamity. Another gloomy factor is the extremely low condition of wheat in Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and other central western states. Ideal conditions early in the growing season, with the winter's heavy snows had given rise to high hopes for the bread cereal crop, and the development of the enormous volume of winter killing proved a surprise and disappointment. Add to these factors the uncertainty of the political issue and the labor unrest and the pessimistic side is about summed up. On the other side there is reported a gradual betterment in the demand for commodities of all kinds. In spite of the setbacks general business is picking up, and the railroad tonnage in this region is heavy, with a still greater movement in sight for the near future. Bank clearings at this point are holding up in excellent shape, and show a goodly gain over the corresponding period a year ago. Collections, both city and country, are reported as being for the most part satisfactory, the flooded districts being the only backward spots. Wholesale merchants are by no means pessimistic as a whole. Their sales to date have been heavy, and compare well with the two or three preceding seasons. With the banks things are quiet, but rates are fairly firm. Offerings of commercial paper are quite large, with rates ranging in the extremes from $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 6 per cent. A majority of bankers in St. Louis anticipate marked improvement all along the line within the next few months.

Missouri Bankers' Meeting

W. F. Keyser, secretary of the Missouri Bankers Association, has sent to members a preliminary announcement outlining details of the convention, to be held at Joplin on May 21st and 22d. Accompanying the announcement was a souvenir penwiper, which tasteful article is meant to remind bankers of the coming gathering. Headquarters will be at the Connor Hotel. The Joplin clearing house has a committee on hotel reservations, of which J. T. Livingston is chairman, that will furnish all desired information on that subject. An elaborate programme of entertainment is announced by the Joplin bankers for visiting delegates and their ladies. This includes receptions, a smoker and vaudeville entertainment, trolley and automobile rides and a banquet. Mr. Keyser expects the largest attendance in the history of the association. At the convention in Joplin four years ago the membership was 1,161, while now it is 1,325.

New South Side Bank

Plans are well under way for a new bank in South St. Louis, which is to be called either the Chouteau Valley State Bank or the Park State Bank. A growing demand for such an institution on Jefferson Avenue has been voiced by merchants and manufacturers in that locality. Alex Schmidt, of the Schmidt-Meyer Grocer Company, is heading the movement and will doubtless be president of the new bank. A capital stock of $100,000 is planned, and it is stated that $75,000 has already been subscribed. The bank is the outgrowth of two independent movements to organize banks on the South Side. One group was interested in establishing a bank at Chouteau and Jefferson avenues, while the other group proposed opening a trust company or bank at Park and Jefferson avenues. Recently the parties combined their efforts. Others interested in the movement are Henry R. Rehme, Dr. Otto Kollme and Louis Christophersen.

Swanger May Enter Race

John E. Swanger, state bank commissioner, has under consideration the question of becoming a candidate for the republican nomination for governor. Mr. Swanger, in this matter, is in the hands of his friends. The friends of Mr. Swanger believe that the latter's administration of the state's banking affairs was such as to warrant promotion to the highest office in the state's government. Swanger espoused the Roosevelt cause.

Commonwealth Trust Company

The Commonwealth Trust Company is preparing to move to the building at the northeast corner of Broadway and Locust Street, which it will occupy during the period occupied by the erection of its new building at Broadway and Olive Street. It is expected that the present structure will be vacated by the end of next month, and wrecking will begin immediately. A change in design of the new building is under contemplation. This change proposes to extend a large tower to the height of about 300 feet. The original plan was for a nineteen-story building with the conventional flat roof. It is thought a large office tower six stories high would add greatly to the appearance of the building, besides returning a good interest on the investment. Much, however, depends upon the building commissioner, who wants to uphold the ordinance limiting buildings to 200 feet, as provided for buildings similarly located. The architects, Eames and Young, have the matter up with Commissioner McKevely.

Cashier Desires Information

Advices from Austin, Texas, state that B. L. Gill, state commissioner of banking, has received an inquiry from F. F. Paschall, cashier of the First State Bank of Leesburg, Texas, which is greatly puzzling him. It reads: "I have a new depositor and do not know how to handle the lady's account. A white hen comes in every morning and deposits an egg behind the vault door. Please inform me how to handle this account." It was not until the price of eggs began to soar a few weeks ago that this hen selected the bank vault as a place to deposit her eggs. Mr. Paschall says she has evidently a due appreciation of their value.

To Refinance United Railways

It is stated on what is considered reliable authority that the North American Company has under consideration a comprehensive plan for refinancing the United Railways Company of St. Louis. The plan, it is stated, is to issue a mortgage sufficiently large to cover all outstanding bonds, notes and underlying obligations of the traction company. Such refunding issue, it is thought, would reach probably $60,000,000. A similar plan was adopted by the North American Company a few months ago in connection with its Milwaukee

Cotton Belt Mortgage

Attorneys for the St. Louis and Southwestern Railway Company have filed with the recorder of deeds of St. Louis a mortgage to cover the $100,000,000 bond issue recently voted by the stockholders of that corporation. The mortgage names Walker Hill, president of the Mechanics National of St. Louis, and the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, as trustees. The property covered by the mortgage covers all the personal holdings of the company and its real estate in St. Louis.

Activity in Building

According to the report of the commissioner of public buildings, building operations in St. Louis for the month of April show a gain of 40 per cent over the corresponding month last year. The showing of the building business for the year thus far is good, as permits for the first three months indicated a gain of 36 per cent over the first three months of 1911.

HIGHEST DEPOSITS IN HISTORY

Detroit (Mich.) banks are now carrying the highest deposits in their history, according to the figures revealed by the call which was made this week. The total deposits in Detroit banks and trust companies on April 18th aggregated more than $167,000,000, of which $51,091,000 was in the national banks, $107,396,000 in the state banks, and $9,003,000 in the trust companies. The gain since February 20th, when the last preceding call was made, showed deposits of $163,000,000, and the deposits shown on March 7, 1911, approximately a year ago were $145,000,000.

L. W. Quick

L. W. Quick, president of the Washington National at St. Louis and city treasurer of St. Louis, has filed his petition as a candidate for governor of Missouri on the Republican ticket at the next primaries. Mr. Quick is an old telegraph operator and in years gone by held down one of the press wires at Chicago. His friends in the banking fraternity all hope that he may succeed in being nominated and elected.

McCRUM-HOWELL COMPANY

During the early months of 1910, when the McCrum-Howell Company was offering $2,000,000 of preferred stock at par, it was reported that the assets of the company exceeded the liabilities by more than a million. Stockholders and creditors now are wondering what has become of this large sum of money. It is said that a part of the proceeds of the sale of the stock was expended in the acquisition of new property, and also a portion for depreciation. Stockholders and creditors, however, believe that there is a considerable amount not covered by these two items. It is proposed to investigate the matter, and to ascertain if possible the exact facts of the situation.

ALLEGED BANK LOOTER PLACED ON TRIAL

Frank T. Arnold, cashier of the First National Bank of New York, who is accused with having embezzled a large sum of money from the institution, has pleaded not guilty to the charge. He was unable to furnish a bond for $25,000 and has been committed to jail. His case will be considered by the grand jury in Binghamton on June 11th. Notwithstanding the claims of his friends that he probably is fatally ill, it is the opinion of the jail physician that the accused banker is shamming, and that his depleted physical condition is due to inability to supply himself with morphine, of which drug he has been a constant user. It is said that the accused cashier had a narrow escape from injury at the hands of a mob who threatened to lynch him.

OPPOSITION TO "MONEY TRUST" INQUIRY

Considerable opposition has developed on the part of New York bankers to some of the questions propounded to them in a circular recently issued by the committee on banking and currency of the house of representatives, which practically has completed all preparations for making an investigation of the so-called "money trust." To cope with this situation the attorneys for the committee have suggested that an amendment be made to the national banking act, by means of which either branch of congress will have authority to call for such information regarding the affairs of national banks as may be needed. It is thought by many that the bankers are acting unwisely in this matter, as any opposition on their part to such an investigation no doubt will be attributed to Wall Street influences. It is expected that any recalcitrant action will have a tendency to prejudice the members of the congressional committee, and to create a country-wide demand for more drastic measures.

HOW BANKERS AID FAKE STOCK SALESMEN

The average banker in smaller cities and country towns never becomes fully aware of his importance to large enterprises until some fancy stock salesman comes along from the city representing an institution, which believes that it cannot get along any longer without having the use of the said banker's name on its board of directors. As a special inducement he is offered stock in the company which is being promoted, at half price. Sometimes this offer is accompanied by an additional agreement to later on sell 50 per cent of his holdings for what it all cost him, thus leaving him half of the stock purchased absolutely free of cost. A few days later he learns that sums of money are being withdrawn from his bank, and from other banks in the town to pay for other shares of stock in the same enterprise, most of which were sold purely for the reason that the "leading banker of the town thinks so well of it that he has purchased 'steep hundred' shares." Later on he has the further satisfaction of discounting the notes of his friends and neighbors, who did not have the ready cash with which to become stockholders in the enterprise. For the balance of his life he can be prepared to explain to those who went in on his account what it was that happened to the company, why they never received any dividends, and why there was no market for the stock.

Another pet scheme of fake promoters is to bring letters to a banker in a country town offering him in exchange for his influence shares in the company, to be paid for by a certificate of deposit, the C. D. to remain sacredly in the vaults of the company. The promise in this case is that with the use of his name and influence in the town and county where he resides, enough shares of stock can be sold and a commission allowed him, which shortly will pay for his stock, and the certificate of deposit can be returned. This looks so simple that even in the state of Missouri within the past two years an insurance company procured and handled several hundred certificates of deposit on such representations—or rather misrepresentations. In no single case was enough stock sold in any town or county so that the commissions coming to the banker amounted even to the interest on the certificate of deposit. Neither were the certificates of deposit quietly segregated in the vaults of the insurance corporation. They were hypothecated in every bank that would take them. Generally speaking, the banker, who was foolish enough to issue them had sense enough left to repay the bank for the loss, and "modesty" enough to say nothing further about it. This sort of collusion between a banker and a fake stock salesman is dishonest. The banker expects to get his stock altogether for nothing. It has been proposed in Illinois, and in a few other states, to enact a law somewhat similar to the "Blue Sky" law of Kansas. If a secret committee could procure from bankers and citizens a list of all stocks and bonds which they ever had purchased, and upon which they never had received dividends, the investment being a total loss, a summary might be made which would convince any legislature on earth of the necessity for supervision over stockselling investment companies and fake promoters. The committee could arrange to keep secret the names of those involved, and even the names of the securities dealt in might not be used. The results, according to information at hand, would be astounding. There would be a lesson in such a publication for every banker in the country who might have an inclination to deal with these promoters in any of the above or other forms of agreement.

WHY THE BANK FAILED

Not so very long ago the Bank of Remsen, up in Minnesota, closed its doors in liquidation. Demands for money by depositors had been met with explanations and refusals. W. D. Creglow was the owner of the bank. His bank had been regarded as "one of the strongest institutions" of its kind in that part of the state. Unfortunately, not being restricted as it should have been by law, Mr. Creglow invested the funds of the bank in farm lands—not in Plymouth County, Minnesota, nor even in the state—but up in Canada. Mr. Creglow claims there is more than enough property to pay off all his creditors, and that the reports that he has failed are untrue. However, the local depositors are up against a money famine and will be obliged to wait upon the slow liquidation of the Creglow lands before the claims against the Bank of Remsen can be paid off. This is a case—not the kind which usually happens in Chicago, New York and Philadelphia, where the private banker simply packs up the money in a satchel and leaves for parts unknown—it is a case of unsupervised banking in the hands of an honest but incompetent man. He hoped to make a fortune in Canadian lands for himself and to do it in time to be able to refund the depositors' money and keep all of the profits for himself. Hundreds of private bankers have succeeded in doing just this very thing, but Mr. Creglow has failed, and as he thinks, failed honestly. The state owes the depositor better protection than was afforded to those who patronized the Bank of Remsen.

UNPOPULAR COLLECTION CHARGES

Recently it has been the custom of the New York clearing house, when it had a difficult position to face, to go boldly at it. It was thus that it solved the question of admitting the trust companies and of providing a better system of examination for banks than New York ever had had before, thereby placing it on a par with Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis and other cities where clearing house examination has been in vogue for some time. For the past five or six years there has been a clearing house rule in New York providing for universal charges upon out-of-town checks and collections. This step was taken as a protective measure, no doubt, at the time it was adopted and probably it has served its purpose. Not so long ago Connecticut bankers filed a huge remonstrance against its continuance, and this week the president of the New Jersey bankers in talking to the convention at Atlantic City estimated that the present system of inflexible charges had lost to the New York banks reserve balances of two hundred millions. The plan never has been quite popular, either at home or in other reserve centers. It has compelled country bankers to charge their customers exchange which they are very reluctant to do or otherwise pocket the loss. It has forced bankers from other reserve centers to sell New York exchange in order to repay them for the cost of their "New York funds" accumulated under the charge system for collections. There is no doubt that bankers in Philadelphia and Boston have found it profitable to make variable charges for the purpose of drawing business. The banks closer to New York built up extensive par lists which proved to be the basis of good business and larger dividends without going into the technicalities of the situation which are well understood by bankers, it may be stated that something likely will be done about it before long. A committee has been appointed of which James G. Cannon, president of the Fourth National, is the chairman. On this committee are Walter E. Frew, Joseph T. Talbert, Edward Townsend and J. W. Platten, all bankers of experience, large parts of which were obtained outside of New York. The intention in appointing this committee was to have it make a thorough investigation of all inland exchange and collection charges as well as the methods of doing business by the clearing house associations of the various states. It is expected that this committee will recommend such modifications of the rules or regulations as may seem advisable. The committee has been authorized to request managers of other association to appear before it for the purpose of giving such information as may be desired. It is thought by those most interested that a plan will be devised which will make less work, and by which checks will find their way home much more expeditiously than at present. The point aimed at is one where customers will find it satisfactory and to their own advantage to purchase such exchange over the counter of their own bank as they may need in their business. Certainly there can be no defense of the old system where the charges for the collection were absorbed first by the bank which was willing to stand them and secondly by the bank which could not evade them, and by which the maker of the check rarely paid the cost. If such a plan can be adopted it will be quite a feather in the hats of Mr. Cannon and his associates.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S REPLY TO ROOSEVELT

Affairs in the race for the republican nomination for president have reached a state where it has become necessary for President Taft to handle his noisy opponent without gloves. The attitude assumed by the President in his recent Massachusetts speeches is but that which would have been taken by any self-respecting American citizen with an ounce of manhood. In replying to the charges of his opponent, Mr. Taft did not desire to attack the ex-president's reputation. The President believes that the dignity of the high office which he holds should be upheld, and that any campaign savoring of personalities and vituperations would be highly unethical on the part of the chief executive of this great republic. Nevertheless, in vindication of his own reputation he has been obliged to expose to the American public some of the manifold hypocrisies and inconsistencies of a man who seems to be in the last stages of an extremely aggravated case of "exaggerated ego." Mr. Taft, through his many years of judicial training, possesses a mind which is tempered with a great love for justice. Mr. Roosevelt loudly proclaims himself as an exponent of a square deal for everyone; yet, right here is where he exhibits the smallness of his character. He is giving Mr. Taft anything but a square deal. He represented to the voters of Illinois that the President was a supporter of Senator Lorimer, when Mr. Roosevelt of all persons in the world ought to have known that such was not the case. In commenting upon his declaration never again to seek a third term "under any circumstances," he construes his language to mean "never to seek a third successive term." Any sane person would construe "under any circumstances" to include the latter interpretation of the Colonel, which was made solely to suit his own convenience. He also states that although he originally favored the reciprocity measure, subsequent investigation and study convinced him that it was not the proper thing for the country. Isn't it strange that he did not arrive at this conclusion until the time he was addressing the farmers of Illinois? Mr. Roosevelt has acted in a manner more consistent with that of a schoolboy than that of a full-grown man who seeks to make himself the recipient of the highest gift within the power of the people of the United States. The answers which he has made to President Taft's assertions are such as one naturally would expect from one not inordinately imbued with a love for veracity.

PROSPECTS OF MONETARY REFORM LEGISLATION

The prospects of obtaining legislation looking to the establishment of a better banking and currency system seem to be endangered somewhat by the fact that the two branches of congress are controlled by party adherents hostile to each other. The proper procedure to adopt would be the employment of experts to study carefully the plan suggested by the National Monetary Commission, such experts to make any changes or additions as they might deem expedient. It is expected, however, that the division of congress will have a tendency to keep the question out of politics. In passing such important legislation it will be necessary that some attention be paid to individual views on the subject. It is, however, imperative that too much consideration shall not be paid to pet theories, which in the main are impractical.

A SLUR UPON BANKERS

Just as half a dozen states were pondering upon issuing an invitation to President Vincent of the University of Minnesota to speak at as many coming state conventions, that gentleman went upon record (if he has not been misquoted) in a way which seriously will injure his chances. He is reported to have said in a recent talk: "Bankers who talk so enthusiastically and so ignorantly of the value of education for farming." Bankers all over the country have resented this carelessly made remark. Mr. Vincent is informed herewith that more than half of all the bankers outside of the large cities actually are farmers, and that more than 90 per cent of those who are taking an interest in the question of present farming methods and better education for farming are farmers of the very highest type. Take the case of President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association. He has been born and brought up on one of the largest and best farms, comprising several thousand acres of Illinois black soil. Many other bankers who have been forwarding this movement are fully as well qualified to speak on the subject. President Vincent owes it to some of his very nearest neighbors to put himself right on this important question. Even then it is a little bit doubtful whether it would be advisable to risk an invitation to anyone who speaks so carelessly before a bankers' convention.

Chas. N. Bourdon and L. C. Simons, of St. Paul, have bought the First State Bank of Waubun, Minn., and will merge it with the Waubun State Bank, which they control.

Texas Convention

San Antonio, Texas, May 8.—More than 1,200 bankers were in San Antonio yesterday morning when the twenty-eighth annual convention of the Texas Bankers Association opened at 10:25 o'clock in the Orpheum Theatre. They did not all attend the initial session, the late arrivals being occupied in registering for the convention, and in getting hotel accommodations, but the lower floor of the theatre was crowded when Bishop J. S. Johnston arose and delivered the invocation, which formally opened the three days' session.

President Hamby Unable to Attend

After the invocation had been delivered, a telegram was read from General William R. Hamby of Austin, president of the association, in which he expressed deep regret that serious illness prevented him from being present, as he so much desired. A unanimous resolution was adopted by the meeting to convey sympathy to the president in his illness and regret that he could not be present. By rising vote the members passed another resolution asking General Hamby to prepare his address and report as president at his convenience, so that it may be incorporated in the minutes of the meeting.

General Hamby had appointed F. M. Law of Beaumont, vice-president of district No. 1, to preside at the convention and named Gus F. Taylor of Tyler, vice-president of district No. 5, as alternate. Mr. Law's train was late in arriving, so Mr. Taylor presided at the initial meeting. Mr. Law arrived in time to preside at the session yesterday afternoon.

In opening the meeting Mr. Taylor stated that it was one of the proudest moments of his life to be allowed to preside over such a gathering. He invited all vice-presidents and members of the executive committee to take seats on the platform.

R. L. Ball Welcomes Visitors

In the absence of J. N. Brown, who had been designated to welcome the visitors to San Antonio on behalf of the local bankers, R. L. Ball, president of the National Bank of Commerce, made the welcoming speech, and although declaring himself unprepared, gave a talk that aroused spontaneous applause.

"San Antonio is a city of great historical associations," said Mr. Ball, "and therefore it appeals to all warm Texans. I know you are glad to be here and San Antonio and her bankers are happy to have you as guests. We hope to extend the joy and sunshine of genial entertainment, and if our efforts leave anything lacking we wish to be informed of the matter so that the deficiency may be promptly remedied."

Continuing, Mr. Ball said that conditions had never been more propitious for a meeting of financial men than that on the occasion. With bounteous rains, high prices, good ranges, fat cattle and sheep, he said the bankers throughout Texas were feeling good and had forgotten to worry over loans and discounts. He predicted that these conditions would go far to make the present convention the most successful in the history of the association.

Branching off on financial matters Mr. Ball said there were many big bankers from the North and East at the convention, who should be heard on means of augmenting profitable financial arrangements between their institutions, and the banks in Texas.

Touches on Currency Reform

He touched on currency reform, saying that it was an important issue on which the convention should take action for remedial legislation. There has been so much agitation on the subject that the people at large feel that the banks are in a bad way and desire a revision of monetary affairs. He praised the banking system of this country, saying that it was on a par with any of Europe.

In conclusion he welcomed the many women, who have come to the convention with their husbands, saying that entertainment had been provided for them as well as for the men.

As spokesman for the Chamber of Commerce, Nat M. Washer made a particularly happy address.

Great Factors in Progress

"The Chamber of Commerce is an organization of business men," said Mr. Washer, "who realize the immense influence you bankers exercise in the development of the state. In my mind the banking interest are the greatest factors in the progress of Texas, and therefore I am most pleased to welcome you to this city on behalf of the business men's organization."

I consider it a privilege to represent the citizenship of San Antonio on an occasion of this kind and welcome the men who are in control of the financial affairs of the greatest state in the Union. Texas is a state of wonderful opportunities, and I wish to urge that bankers herald the security of Texas investments, and bring the money here that will develop the vast resources of the state."

Mr. Washer saw that there were many women present and commended them in taking an interest in financial matters. After praising the business ability of women, he gained popularity with those in the audience by advocating that they should be given equal suffrage.

Calls Attention to Resources

He called attention to the wonderful resources of San Antonio, dwelling on its vast tributary territory only a small percentage of which is yielding its just riches and predicting the growth and prosperity of the city, when this country has all been developed. In conclusion, he again recommended the hospitality of San Antonio and invited the visitors to avail themselves of it to the utmost.

W. W. Woodson, cashier of the Exchange National Bank of Waco, responded to these addresses for the association. He said it was a pleasure for the bankers to again come to San Antonio for their convention after an absence of six years, declaring the last visit lingered in the memories of the members like the fragrance of a rose. He characterized San Antonio as the shrine of Texas liberty toward which all Texans turn with love.

He thanked San Antonio for its hospitality on behalf of the visiting ladies, the bankers from the North and East, those from the large cities of the state, the bankers from the innumerable small towns, and then for the Texas Bankers Association as an organization.

"We do not discount the hospitality of San Antonio," said Mr. Woodson. "While we are drawing heavily on the resources of the city we do it with easy consciences, for we know they cannot be impaired."

Annual Reports are Heard

The secretary, treasurer and detective of the association submitted their annual reports, which were accepted by the meeting. These reports were incorporated in a booklet and copies were distributed to the members. Of-

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

"In spite of certain discouraging features of the local situation, I believe the business outlook to be most promising," said James T. Bradley, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City, to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER a few days ago. The discouraging features referred to were two big strikes in Kansas City that caused the idleness of more than 2,000 men. These strikes were on the new 35 million union depot and terminal project and on the local breweries, whose drivers struck, calling out practically all of the other brewery workers. "These strikes are having their effect in city business," continued Mr. Bradley. "The Kansas City bank clearings are about 10 per cent heavier than this time last year and deposits are keeping up well. The crop outlook is good and the only serious menace to our prosperity here in the Central West is the unrest and political agitation which is upsetting things."

Kansas Bankers Who Attended Texas Convention

Kansas City banks were well represented at the meeting of the Texas Bankers Association at San Antonio, May 7th, 8th and 9th, and practically the same delegation stopped on their way home to attend the Oklahoma State Bankers convention at Tulsa, May 10th and 11th. In the Kansas City party were: George P. Reichle, assistant cashier of the First National; Virgil K. Tuggle, assistant cashier of the New England National; C. B. McCluskey, vice-president of the National Reserve Bank; J. W. Perry, president, and Charles Moore, assistant cashier, of the National Bank of Commerce; C. W. Allendorfer, assistant cashier of the First National; J. F. Downing, president of the New England National; W. L. Buchle, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, and G. G. Moore, assistant cashier of the New England National.

Women Bankers Division at Texas Convention

One of the most interesting features of the bankers' meeting at San Antonio, Texas, May 7th, 8th and 9th, was the women bankers' division. Although that meeting was entirely separate from the convention of the Texas Bankers Association, it attracted almost as much attention. It was the first convention of women bankers ever held in the West and was such a distinct success that several other states may hold similar conventions next year. The women bankers had prepared a program of quite as pretentious a character as that of the men's department. Mrs. R. S. Croggin, vice-president of the Croggin National of Brownwood, delivered an address on "Present-

Day Ethics in the Banking Business." Miss Minnie Hester, cashier of the Lee County State of Lexington, told about "Hard Cases I Have Had to Handle." Miss Bess Ramsey, assistant cashier of the Woodson State, gave some good advice on "How to Make the Business of a Country Bank Grow." Miss Mitchell, cashier of Mitchell Brothers Banking Company of Franklin, spoke on "Rotation of Credits," and Mrs. J. B. Towler, president of the First National of Mount Pleasant, spoke of "The Necessity of Married Women Informing Themselves With Regard to Banking Matters."

Trade Excursions

At this season of the year dozens of cities and towns in the Central West send out trade-getting excursions into their immediate commercial territory. On these trips all lines of business are represented and banks usually take a keen interest in this method of keeping in touch with their out-of-town customers. Beginning May 13th a number of special trains will speed through Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas, bearing their crews of enthusiastic business getters. Kansas City will send its representatives into southern Nebraska and northern Kansas; Wichita, Kan., business men will visit 164 towns; Oklahoma City will be represented by nine carloads of citizens and the business men of Fort Worth will make a long swing to the south and west. The favorable crop outlook has revived business confidence in this territory and it is expected that trade of all kinds will benefit greatly from these various visits of city business men with their country customers.

Jerome Thralls a "Back-to-the-Soil" Convert.

Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House Association, has become a convert to the "back-to-the-soil" sentiment. A few weeks ago he mailed out thousands of circulars to banks in the Central West, giving instructions on how to test seed corn. This excursion into agrarian life aroused a new enthusiasm in Mr. Thralls. He is taking a deep interest in the farmer and a few days ago he mailed to hundreds of banks in the farming districts circulars going a little deeper into the matter. The more recent circulars contained this question and answer:

"The question: The population of the United States increased 16,000,000 in ten years. Seventy per cent of this increase was in the villages, towns and cities, while only 30 per cent was in the rural districts. At this rate what will be the result in twenty years?"

"Kansas City is surrounded by a great agricultural territory. Practically all public lands have been taken and our area is fixed. Farmer boys and girls are flocking to the city and it is difficult to secure good help on the farm. Farm products must be increased and farm life popularized. How can it be done?"

"The answer: By improved methods of farming; a complete change in our educational system, and taking entertainment and the comforts of life to the farm. Desire for education, entertainment and the comforts of life is what leads farmer boys and girls to the city. Why not train our boys and girls in improved farming methods; teach them how to test seed, judge the soil, do carpenter work, blacksmithing, housekeeping and the every day vocations to which they are called."

Guaranty Fund Tied Up

Under a ruling of the district court the Oklahoma bank guaranty fund has been tied up pending the payment of \$200,000 to the Wilkin-Hale State Bank of Oklahoma City. At the time of the failure of the Night and Day Bank of Oklahoma City, June 7, 1911, the Wilkin-Hale State Bank held a claim upon the failed institution for approximately \$244,000. The Oklahoma state banking board issued guaranty fund certificates for this indebtedness. About \$44,000 worth of these certificates have been paid. The Wilkin-Hale Bank claimed that the state banking board had taken in and dispersed more than \$300,000 since making the contract in regard to the liquidation of the Day and Night Bank. In its recent suit the Wilkin-Hale State Bank sought to mandamus the state banking board to make a special assessment on the state banks of Oklahoma of $\frac{1}{2}$ of one per cent to take up the outstanding certificates. The court refused that mandamus solely on the ground that to require such an assessment at this time, in view of the prevailing business conditions, might work an injury to the banks of Oklahoma and to the bank guaranty system.

To Briarcliff

Delegates from Missouri and Kansas to the meeting of the council of the American Bankers Association at Briarcliff, N. Y., joined the Chicago party special train for the trip East. Missouri was represented by C. G. Hutcheson, cashier of the First National, Kansas City, and W. C. Harris, president of the Calloway Bank of Fulton, Mo. The Kansas members of the council are: P. W. Goebel, president of the Commercial National, Kansas City, Kan., and former Governor W. J. Bailey, president of the Exchange National of Atchison.

Elected Director of National Bank of Commerce

Eugene D. Nims, first vice-president and treasurer of the southwestern groups of the Bell Telephone companies, comprising the Missouri and Kansas, and Bell Telephone Company of Missouri, the Pioneer Company of Oklahoma and the Southwestern Telephone Company of Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas, has been elected director of the National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City. Mr. Nims is also a director in several of the leading banks of Oklahoma and is interested in many large commercial enterprises of the Southwest.

Death of L. E. James

Llewellyn E. James, for many years confidential attorney for Armour and Company in Kansas City, director of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company of Kansas City, director of the Interstate National Bank of Kansas City and heavily interested in several other large business enterprises of Kansas City and the Southwest, died last week as a result of a fracture of the skull sustained in a fall from a street car. The accident occurred near his home on Valentine Road. Mr. James was educated at the University of Michigan and began the practice of law in Kansas City. During practically all of his professional career he was confidential attorney for the Armours. He seldom practiced in the courts but was regarded as one of the leading corporation attorneys of the Southwest. Mr. James was 55 years old.

Bankers Club Holds Election

The Kansas City Bankers Club held its semiannual election of officers last week in a business session following a dinner at the Hotel Baltimore. The officers for the ensuing six months are: President, George B. Harrison, vice-president of the New England National Bank; vice-president, A. C. Jobes, vice-president of the First National Bank; secretary and treasurer, Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House Association. The officers named also serve on the board of governors. They will be assisted by the following new members: H. C. Lambert, L. C. Smith, David Thornton, Lapier Williams, Harry W. Bedell and Harry C. Jobes.

Central West Notes

William S. Hillis, for eight years cashier of the City National of Omaha, has resigned his position and will go into business for himself in California.

S. W. Campbell of Chicago, who was one of the organizers and first president of the First National of Hutchinson, Kan., was a visitor in Hutchinson last week. He renewed many acquaintanceships and expressed surprise and delight at the growth of Hutchinson since his last visit about five years ago.

J. T. M. Johnston, president of the National Reserve Bank of Kansas City, has returned from a ten days' trip in Mexico. He says the banking conditions in the republic are badly demoralized and that American residents believe the best solution for the Mexican problem would be for the seven northern states to secede and establish an independent government. "And eventually they would be knocking at the door of America for entrance into the Union as did Texas," added Mr. Johnston.

More than one hundred employees of the Commercial Trust of Kansas City were guests of the company at its annual picnic Saturday, May 4th. Races, jumping contests, a tug of war and other sports were engaged in, after which there was a big picnic dinner at the Hale farm near Kansas City.

The monthly trade letter issued by the First National of St. Joseph, Mo., gives a most encouraging forecast for the month of May. It recites that the crop prospects are satisfactory, notwithstanding somewhat unfavorable reports sent out earlier by the government. Soil conditions are excellent, according to this letter, and it is believed that with carefully selected seed and a reasonable measure of precipitation and warmth during the next several weeks, unusual crops are assured.

J. Z. Miller, Jr., vice-president of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City, represented that institution at the San Antonio convention. Mr. Miller is a native Texan and came to Kansas City from the Lone Star state.

Among the visitors in Kansas City's financial district last week were: J. H. Hill, vice-president of the Russell State, Russell, Kan.; James E. Combs, cashier of the First National, St. Joseph, Mo., and J. E. Smith, cashier of the Citizens State, Greenfield, Kan.

NEW YORK INVESTMENT HOUSE TO OPEN CHICAGO OFFICE

Kissel, Kinnicut & Company of New York contemplate opening an office in the Rookery as soon as arrangements can be made. Robert Stevenson, Jr., for six years with Lee, Higginson & Company, will be western manager. Mr. Stevenson enjoys a wide acquaintance with investors in Chicago and throughout the entire Middle West.

NORTH DAKOTA PLANS

Secretary W. C. Macfadden of the North Dakota Bankers Association announces that the tenth annual convention of the association will be held at Jamestown on Wednesday and Thursday, June 10th and 20th. All arrangements for the program have been completed by the secretary. Among the speakers will be Joseph Chapman, Jr., of Minneapolis; T. R. Atkinson, state engineer; Thomas Cooper, secretary of the Better Farming Association and Carl Jorgenson, deputy state auditor. Among the subjects which will be discussed at the convention are: "The Proposed Plan of the National Monetary Commission"; "Good Roads"; "Better Farming"; "Dairying"; and "Farmers Clubs." A very attractive program of entertainment has been arranged for the visiting delegates by the bankers of Jamestown. The principal entertainment feature will be the annual ball to be given at the Jamestown Armory. Arthur Reynolds, of Des Moines, Iowa, and chairman of the executive council, and Fred E. Farnsworth, of New York, and general secretary, will attend the sessions as representatives of the American Bankers Association. Hotel reservations at Jamestown can be made through any of the local bankers.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Joseph Chapman, Jr., when he reached New York, gave out the following interview, thought out in his private office at the Northwestern National Bank. It reads: "What we propose is that American primary schools shall, as is done in Germany, give some attention to industrial or agricultural education. More than 96 per cent, or 19,500,000 American school children are in primary schools.

"The school system of this country is absolutely wrong. Formerly schools taught children who would never need to go to work, but to-day we are teaching the coming generation to be consumers and not producers.

"As bankers we consider this question of vital importance. Unless more agricultural studies are taught the young folks of to-day farming will soon become a lost art, and then what will happen to business in general."

H. A. Leighton

H. A. Leighton, assistant cashier of the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank, has been elected director in the North Side Commercial Club.

Officers of New Drovers State of South St. Paul

The new Drovers State of South St. Paul is officered as follows: President, C. W. Clark; vice-president, F. E. Woodward; cashier, O. J. Schumacher. Capital is $25,000 and surplus $5,000. The bank is on Concord Street, opposite the Exchange building.

Receives Quiz

The Security National has a quiz from the house committee on currency and banking regarding money and banking matters, similar to those sent to other banks throughout the country.

Application to Reorganize Bank

Application has been made by Joseph Marwick, J. Dunohowe, P. C. Dunohowe and M. P. Marwick to organize the Story City Bank, Iowa, to the Story City National Bank with $40,000 capital. The Security National of Alexandria, N. D., has been authorized at $30,000 capital. This will succeed the Farmers Bank. J. C. Gregory is to be president and C. H. Stillwell cashier.

F. A. Chamberlain Praises California Roads

F. A. Chamberlain, president of the Security National, praises California roads, on his return to Minneapolis. He says California has authorized a roads bond issue of between $18,000,000 and $20,000,000, and Los Angeles county will spend $3,000,000. The farmers believe that money well invested in this manner will make a good return. Macadamized roads are common, Mr. Chamberlain says. He was away three months.

Winnebago City Bank of Commerce Failure

Kelsey S. Chase, state bank examiner for Minnesota, has temporarily closed the Winnebago City Bank of Commerce, and began an examination. Vice-President H. W. Parker had left, saying he was going to a lodge meeting in St. Paul, and had not been found a week later. The examiner was told that Parker had cashed a draft for $2,000 at the First National. The vice-president has a family, is 40, and was in the confidence of the people. The bank was organized in 1903 and became a state bank in 1904. Capital is $20,000; surplus $3,000 and deposits $210,000. John Sharp is president and Glenn Bassett the cashier. Amount of the shortage is not definitely determined.

Predicts Bumper Crop

Dean A. F. Woods of the state agricultural college forecasts crop conditions thus: "The prospect for a bumper crop was never better. Every condition is extremely favorable for the development of the agricultural interests of Minnesota. Wheat already has opened and is doing well. Other seeds have been placed in the ground earlier and under more favorable circumstances than in previous years. The shortage of seed, however, will keep down the acreage planted to corn this year. What corn is planted, I think, will be of a better quality than last year. Minnesota farmers are going into diversified farming as never before. Flax, oats, barley and other small grain will play an important part in the value of the harvest this fall."

Death of E. A. Mears

E. Ashley Mears, Minneapolis, formerly known as a Napoleon of finance in Fargo, N. D., died last week in St. Paul, aged 72 years. Following the boom after the opening of the Northern Pacific road into the Dakotas Mr. Mears became the first boom financier. He went to Fargo shortly after the road was projected west of Moorhead, Minn., in 1873. He established the Dakota National, built in ornate style. He formed many companies and a stock exchange. Subsidiary banks were started through the territory. Notwithstanding Mr. Mears' appearance of confidence, matters went wrong, and in 1893 a fire destroyed the bank and a large part of the city. His latest banking venture was two years ago in the Southwest.

Changes in Minneapolis Concerns

Two large Minneapolis enterprises are undergoing change. A new company formed east has taken over the Loose-Wiles new banking plant, and H. M. Byllesby and Company, Chicago, Byllesby formerly a local man, are negotiating for the plants of the Minneapolis General Electric Company, a child of Stone and Webster, having water power rights at several points. The purchasers are said to accept a valuation of $3,575,000 in excess of the value of stocks and bonds and $2,425,000 above the stock market valuation, $12,272,000. In the former instance it is said the owners will get about $5,000,000 for their interests in the various plants.

James L. Mitchell, cashier of the Capital National, has been elected secretary-treasurer of the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra Association.

Cashier R. A. Packard of the Stephenson Bank at Stephenson, Mich., has accepted the position of cashier of the Miners State at Iron River.

W. F. McLane, cashier of the Hennepin County Savings Bank, is chauffeur for the Divvy Club. This is his first position since he learned to drive three weeks ago. The Divvy Club is related to the Boys' Club, which has something to do with sequestering newsboys when off duty to keep them in order and educate them liberally. The Divvy Club started for a picnic along the Minnesota River below Minneapolis. Mr. McLane was one of the generous citizens to tote the boys out and back by gasoline.

One hundred and thirty-eight members of the Boys' Club have saved enough from newspaper sales to open savings accounts totaling $100 plus.

Minneapolis Chapter, A. I. B., Hold Annual Election

H. J. Mulcahy, Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, was elected president of the Minneapolis Chapter of bank clerks Tuesday night. He defeated H. C. Libby of the Northwestern National after a warm contest, and George Struthers of the Union State. C. J. Norman, Stevens, Chapman & Co., was elected vice-president; W. J. Tobin of the First National was named secretary, and R. E. Towle of the Security National, treasurer. Retiring President John G. Mackean was toastmaster at the banquet, which was provided by the representatives of the Wales Adding Machine Company. One hundred and ten men came over from the St. Paul Chapter, and Minneapolis furnished only thirty more. Twenty participated in the annual contest.

John Zimmerman of the Security National added 250 checks on a Wales in three minutes and fifty seconds. S. R. Harley of the second National, St. Paul, got the next prize in 4:52. A. R. Larson of the Merchants National, St. Paul, made a record of 4:15. The checks totaled $81,207.64.

APPOINT NEW COMMITTEE

A new committee has been appointed by the president of the New York State Bankers Association, to be known as the "Committee on Agricultural Development and Education." The names of the members of this committee are Chas. M. Dow, chairman, president National Chautauqua County Bank of Jamestown; Robert H. Treman, president of the Tompkins County National Bank of Ithaca, and George E. Allen, educational director of the American Institute of Banking.

E. H. Rollins and Sons, of Chicago, were the high bidders on an issue of $130,000 school bonds in Muskogee, Okla., last week.

Missouri Convention

The executive council of the Missouri Bankers Association has sent out a handsome folder inviting bankers to attend the twenty-second annual convention of the association to be held at Joplin on May 21st and 22d. The sessions will be held in the Joplin theatre.

WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS DENIED BANK ROBBER

A petition for a writ of habeas corpus made on behalf of John McNamara to prevent his extradition to New Westminster, B. C., has been denied. McNamara is wanted in New Westminster for robbing the branch of the Bank of Montreal of nearly $300,000 last September. His counsel filed an appeal and announced their intention of carrying the matter to the supreme court of the United States.

NEW ISSUE OF BONDS PLANNED

Spencer, Trask & Co., 72 West Adams Street, are planning to bring out in a short time a new issue of bonds of one of the larger western corporations. The issue will be a 5 per cent refunding bond, and full details will be furnished the public in a few days.

Members of the Chicago clearing house met yesterday afternoon to determine what attitude should be taken by local banks in regard to the proposed investigation of the "money trust" by the committee on currency and banking of the national house of representatives.

MONTANA TO GET 12 MILLIONS FROM COPPER MAGNATES

Butte, Mont.—John D. Ryan says: "The members of bankers' party now in Butte have planned and agreed to spend $12,000,000 in Montana in next twelve months."

"In this period Butte will show greater prosperity than any year in its history. Copper market is splendid, consumption world over is at maximum, and prices satisfactory. Outlook is that during next few years all producers will have to do is to produce every pound of copper that can be taken out of ground."

"Prospects for business are very much better, and I see no reason why presidential nominations and political discussion should interfere with our steady progress."

ASSAILS MONETARY PLAN

Criticizing the National Reserve Association monetary plan as evolved by Senator Aldrich, Edmund D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company, declared that it would be, if established, decidedly inimical to the general welfare of the country. He asserted it would make possible a condition which would give a few men control of the greatest reserve fund in the world, possibly for selfish personal interests. He addressed members of the Chicago Real Estate Board at their weekly luncheon on Thursday.

Spokane, Wash., May 7.—Settlement of the 8,000 to 10,000 delinquent tax claims of the city against about $3,000,000 worth of city property for taxes of 1892, and prior years, will be accepted in full settlement twice the original tax debt instead of five times the original debt.

This was the decision of the city council's committee after the 20-year-old records of the unpaid taxes, which were recently discovered, were gone over. The city can legally collect the full amount of the delinquent taxes, which amount to from $10,000 to $12,000, and interest at 20 per cent a year for twenty years. It was decided to require payment of only twice the principal, which is equal to a 60 per cent straight reduction on a whole sum of tax and interest.

The 40 per cent compromise, however, must be paid before August 1st according to the committee's ruling, or the city will issue deeds to the property to itself.

The committee, which made the decision consisted of Mayor Hindley, Finance Commissioner Fairley, City Treasurer Lewis and Assistant Corporation Counsel H. M. Dunphy. The city council is expected to readily approve the decision.

To Vote on Bond Issue

A vote on a bond issue of $150,000 will be called by the school board soon to determine whether or not the board shall issue bonds to that amount for the building of additions to the Roosevelt, Hay's Park, Frances Willard, Emerson and Whittier schools. Members of the board say these districts are badly in need of improvements to their buildings and believe the bond issue the only alternative. The present bonded indebtedness of the school district is $1,976,500 and the proposed bond issue will take these figures over the two million mark. During the last five years $1,350,000 has been raised by bonds, and if the proposed issue of $150,000 is carried it will be the least amount that has been asked for during this period. Besides these bond issues, the board has realized $115,000 from the sale of the Franklin grounds and $90,000 from the sale of the Field grounds. The board is also contemplating the expenditure of $6,000 in repairs on the North Central high school building.

Give Up Co-operative Investment Company and Bank

The co-operative Investment Company and bank, proposed by City Commissioner D. C. Coates to deal in city securities, has been given up by the commissioner and others interested in its organization following an unfavorable opinion given by the city legal department recently. The idea has not been dropped entirely, according to Commissioner Coates, who says the proposition of organizing a straight municipal bank, incorporating all the functions planned for the co-operative investment company and extending the scope of the proposition, will be taken up as soon as the cities of Washington are given home rule.

The present state law does not authorize a municipal bank and the co-operative investment company was therefore planned. The latter will be impracticable under the laws for banks and investment companies. The co-operative investment company and bank was principally to buy city certificates and resell them without profit in small denominations to citizens desiring to invest in them on the installment plan.

Pleads Guilty

James White of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, charged with issuing checks not backed by funds in a number of North Idaho towns, pleaded guilty and was sentenced by Judge L. E. Worstell to pay a fine of $150 and costs, or serve a jail sentence of 75 days. The checks were drawn on the Scandinavian-American Bank of Spokane. White was taken into custody at St. Maries, Idaho, after the checks had been returned from Spokane.

Daniel Morgan

Daniel Morgan, a well known banker of Spokane and one of the largest land owners in the Northwest, who is an enthusiast in dry farming, has accepted an invitation from the Canadian Board of Control of the Seventh International Dry-Farming Congress, to be held at Lethbridge, Alta., October 21st to 26th, to make a tour of the Northwestern and Pacific slope states as field commissioner.

Ask for Change of Venue

The prosecution in the case of the Farmers Bank and Trust Company of Kendrick, Latah county, Idaho, against U. S. Grant Evans, has filed affidavits and application for change of venue from this county to the district court of Shoshone county. Evans was cashier of the bank from its organization five years ago until last year, when he was charged with having embezzled about $14,000 of its funds and with having made false entries and alterations in the certificates of deposits records. The grounds assigned in the application for a change of venue are that the prosecution can not get a fair trial in either Latah, Nez Perce, Idaho, Lewis or Clearwater counties because of prejudice against the Vollmer Clearwater Grain Company, controlled by John P. Vollmer, who also controls the bank.

Banking Notes

C. A. Wallace, owner of a private bank at Republic, Wash., has filed a petition of bankruptcy in the clerk's office of the federal court. Wallace's debts are estimated at $100,000.

Recently compiled statistics show that one-tenth of the depositors in the postal savings banks in the state of Washington are Spokane people, and their deposits amount to about one-eighteenth of the money. According to these statistics, there are 5,000 depositors in this state and of this number, 622 are Spokane accounts. The state ranks in the ninth place in the number of accounts, and sixth in amount of money deposited. The average amount to the credit of each depositor is considerably larger in Washington than is the average amount for the United States.

August Paulsen, a millionaire mining man of Spokane, and former director of the State Bank of Commerce of Wallace, Idaho, will have to stand trial for making false entries in the bank's books. A demurrer which was entered was not sustained by the state supreme court.

Seattle

The statement showing the condition of Seattle banks on April 18th, called for by the comptroller of the currency and the state bank examiner, is one of the best ever made by local financial institutions. The deposits of Seattle banks on April 18th were the largest in the history of Seattle, aggregating $79,935,040, or $1,580,083 in excess of the highest point previously reached by deposits, on November 10, 1910, when the item stood at $78,375,957. The statement shows that loans stood at $46,131,234, compared with $44,022,762 February 20th.

CHICAGO CHAPTER, A. I. B.

By OTTO J. KRAMPIKOWSKY.

The Chicago Chapter debating team vs. the senate team of the Y. M. C. A. debated on the question, "Should Capital Punishment be Abolished," last Tuesday evening, May 7th, at the Northwestern University building. The affirmative side was taken by the senate team of the Y. M. C. A. and the negative side was taken by the Chicago Chapter team, composed of Joseph J. Schroeder, of the National Bank of the Republic; John W. Gorby, of the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank, and J. Harry Ashley, of the Corn Exchange National. The judges were Mr. Pratt and Mr. Castberg, attorneys and Mr. Moran of the postal service. The official timekeepers were Mr. Goetz and Mr. Reynolds. Each speaker was allowed twelve minutes to speak and five minutes for each man for rebuttal.

Mr. Saunders, of the senate team of the Y. M. C. A., was the first man to speak on the affirmative side, strictly condemning capital punishment as a most brutal punishment, stating that it had a tendency to increase murders instead of decreasing them, also giving statistics of the various countries where capital punishment had been abolished, compared with countries where it still was in existence.

Mr. Schroeder, of the Chicago Chapter team, was the first man to speak for the negative side, and upheld capital punishment as a deterrent against crime, and stated that it was a just punishment for murder, and that it should not be abolished. He also made reference to the fact that after the hanging of the four Guelzow murderers last February, there were only eight murders in the six weeks following the hanging in the city of Chicago, as compared with sixteen the year previous, giving the hanging of the murderers as his view of the decrease in crime.

Mr. Cole, next on the affirmative side, illustrated the number of murders committed during the years of 1900 to 1905, stating that over 42,419 murders were committed during this time, whereas only 619 of the 42,419 murderers were executed by way of capital punishment, illustrating this as to the view taken today by the people of the United States toward abolishing capital punishment.

Mr. Ashley, next on the negative side, upheld capital punishment as being the most humane punishment meted out to a murderer, as compared with life imprisonment, where a man is deprived of his liberty, which is the most precious gift to mankind, and that life imprisonment was barbarous, and inhuman as against hanging of a murderer.

Mr. Jones, next on the affirmative side, stated that the only way to stop murder and crime was to perfect civilization. He condemned child labor, which he stated had a tendency to demoralize the children. He also stated that capital punishment should be abolished and instead of punishment being meted out to the murderer or criminal, he should be treated kindly in every way possible, letting him feel that it was our intention to better him instead of punishing him.

Mr. Gorby, next on the negative side, upheld capital punishment, and cited the stand taken by the Hon. Chief Justice John Marshall, in favor of capital punishment, as well as an army under the stars and stripes about to engage the enemy, when suddenly a mine is exploded in their midst and nearly 10,000 heroes of the stars and stripes sent to their graves perpetrated by a traitor to the stars and stripes, and that instead of hanging the traitor to his country for the killing of the 10,000 he would be told it was our intention to aid him to be good again and not hang him.

After Mr. Saunders delivered his rebuttal, a recess of a few minutes was granted for the judges to decide on the winning team. After the recess was over Mr. Castberg stated that all the judges had been greatly influenced by the various speakers and that they had a hard time coming to a decision, and finally decided that the affirmative side were the winning team.

ROCHESTER CHAPTER NEWS

By C. F. Rothmeyer, Secretary

The annual banquet of the Rochester (New York) Chapter was held at Powers Hotel on the evening of April 23d. With the exception of the convention last year it was the largest and most interesting gathering of bank men ever held in this city. Nearly 250 men were in attendance, including many out-of-town guests. At the close of the dinner John Henderson, Jr., presiding, introduced Judge John D. Lynn as toastmaster, who enlivened the evening with an abundance of wit and humor. The first speaker was St. Elmo Lewis of Detroit, whose subject was "The Banker and the Changing Era." Mr. Lewis also touched upon "Bank Advertising," drawing a sharp contrast between a banker of several years ago who refused to advertise and the banker of to-day. Advertising, he said, was the voice of the banker making itself heard in the market place. His address was followed with close attention and at its conclusion received hearty applause. Mr. Lewis was followed by O. Howard Wolf of Chicago, secretary of the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association, who spoke on "Co-Operation." Mr. Wolf proved an able and interesting speaker, well familiar with his subject, and in his closing remarks led up to the address that followed on the "Numerical System," by J. A. Ward of the Cleveland National Bank. Mr. Ward illustrated very clearly how this system, when once universally adopted, would facilitate the handling of all items coming through the bank. "Confessions of a Publicity Man" was the subject of F. W. Ellsworth of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York. Mr. Ellsworth spoke of some of the business trials that confront the banker in demands for advertising, contributions to funds and personal donations. The banker, he said, is made the target for many attempted frauds. The last speaker was Raymond B. Cox, president of the American Institute of Banking, now assistant cashier of the Fourth National Bank of New York. While the subject of the address of Mr. Cox was "Efficiency," he supplemented this with a general talk on the educational value of the Institute. In an interesting manner which held the attention of the audience he reviewed the work of the fourteen thousand members of the Institute in seventy cities, extending from Seattle in the North to New Orleans in the South, and from San Francisco in the West to New York in the East. He showed by apt illustrations how in these different cities the members were working along the same lines as the Rochester Chapter to improve their standing in the financial community.

Group Meetings the Past Week

This week has been a busy one for the various groups of Iowa. Group 5 met at Council Bluffs Tuesday; Group 2 at Fort Dodge Wednesday; Group 8 at Clinton Thursday; Group 6 at Colfax Friday. The latter meeting was contingent upon whether speakers could be secured. The speaker which it was expected to present was forced to decline and at this writing his successor has not been made certain. A list of the officers chosen at each group meeting will be published complete in a later edition of this paper.

Group 1 at Sheldon

The meeting of Group 1 at Sheldon, Thursday, May 2d, was the most successful of the sixteen which the bankers of this group have had. The attendance was over 150. The headquarters were at the Sheldon Armory. Chairman W. H. Eddy called the group to order at 10 o'clock. Rev. C. M. Westlake of the Congregational church pronounced the invocation. There was music and the address of welcome by Fred E. Frisbee, president of the First National of Sheldon. The response was by George S. Parker, president of the Live Stock National of Sioux City. President E. J. Curtin of the I. B. A. spoke on "What the Iowa Bankers Association is Doing." Secretary P. W. Hall of the I. B. A. was the next speaker. Mr. Hall was formerly a Sheldon banker and he was given an enthusiastic greeting by his friends and neighbors. H. N. Grut of the Continental and Commercial of Chicago spoke in place of C. R. Hannan, Jr., of Council Bluffs, and Cyrus A. Barr of the Des Moines National spoke in place of John Cownie of Des Moines. There were reports, election of officers and adjournment. From 11 to 12 the wives of the Sheldon bankers entertained the wives of visiting bankers at the Frisbee home. At 1:30 dinner was served at the Arlington Hotel. The Sheldon bankers were hosts.

Group 5 at Council Bluffs

The program for the meeting of Group 5 at Council Bluffs, Tuesday, May 7th, was as follows: Headquarters at the Grand Hotel; 10 A. M., register and get acquainted. Chairman, N. V. Kuhl of Earling called the convention to order at 10:30. The address of welcome was given by Mayor Spencer Smith of Council Bluffs and the response was by Joseph Ross of Audubon. The main address was by Hon. Emmet Tinley of Council Bluffs and his subject was "Protective Feature of the I. B. A." Then came general discussion, reports, election of officers, and luncheon at 1:30. The group meeting was well attended and the bankers had an unusually interesting day.

Group 8 at Clinton

The meeting of Group 8 was held at Clinton, May 9th. The bankers convened at the Wapsipinicon club rooms at 10:30 A. M. There were reports of committees, general discussions and an interesting session generally. At 1 P. M. the Clinton and Lyons bankers entertained the visitors at luncheon. In the afternoon the program was published as follows: A. L. Bartholomew, Preston, "Duties and Privileges of Bank Directors"; George L. Schoonover, "Good Roads Agitation as a Banker's Asset"; George M. Titus, Muscatine, "Bank Directors in Legislature." The attendance was first class and the hosts outdid themselves in making their visitors feel at home. There was especial interest in the address on good roads as the bankers of Iowa are taking a great interest in affairs that relate to the upbuilding of the rural communities of the state and in agricultural affairs generally.

Dispute Over Illegal Statute

Attorney-General Cosson has taken a hand in the question of whether a banker, if he has voluntarily permitted an assessment to be made against bank stock under the terms of a certain statute, has the right to cancel that assessment if the statute is later held illegal. He has intervened in a case brought by Grant McPherrin, now president of the Drake Park Bank of Des Moines but formerly president of the First National at Clearfield. Mr. McPherrin demands that the assessment be canceled, but the attorney-general holds differently and Special Counsel C. A. Robbins will represent the state in the action. It appears that the question is involved in many cases which have been started in Iowa. In some counties the tax has been refunded and in others it has been retained. The attorney-general hopes to secure a legal opinion that will make a rule for all Iowa. Some years ago the Home Savings Bank at Des Moines secured an opinion through the United States supreme court to the effect that the statute discriminated against state and savings banks because it provided for taxation of stock in savings banks to individual stockholders while national banks were handled in a different way. The Estherville bank case, famous in Iowa, was before the Iowa supreme court and the assessment law was knocked out. Then the last legislature amended the statute so that now it is undoubtedly legal. There will be considerable interest among Iowa bankers in the outcome of the suit in which Mr. McPherrin is to be the "goat."

J. H. Ingwersen Receives Favorable Replies

General endorsement seems to have followed the letter which J. H. Ingwersen of the Peoples Trust and Savings at Clinton has been sending over the state urging co-operation in securing certain bank legislation. Des Moines bankers believe that the questions will come up at the state bankers association convention and probably some definite action taken as to the attitude that the banks shall assume prior to the next legislative session. Mr. Ingwersen wants state and savings banks put on an equal basis with national banks in acting as postal bank depositories. He also wants permission granted to Iowa banks to loan money on real estate in other states. This latter law is always before the Iowa legislature but seems to lose out before the session ends.

Citizens Savings at Cedar Falls

The opening of the new Citizens Savings building at Cedar Falls appears to have been an event of unusual interest. It is estimated that fully 5,000 people visited the handsome new institution, and there was a great scramble to see who would be first to make a deposit therein. Two orchestras played during the day and evening. Cigars were given to the men and carnations to the women. The new structure itself is handsome and modern in every way. The fixtures are especially beautiful and at the same time useful. The interior arrangement is exceptional in the way of facilities for prompt and adequate transaction of business. The institution is eighteen years old. C. A. Wise, one of the best known financiers in northeastern Iowa, is president. W. N. Hostrop and H. N. Silliman are vice-presidents and J. E. Evans is cashier.

away before they had accomplished anything further than to bore holes in the door. It appears that the busy editor, Elliott Hurd, was kept in his office on business until very late that night. Apparently the robbers did not wish to work until he had left. Later, Claude Pawell, an employee of the bank, passed the institution on his way to the depot to take an early train to Bedford. So the men gave it up and quit, leaving their soap behind them. The footprints on the walk in front of the bank indicated that a third man stood guard on the outside while his confederates worked within.

Catch Woman Forger

time in running down a woman forger after she had defrauded that institution out of $250 on a bogus check and she was arrested at Jesup. The woman was accompanied by a little child of three years and she bore herself with confidence as she walked up to the cashier's window and presented a check drawn on the Jesup State. The check was cashed but was discovered to be a forgery shortly afterwards. The woman was apprehended within a short time. The Waterloo police were also successful in locating one Arthur Quaintance, wanted for forgery, and he was arrested at Glendive, Mont., and returned to Waterloo. Quaintance cashed a check for $125 on a Waterloo bank while he was in St. Paul. When the bank found the check was a forgery, Quaintance had gone west. It is said that Quaintance, who was recently married, forged the checks with which he purchased his wedding clothes.

Death of Judge J. W. Freeland

Judge J. W. Freeland, aged 70, pioneer jurist and banker at Corydon, dropped dead while at work in his garden. Death was entirely unexpected. The deceased was in the banking business with E. E. Clark, now president of the Bankers Life Insurance Company of Des Moines, prior to 1874, and their institution was robbed by the famous James boys. In 1874 the institution was sold and Judge Freeland joined in the organization of the Wayne County State at Corydon. For the past twenty-seven years he had been president of the institution. Judge Freeland was at one time democratic candidate for congress and at another time candidate for a place on the supreme court bench.

Increase in Clearings for April

Des Moines bankers are elated over the showing for April when the Clearing House Association announced an increase in clearings of $3,516,335.07 for the month over the clearings for April last year. The total this year was $21,107,881.99 and for April last year, $17,591,546.92. For the last week of the month the clearings gained $215,305.50 over the corresponding week last year.

Investigate Work of Kansas Tax Law Commission

The Iowa tax commission has been in Kansas looking into tax laws there and getting pointers from the Kansas commission. It is regarded as practically certain that the Iowa commission will recommend a permanent commission such as Kansas has. There are many good features in the Kansas tax laws that the Iowans will study at length. Bankers are taking an especial interest in the doings of the Iowa commission. They are hoping that there will be some amendments recommended along the line of improved and equitable bank taxation. B. E. Stonebraker of Rockwell City and C. N. Voss of Davenport are two bankers on the commission. Both went to Kansas.

Commence Work On New Building

The Iowa State Bank and Trust Company of West Liberty has commenced work on what it declares will be the finest bank building in Iowa for a town the size of West Liberty. That is rather a strong statement as Iowa has some remarkably attractive bank structures. The bank is at present doing business in a temporary building erected on Main Street. The institution was established in 1897 and has made a phenomenal growth. The plans provide for a structure modern in every respect, built of Bedford stone with concrete fireproof construction. The first floor will be used by the bank. There will be safety deposit vaults, a storage vault in the basement, steam vacuum heat, the latest in the way of fixtures.

Iowa Banking Notes

John Ware has been arrested at Seymour charged with mailing threatening letters to Dr. A. C. Cover as mentioned in a similar letter to THE CHICAGO BANKER. The government charges that Ware threatened dire disaster to Dr. Cover if the latter did not disgorge $1,000. It is thought in Des Moines that Ware is related to Roy Ware of the Farmers and Drovers Bank which failed at Seymour some months ago and that the letters had some relation to that institution.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

"Cherking up" is the way one Sioux City banker this week expressed the trade situation of Sioux City and its territory. Local merchants are having a fair trade, and business in the country has picked up materially this spring, due to sales of farm produce. Wholesalers, therefore, are having a good trade, and money is generally easy. Probably there never has been a brighter crop prospect in northwestern Iowa and the corners of Nebraska, South Dakota and Minnesota than there is to-day. Without an exception, every crop is promising. Winter was delayed long enough to save fruit from early budding and later frost-bites. Spring rains, that have been frequent and gentle, followed a winter of unusually large precipitation. The soil therefore is in perfect condition, and if this territory does not produce bounteous crops it will be for reasons that are not now apparent. The outlook, together with the ease with which money is obtainable, has made this spring a favorable building season. The city therefore is witnessing an unusual amount of construction work. Building permits for the spring months have thus far totaled nearly a million dollars.

Group 1 Elects Officers for Ensuing Year

At the meeting of Group 1 of the Iowa Bankers Association, held at Sheldon, the following officers were elected: President, C. J. Wohlenberg, cashier Holstein Savings Bank; secretary, Fred E. Frisbee, president of the First National of Holstein. Chas. Shade, president of the First National Bank of Sheldon, was endorsed for president of the state association. E. J. Curtin, president of the state association, and P. W. Hall, secretary, were in attendance at the meeting.

Banking News

After having managed the business ever since he instituted the Commercial Bank of Kearney, Neb., five years ago, T. B. Garrison, its president, has turned over all his interests to his son, T. B. Garrison, Jr., who was cashier.

A new bank is to be established at Cushing, Ia. The promoters plan a two-story building on a lot already purchased.

The clearing house reports for Aberdeen, S. D., show an increase for April of nearly $60,000 over the record of the preceding April.

Postal savings bank receipts in April at the Sioux City postoffice showed a falling off from March of $895. The total was only $1,316.

Sioux City banks have begun their summer closing schedule. Doors will close at 1 p. m. on Saturdays until September.

Sioux City bankers who attended the Group 1 meeting at Sheldon, Ia., were the following: John McHugh, of the First National; Geo. S. Parker, of the Live Stock National; J. A. Magoun, of the Northwestern National; W. P. Manley, C. W. Britton, and D. M. Brownlee, of the Security National.

Among the Visiting Bankers

W. G. Bolser, president of the German-American Savings Bank, of Le Mars, Ia., was a Sioux City visitor Friday.

Herman Fortin, cashier of the Farmers Bank of Salix, Ia., transacted business in Sioux City Monday.

Oscar F. Thieme, former assemblyman, has been chosen to succeed E. B. Ingalls as cashier of the South Milwaukee Bank.

Officers making the reports were J. W. Hoopes, secretary; Thomas F. Rodgers, treasurer, and W. A. Boyd, chief detective.

The section of the secretary's report relating to membership is of pertinent interest in that it shows the growth made in the last year. It is as follows:

"From the standpoint of enrolling new members, I am gratified to state that during this year we have enrolled 126 banks. Our last year's enrollment numbered 1193. To this amount is added 126 members making a total of 1319. From this number I have to report a loss of eleven members.

Deducting the eleven members from the total of 1319, leaves a balance of 1308 members. Again from this number, I regret to state, that since my last report thirty-six of our members were dropped from our rolls on account of consolidations, liquidations and failures. Thus you will see that the net gain for this year, under these trying conditions, was 79 members.

"The increased interest in any association is naturally shown by its growth, and the following table of figures will show conclusively that our association is steadily growing, and that our losses are very small, scarcely to be reckoned with.

1905	630 members
1906	706 members
1907	855 members
1908	872 members
1909	946 members
1910	1093 members
1911	1193 members
1912	1272 members

Interesting Legislative Matters

His report on legislative matters is as follows:

"Before another annual meeting we will have the legislature with us again, and as there are several matters of interest to bankers, which will be presented again, our legislative committee will perhaps have an unusually busy time. I take this opportunity again to say that the committee work is largely hampered by our members. The work itself is hard, but it could be made a great deal easier if our members would respond promptly to the requests that the committee makes of them.

"The recent decision of the supreme court on compress receipts necessitates legislation along this line. This is perhaps the most important matter of its kind that has confronted the bankers for several years. When the legislative committee writes you to take this or any other matter up with your legislators, please do so promptly.

"An effort will be made this year to have the uniform negotiable instrument law enacted in this state. Co-operation of our members along this line is also urged.

"The recent ruling of the United States internal revenue commissioner calling on banks to render corrected gross income reports wherever taxes have been deducted, is a matter of considerable importance to the bankers of this state, for it simply means that they are to be taxed by the United States government on the amount that they have paid for state, county and municipal taxes. The proposition is so manifestly unfair that it seems to me that a test case on this ruling should be arranged for at once by members of this association, and the suggestion is here made, that the present convention take some action along this line."

Should Accomplish Much Good

F. M. Law arrived during the course of the session, and in a short talk said that the bankers have come to San Antonio with seriousness of purpose and should accomplish much good during the convention.

Ed. R. Kone, commissioner of agriculture, made a forcible speech in which he said it gave him pleasure as a representative of the tillers of the soil, who are the wealth producers, to address the custodians of wealth. He complimented the bankers for their assistance in development of the state and urged co-operation between agricultural and banking interests.

Moses B. Hazeltine of Prescott, Ariz., representing the Arizona Bankers Association, made a short talk.

Afternoon Session

At the afternoon session addresses were made by C. A. Sanford, vice-president of the Commercial State Bank, Sherman on "Conscience in Banking," and by Jas. E. Ferguson, president of the Temple State Bank, on "Why the Aldrich Bill Should Not Pass." President Hamby and Mr. Ferguson started the fight against the National Reserve Association plan, and the latter made a very telling speech against the measure. Mr. Sanford's address will be found elsewhere in this edition.

Wednesday Session

That the Texas Bankers are opposed to the National Reserve Association plan of currency reform was brought out in a number of speeches by financiers assembled here. A resolution to be acted upon to-morrow indorses the action of the Texas congressmen and senators who opposed the measure. After the invocation by Rev. J. H. Quinn addresses were made by McLane Tilton, secretary of the Alabama Bankers Association, on "Crimes Against Cotton," and by Nathan Adams of Dallas on "The Necessity of Negotiable Compress Receipts and Better Handling of Cotton Bills of Lading." After the adjournment for lunch members of the American Bankers Association present met and elected Oscar Wells of Houston as Texas member of the nomination committee of the national association. At the afternoon session addresses were delivered by J. A. Pondrum, vice-president of the Texarkana National, on, "Can the Overdraft be Eliminated?" and by Hon. Hiram Glass of Austin on "Texas, Railroad Stock and Bond Law."

Women Bankers Form Organization

During a spirited meeting a Women's Banking Association was formed, the first of its kind in the United States. Miss Lena Riddle of Austin, editor of the Bankers Record, was elected president.

Last Day Session

Wm. J. Burns, president of the Wm. J. Burns National Detective Agency, will address the convention to-morrow. After the selection of the next place of meeting, officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

Entertainment Features

Among the entertainment features was an automobile ride for the ladies on Tuesday afternoon, taking them to the Country Club where an informal tea was served. In the evening a special vaudeville performance was given at the Plaza theatre. On Wednesday evening a special vaudeville performance was thony Hotel with a vaudeville performance and Dutch lunch on the roof garden of the hotel. On Thursday, immediately after adjournment for luncheon, a special train will leave the M. K. & T. depot for New Braunfels, where the delegates will be tendered a barbecue at Landa's Park.

SHRINERS MEET IN LOS ANGELES

The thirty-eighth annual convention of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine was formally opened in Los Angeles on Tuesday of this week. More than 100,000 persons witnessed the march of the Shriners' patrols in the first formal parade of the annual conclave. Nelson N. Lampert, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National of this city, is in Los Angeles attending the convention. The Shriners' convention being held at this time of the year precluded Mr. Lampert's going to Briarcliff to attend the sessions of the executive council of the American Bankers Association.

for agricultural development. George E. Allen is the active hayseed on this subject in New York.

JOS. G. BROWN of Raleigh, N. C., remains a favorite with every one, and is a most enjoyable companion, even on serious subjects.

BRIARCLIFF sent congratulations through Secretary J. W. Hoopes to the Texas Bankers Association, and Hoopes being "detained away," Edens wore his new badge on the other lapel of his coat.

FRED. KENT, Clay Hollister, and George Orde were among those who played in the rain, which they courteously called a Scotch Mist.

CHAIRMAN ARTHUR REYNOLDS of the Big Council visited nearly all the committee rooms, not to participate, but to keep track of the work being done. He thus understood the intent and the degree of earnestness behind most of the things which came up before the council on Tuesday and Wednesday.

COUNSEL PATON takes an interest in the new committees and fell in with the farmers' movement and was warmly welcomed.

J. F. SARTORI, who presided at the savings bank section meeting, then left for Europe, shipping a big new six-cylinder and a chauffeur in advance. He will not be back in Los Angeles until after the Detroit convention.

SARTORI had his beginnings in Lamars, Iowa, and called his big forty million dollar Security Savings Bank after the Security National founded by his friend Manly of Sioux City. Manly and Sartori dined together at Briarcliff to talk over "early days."

AUGUST 7th and 8th was fixed for the second annual conference of bankers on the agricultural movement at Minneapolis and St. Paul. The sessions will be as before in Minneapolis on the first day and in St. Paul on the second day. This is the most interesting of the new movements in the A. B. A. ranks.

MESDAMES Farrell, Smith, Greene and Reynolds kept together and seemed to enjoy every facility of the magnificent Lodge.

PRESIDENT LEWIS E. PIERSON was one of the early ones at the railway station with his big touring car to haul the bankers over to Briarcliff. There was a story that Pierson's bank is to expand by about twelve millions, taking in a neighboring institution. Will anyone out West be sorry to see Pierson's hopes realized? You bet not!

YES, the council was quite willing to help along the back-to-the-farm movement. Full hearing was given to the committee.

G. M. REYNOLDS "came back" from New York on Monday, where he went direct on the Special, not stopping at Briarcliff on the way out.

REFORM blew up from way out at Atchison, Kan., and the finance committee passed a resolution not to pay hereafter for committeemen's expenses. Some old soldiers have been in the habit of devising something to have referred to a committee and then to get on the committee.

ONE man is said to have had the benefit of an A. B. A. expense account for thirteen consecutive years with nothing to show for it.

A NOTHER genius has twice revived an old committee which, counting in his terms on the council, has kept him in expense money for two or three eastern trips per year for the past fifteen years. Nice work.

GOVERNOR BAILEY proposes to cut them off. The committeemen on the sections, not members of council, will likewise fall if the resolution goes through. Some members disbelieve in paying the expenses of any officer of the association on any occasion.

LOUD kicks were heard on all hands about the employees from 11 Pine Street going to the mid-year conferences in such great numbers and including the whole family in the expense account. No legislation should be required to change notions and customs of this kind when they become abuses. The committee on administration or the finance committee should use the blue pencil—or the axe.

THE committee on amendments went on record as favoring an early "revision and rejuvenation" in the true Illinois style, also in favor of confining committee work as much as possible to members of council as was intended in the constitution. They think they would get better work, and the longest any man then could attach himself to a job would be during his term of office.

IT is quite likely that a wave of reform will sweep the deck at Detroit if conditions are not promptly and broadly changed by the officials in power.

R. W. NOBLE, president of the Bethany (Ill.) State, is one of the "live wires" of Moultrie county. Besides being president of a thriving bank, he is conducting a grain business. This year he has for sale some very fine seed corn, which, when tested, shows a 90 to 95 per cent germination. Anyone desiring such corn would do well to communicate with him.

DOWN in Bethany, Illinois, they have a community association, which is incorporated under the title of "The Local and Agricultural Improvement Association of Bethany." Each year some kind of a contest is held and cash prizes awarded. For 1912 the contest is for the largest yield of corn on ten acres. The contestants are to keep records of the work they do, and the winners will tell how they accomplished their results, thus bringing out some valuable information. Other subjects of interest to the community will be taken up from time to time. A small membership fee is charged, and at present there are about 125 members in the association.

THE comptroller of the currency, recently issued a charter to the First National Bank of Mazon, Ill. The capital of the new institution is $35,000. F. H. Clapp is president, and G. E. Clapp is cashier. The First National succeeds the Peoples Bank of Mazon.

GIRARD NATIONAL of Philadelphia occupies the oldest bank building in America, it having been built for the first bank of the United States in 1795. It was bought by Stephen Girard in 1815, and occupied by him until his death in 1831. The Girard Bank and the Girard National have been the tenants of the building since 1832. The interior of the structure has been remodeled and contains the most modern of equipment.

THE capital of the institution is two millions, with surplus and net profits of $4,716,095.98; deposits are $46,277,089.45. Francis B. Reeves is president.

BANK OF COMMERCE, Winnebago, Minn., has been closed by Kelsey S. Chase, state examiner. The bank has a capital of $20,000 and deposits of $210,000.

BANK OF PITTSBURGH, in a very handsome statement issued at the last call, lays claim to the distinction of being the oldest bank in the United States west of the Alleghany Mountains, the institution having been founded in 1810. It has a capital stock of $2,400,000, and a surplus and undivided profits of $3,339,139.25. Deposits are well over twenty-one millions. Harrison Nesbit is president.

H. W. YATES CELEBRATES GOLDEN WEDDING

Henry W. Yates, president of the Nebraska National Bank of Omaha, and Mrs. Yates, celebrated their golden wedding at their beautiful home, "Hill Side," on April 22d. Over three hundred guests were present. They enjoyed the company of three daughters, one son, four grandchildren and one great-grandchild. They were wedded at Savannah, Mo., in 1862, Mr. Yates then being located in St. Joseph. The same year they came to Omaha, and shortly after he became cashier of the First National Bank, a position held until 1882. Then he founded the Nebraska National Bank, of which he has ever since been the president.

INDIANA GROUP MEETING

Group 7, Indiana, will hold its annual meeting this year at New Albany on May 16th. Luncheon will be served to the delegates by the New Albany banks at noon and the meeting will be called to order at 1:30. All those attending are invited to participate in the general discussions. It is suggested that those desiring to make extended remarks have the same reduced to writing in order to facilitate the work of the reporter. It is proposed to make the meeting of substantial benefit—not only to the banker, but also to the community. John C. Zulauf is chairman of the group and W. W. Cave is secretary.

IRVING-MERCANTILE NATIONAL

Irving-Mercantile National is a new fifty-million-dollar New York bank, under the presidency of Lewis E. Pierson, head of the Irving Exchange National, the consolidating bank. The bank taken over is the Mercantile National, known formerly as a Gould bank. Business will be conducted at the present banking rooms of the Irving until the new forty-five story building on Broadway is ready for occupancy. The Irving-Mercantile will be the strongest bank in the country devoted exclusively to commercial banking. Officers and directors of the participating banks will be retained.

The new home of the enlarged bank will be in the world-famous Woolworth building, which will be one of the chief points of interest to out-of-town visitors for years to come.

The consolidated bank will have a capital of $4,000,000, surplus of $3,000,000, with assets approximately $50,000,000. Since the first of the year Lewis E. Pierson, president of the Irving National Exchange, and representative of strong interests, has succeeded in merging three trust companies—the Broadway, the Savoy and the Flatbush of Brooklyn—forming one large trust company, known as the Broadway Trust Company. This latter institution will have its home in the Woolworth building, upon completion, along with the Irving-Mercantile National.

Lewis E. Pierson is a young man, as New York banking goes, and is an ex-president of the American Bankers Association. He is a force in its councils and is looked upon as a conservative, and as having had much to do with fixing firmly its sterling policies on business and financial subjects.

James B. Forgan

James B. Forgan, president of the First National Bank, expects to leave Chicago on the 28th of this month for a trip to Europe. He will sail on May 30th. The trip will be in the nature of a vacation, and Mr. Forgan expects to be away for about three months, returning to the city around the first of September. He intends to make a tour of Europe, visiting France and Germany, including Carlsbad and other places of interest.

RALPH C. WILSON FOR SECRETARY

Those who have it in mind to enter Ralph C. Wilson in the race for the secretaryship of the Illinois Bankers Association have been encouraged greatly by the offers of support which are coming from all over the state. Mr. Wilson is a man of attractive personality, a fine public speaker, an experienced banker, and of congenial and tolerant disposition. All of these qualities rarely are combined in one person and almost never to be obtained for positions such as the one referred to. Friends of Frank T. Joyner of East St. Louis are trying to get that gentleman's consent to put him up for the secretaryship. He has an almost universal acquaintance in banking circles, and many think would be an ideal man for the place.

A. E. Fitkin & Co., bankers, have removed their local offices from the Continental Bank Building to the Borland Block.

THERE was quite a telegraphic display of lightning rods down at Briarcliff last week. Some were of the self-erecting kind, but mostly the work was done by friends of those who really are of correct dimensions to fill "the chairs" of the association.

LEDYARD COGSWELL was surrounded by a whole Marconi station erected by his New York and eastern friends, and aided and abetted by his western and southern supporters. Not a word did he say but it was pretty well understood that his name will be entered for the chairmanship of the Big Council at the Detroit meeting.

JOSEPH WAYNE, JR., of Pennsylvania, was being urged, also, by warm and ardent supporters, while older members talked some of R. E. James of the same state. Edward L. Howe of Princeton was in the talk also.

JOSEPH CHAPMAN, JR. (farmer Joe), was billed to appear under the spot-light, "next year or the year after," as one who had repeatedly won his spurs as a true knight of the progressives in the A. B. A. fold.

SOL WEXLER was an interesting and interested participant and promptly set at rest any fears which might have existed that "the race for the chairmanship" at New Orleans had left any sore spots with him.

TO correct an impression wrongfully created by a paragraph in this department (page 31) last week, let it be understood that it was the "official" family, from "11 Pine Street," which was referred to, and not the families respectively of the members of the official household. If kicking will cure, however, "we" are not the only ones entitled to credit.

FOR several years certain banking and financial papers in New York have been "after" the Journal Bulletin, published by the association. Farnsworth is charged with the "crime"—whatever it is. Failing to involve members or officials individually, a round-robin was gotten out, signed by all who could be induced to sign, but leaving out several important publications, and presented to the council.

TO the Chairman and Members of the Executive Council of the American Bankers Association.

Gentlemen: The undersigned, publishers of banking and financial periodicals, are desirous of placing before the Executive Council of the American Bankers Association the subject of the unfair and improper competition created to the detriment of those publications by the present policy of conducting the Journal of the Association. And, inasmuch as the subject has never been brought to the attention of the Executive Council in a body, we would respectfully request that a committee of three or five members of the Council be appointed at this meeting to investigate the subject on a fair and equitable basis.

THE signers are: The Bankers Publishing Company, by J. R. Duffield, secretary; The American Banker, Charles D. Steurer, president; The Financial Age, F. Howard Hooke; The Financier, by C. A. Hazen; The Banking Law Journal, A. F. White, editor, and A. D. Macpherson, vice-president Bankers Encyclopedia Company.

THE council did not grant a committee but invited the petitioners to come to Detroit for a hearing before the council. They are to show wherein they are injured by the Bulletin, which bankers generally regard as almost indispensable. No western paper has signed the kick. Only those papers conducting a general printing, law-opinion, or special issue business complain.

MEMBERS of council are wise in their generation, and readily can tell whether or not the good of the association or private interests are at the bottom of the petition. In this office the Journal-Bulletin is in the highest favor.

SELF-INTEREST isn't a good basis of complaint, and the round-robin should be so changed as to make the "subject of inquiry" some modification of the Bulletin policy which would make it a better and more helpful paper rather than to take it out of the field entirely in New York by reducing it to impotence.

MR. AND MRS. F. A. VANDERLIP gave the members of council and of committees a reception at Beechwood, a big thousand-acre estate, formerly the property of W. Seward Webb, a scion of the Vanderbilt family. There was a dinner later at the Sleepy Hollow Golf Club, former residence of the late Elliott M. Sheppard. The W. K. Vanderbilt estate joins that of Mr. Vanderlip. Both entertainments by the Vanderlips were faultlessly carried out and were much enjoyed by those fortunate enough to be present.

C. H. HUTTIG was, after all, the best thing that happened at Briarcliff. He had to be protected from the greetings showered upon him on his entry, and it was arranged for him to appear at the banquet after the other guests had been seated. It was a personal ovation of the rarest kind.

AMONG those who spoke was Mr. Huttig. He said but for three things he never would again have been with the boys. The three were his faithful and tireless nurse (Mrs. Huttig); the skill of the surgeons, and the prayers and kind wishes of his friends, the bankers. Mrs. H. cried softly at this but the rest stood and cheered the plucky, big-hearted speaker, who had won as hard a fight as ever comes to man.

LATER, Mr. Huttig left for his farm in Iowa, and on the 25th will be given a reception and banquet in St. Louis to show in some measure how he is appreciated in the city he has helped so much. It will be a "Meet Me in Saint Louis, Louie," and no mistake.

COL. F. H. FRIES measured up with the tallest-timber-in-the-woods at the big trust company banquet, and was voted to be a matchless toastmaster and presiding officer. Coming after such a man as Oliver C. Fuller, it was no easy task.

THE trust company banquet is a national affair, and nearly seven hundred tickets were sold. It is a standing reminder of the initiative and efficiency of Secretary Babcock. No banker spoke at the big eat, which some thought a trifle strange. Perhaps the craft will not be barred in future.

PRETTY hard for bankers to be content with rambling, semipolitical talks, when such past-masters of eloquence as Festus J. Wade, to say nothing of the other spell binders, was at hand. It isn't likely that the function permanently will bar banker and financial orators in favor of the quasi-political.

THE sections send up the very best men to represent them on the council. There are Fries, Poillon and Goff in the trust company chairs; Stephenson, Sartori and Aiken for the savings banks; Van Vechten, Ruggles and Ottley from the clearing house section, and good old Doctor Hoopes for the secretaries. Can you beat them?

SOME of the states are particularly blessed in strong men on their delegations. Pennsylvania has Robert E. James, Joseph Wayne, Jr., John G. Reading, and D. McK. Lloyd. California has H. S. Fletcher, James K. Lynch, and W. H. High. Illinois has Nelson H. Greene, Nelson N. Lampert, W. G. Edens and William George, and New York has Ledyard Cogswell, Walter E. Frew, James G. Cannon, and Fred W. Hyde.

KANSAS is strong in W. J. Bailey, P. W. Goebel, and J. W. Berryman. Missouri sends W. C. Harris and C. G. Hutcheson. Nebraska has strong men in Victor B. Caldwell and E. R. Gurney.

WISCONSIN has A. J. Frame and John J. Sherman, and unfortunately both go off this year. Alternation is a better plan and keeps experienced men in action. Illinois will have two vacancies (George and Lampert) to fill with the possibilities of enough new members to get three new men.

A. V. LANE of Texas is another good man, who goes off this year. O. E. Dunlap, "the eloquent," is the other Texan, but he lasts

How New Alabama Banking Law Works

Supt. A. E. Walker tells of improved conditions and proposes amendments and new sections. He advocates further restrictions on use of words "Bank" and "Banker" and asks for a "Blue Sky Law" after the Kansas pattern

Alabama had been under her new state banking law about thirteen months when the convention of the bankers of the state met at Mobile. Among the addresses scheduled for the occasion none attracted more attention than did that made by A. E. Walker, superintendent of banks for the state. It was at the direct suggestion of the Alabama Bankers Association that the legislature gave to the state a strictly modern banking law with an up-to-date state banking department embracing supervision, examination, receiverships and other modern equipments of a well-defined banking system. Mr. Walker in the earliest paragraphs of his address gave the state association full credit both for preparing and passing the law in the state. He described eloquently the effect that the adoption of the new law had upon banking in the state, and referred to the cheerful and willing manner in which the bankers submitted to the new provisions put in force by the act itself. Mr. Walker was encouraged by leading bankers all over the state to endeavor to enforce strictly, but without harshness, the provisions of the law, which in many cases caused considerable change in the local methods of doing business. Without this support from the bankers the superintendent said that the law would not have been a success. The state banks of Alabama number two hundred and forty-three and the gross assets before the new banking law was adopted were slightly over sixty-two millions. At the close of the first year they were considerably over sixty-four millions, showing quite a gain under supervision and inspection. The increase in surplus and undivided profits was equal to 20 per cent of the increase in deposits. Cash on hand and in banks increased nearly double the increase shown by deposits, arguing greatly in favor of the increased standing of Alabama banks with banks in their localities. Banking capital was increased more than half a million in the same time. While only three national banks were established in the state during the year with a capital of $75,000, twenty-five new state banks were started and six applications are pending, the new banks to have combined capital of $438,000, all of which, Mr. Walker argues, proves the popularity of state banking under the new law. Banks all over the state have shown a willingness to abandon old practices and methods which long have been recognized as a menace to their growth and prosperity. Directors are beginning to show far more interest than ever before. Excess loans have been reduced, and loans to officers and directors are much better secured than heretofore. At the present time Superintendent Walker is making a quiet warfare against over-drafts, a method of banking which exists in many of the southern states. Present examiners were highly complimented for their efficiency. The superintendent asked for two more examiners and certain other allowances for his office force. Actual experience has shown that he cannot possibly examine all the banks in the state twice a year with his present force. The banking board of the state is composed of the state bank superintendent and Messrs. F. M. Buck of Mobile and George A. Searcy of Tus-kaloosa. These three gentlemen constitute the administration of the banking department where matters are left optional by the present law. The feature of Mr. Walker's address which attracted the most attention was that part of it in which he recommended amendments to the present law which has been in force for one year. Among the things which he suggested are:

"Section 6 provides for the assessment on banks to defray the expenses of the department. I think the assessments heavy enough. In some respects, however, it imposes an unequal burden on some of the banks. For instance, some weak banks should be examined, if possible, more than twice each year. There are other banks, perhaps, who refuse to follow certain instructions of the department and who are disregarding some of the requirements of the statute. These banks must be visited oftener and examined more frequently. It is not fair to the other banks to make them contribute to the cost of these additional examinations. I recommend, therefore, that section six be amended, so as to provide, that if, by reason of the condition of a bank, it should become necessary to examine it more than twice in any year, then the bank so examined should pay an additional assessment, equivalent to one-half the amount of their last yearly assessment, for each individual examination over two. In my opinion, this will have a tendency to strengthen weak banks and force others to comply with the law, in order to escape the burden imposed by additional examinations.

"Section 7 provides that every bank shall be visited and examined 'at least twice in each year.' I think this a wise provision and twice a year is seldom enough for examinations, but, as stated, two examiners cannot do this work and, unless more examiners can be provided for, I recommend that section 7 be amended by adding the words 'unless two examinations are impossible on account of the amount of work required.' It is very embarrassing to the department to be confronted with this positive requirement and be unable to meet it. Efficiency in examinations is liable to be sacrificed to the rush and hurry of an endeavor to meet this requirement for two examinations a year.

"Section 9 relates to the impairment of the capital stock of a bank and provides that when the superintendent of banks shall have reason to believe that the capital stock of a bank is reduced by impairment, or otherwise, below the amount required by law, it shall be his duty to require the bank to make good the deficit in 30 days. The words in this section, 'below the amount required by law,' are confusing, and no less an authority than one of the judges of the supreme court, who is a director in a state bank, gave it as his off-hand opinion, that a bank's capital would have to be impaired below the minimum amount with which a bank could begin business, as provided for in section 18 of the law, before its capital stock would be impaired. In other words, a bank can begin business in Mobile with a paid up capital of $25,000, this being the minimum amount 'required by law.' Yet, if a bank should organize with a capital of $1,000,000, its capital would have to be impaired beyond $975,000 before the superintendent of banks could require the bank to make good the impairment, and then he could only compel the bank to make the impairment good to the extent of the $25,000. With all due respect to the opinion of this eminent authority, I do not believe that section 9 of this law is susceptible of this construction. I think it was the clear intent of this section to declare that the paid up capital of a bank is a trust fund, for the protection of the depositors and other creditors of the bank, and, for that reason, must at all times be kept intact and unimpaired for that purpose. The rigid requirement of the law for the payment of the actual capital stock in money, before a charter can be granted, bears out this construction of the law, and emphasizes its importance. To my mind, this section is too important for any doubt. I, therefore, recommend the amendment of section 9 by striking out the words 'below the amount required by law,' and make the section to read that when the 'paid up' capital stock, etc., is reduced by impairment, or otherwise, the superintendent shall require the bank to make good the deficit in 30 days.

"Section 10 is at once the most elaborate and far-reaching section of this law. It provides for the seizure and liquidation of banks. It confers on the superintendent of banks very broad powers. The responsibilities of the superintendent of banks under this section are, to my mind, far greater than under all the other sections of the law combined. The limitation placed on the authority of the superintendent of banks in their seizure was most proper, and prohibiting the superintendent of banks from seizing any bank without being requested to do so by the board of directors, or directed by the banking board, was a wise provision. Any enlargement of the powers conferred on the superintendent of banks under this section should be carefully guarded. But I believe there should be an amendment to guard against a possible contingency that might arise and do great damage before this section under its terms could become operative. As stated, the 'superintendent of banks cannot take possession of the property or business of a bank unless requested so to do by the board of directors of the bank, or directed so to do by the banking board.' The section further provides that 3 days notice must be given of the meeting of the banking board to the members thereof, of which meeting of the board the bank shall have notice, and may be heard in person or by an attorney. If, therefore, an examiner finds a bank insolvent, and the officials dishonest and looting the bank and the public with no knowledge of these conditions, we can do nothing to prevent it. To give three days notice to the officials of the bank is but an invitation to them to hurry up their work of destruction and complete the wreck and then have time to get away before the banking board can meet. The directors themselves, being perhaps a party to the frauds, may refuse to request the superintendent to take possession of the bank. I believe it to be absolutely essential that a provision be inserted in section 10 of the law, giving the superintendent of banks the authority to immediately take charge of an insolvent bank, temporarily, in order to prevent further loss and injury, pending the action of the banking board, and in the event the board of directors of the bank refuse to act. Another provision of section 10, I think, should be also amended, and that is the provision fixing the salary of the agent of the superintendent of banks for liquidating banks. This provision is as follows: 'and such special agent shall receive a salary not exceeding $200 a month for the time he is actually engaged in assisting and liquidating the affairs of the bank.' This compensation is sufficient for a majority of the banks in the state that are under state supervision, but there are others, should they fail, it would be impossible to get a competent man to take the position of agent at $200 a month. Another objection I have to this compensation is that the average agent you employ, in fact all of them, will almost unconsciously take more time to liquidate a bank where a salary is paid than where a commission is paid and, in so doing, are liable to consume a considerable portion of the assets. Collections are very slow in a defunct bank and many complications arise that prolong the time for final settlement. I cannot help but believe, therefore, that a commission, graduated according to the amount of the assets coming into his hands, is the best and most economical basis for the pay of an agent to liquidate a bank. I, therefore, suggest the following additional amendment to this section on this subject: 'Such special agent shall receive a commission on receipts and disbursements as follows: Where the receipts and disbursements, coming into his hands, do not exceed $25,000, 3 per cent; where they exceed $25,000, but do not exceed $50,000, 2½ per cent; where they exceed $50,000, but do not exceed $100,000, 2 per cent; where they exceed $100,000 but do not exceed $200,000, 1½ per cent; and where they exceed $200,000, 1 per cent.'

"Section 12 provides that 'the information which shall be obtained by the superintendent of banks, or any bank examiner in making an examination into the affairs of any bank, shall be for the purpose of ascertaining the true condition of the affairs of said bank, and shall not be disclosed by the party making the examination to any person, except that the examiner shall make report of the condition of the affairs of the bank ascertained from the examination, to the superintendent of banks, and except that the superintendent may make publication or take action as a result of said report as herein provided.' In the same connection section 36 says that 'Any bank examiner, office assistant or superintendent of banks who shall knowingly and willfully disclose the condition and affairs of any bank ascertained by an examination, or who shall knowingly and willfully, except to the extent as authorized by law, report or give information as to who are depositors or debtors of a bank where such information is obtained by an examination of such bank, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, must be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars.' I believe that these sections of the law are unwise and, to say the least of it, should be modified to the extent I shall further on suggest. We are living today in the most progressive age since the dawn of civilization. The progressive idea is dominant in every phase of our existence. Progressive thought, progressive parties, progressive religion, progressive business, are the mainsprings of our daily lives. Linked with this progress, that is sweeping our great nation to unparalleled heights of greatness, is the demand of an ever watchful public to know and to understand the actual conditions underlying all forms of public or 'quasi' public institutions. To my mind, therefore, the most important move before the people to-day is that which is seeking to make all the great factors in the lives and welfare of our people a matter of common interest. What we need to do and what, indeed, we will eventually have to do, is to take the public into our confidence, not only in matters pertaining to their government, not only in matters pertaining to the great public concerns that have a bearing so directly on the public welfare, but also to those lesser institutions—such as banks who, although not in any sense public corporations, are of such a public character and public importance as to require public supervision—state or national. I mean that the time is not far distant, when you will see that the affairs and dealings of a bank will become so far matters of public concern that the public will be entitled to know more of them, and to judge for themselves of their real significance. The public, as a rule, know but little, if anything, of the meaning of any bank statement now published. What can we expect the laymen to know about bank statements and published figures? Nothing. In my opinion, it is an unjust imposition upon the public, who are dealing with you in confidence, to keep them in ignorance of the actual true condition of your bank. And, to this end, to enact a law which prohibits a public official from giving out any information gained by him in the performance of his public duties. I believe that my office should be a public bureau of information for all interested persons. And, instead of being prohibited, as I am, from giving out any information, I ought to be required to do it. As it now is, I cannot even give to a stockholder in a bank any information as to the real condition of his own bank without violating a penal provision of the law. When a bank is found weak and unsound, I must either sit idly by and hide the secret, while the officers employ every form of known deceit to keep the public and their trusting friends in utter ignorance, or I must pounce upon the bank and close its doors. But you say publicity will only hasten the failure. I do not believe it. If the public could know of the actual condition of a bank day by day, month by month and year by year, they would not become so easily frightened by rumors and so unreasonably suspicious of those things which really are harmless and which have so often led to the unnecessary failure of banks which were in fact perfectly solvent. But aside from all this, in my opinion, the public is entitled to know the condition of a financial institution to whom they are trusting their money for safe keeping. If it is not safe, all the more reason for telling them so. If it leads to failures and liquidations, why not? You let it be well understood that every party who deals with a bank, or the public who are invited to deal with them, have the right at any time to demand, from those who are charged with the duty of finding out, information, showing just how a particular bank stands, what is its actual condition, stripped of all verbiage and technical statements, and you will soon see nothing but sound banks. The public will patronize none other and, in fact, they should no. Suppose any of you, my friends, want to purchase the stock in a bank. Can you always afford to purchase it on the strength of a published statement, even though it is sworn to? Then, if you cannot afford to do it, how is one who knows nothing about statements to purchase bank stock with safety? Ought not the superintendent of banks be allowed to show him the examiner's report and give him his opinion, as to the actual value of the stock, without being subject to fine and imprisonment for same? A depositor with his all in the vaults of your bank, ought he not to be informed from time to time of your solvency, if he desires to know? This can easily be done and not give your rival the benefit of this information, if proper discretion is used. This may be called by some of you a dangerous innovation of long established methods in banking and I will perhaps be laughed at for advocating this heresy. But, if my ideas are correct, as they will be found some day to be, in my opinion, a more effective way will have been found to prevent bank failures than the Chinese method of chopping off heads. You have often heard it said, perhaps, that the public are too suspicious of banks; that they do not have the proper confidence in bankers as a class. If this is true, and I fear that it is to some extent, it is largely due to the fact that the public are not in your confidence, that you are excluding them from a knowledge of conditions you should acquaint them with. In other words, you are not willing for the public, that is, those who are your customers, to apply the same standard of measurement, the same yardstick, when dealing with you that you apply to them. For instance, if you make a loan, it is certain that you know enough about the party to assure you, reasonably, that he is solvent and is honest and will pay his debts. If he is not, you refuse the loan, or exact security. This is sound business principles and none other is sound. But a depositor, who lends you money, must lend it on faith and take your word for it. He gets no security, and, if he seeks information from the public official, charged with the duty of finding out those things, he is met with the statement that the condition of your bank is a secret and it is made a misdemeanor under the banking law for the public official to tell anything he knows about you. Is it any wonder, my friends, that the public grow suspicious of this kind of treatment, and wonder at the meaning of these laws? In the commercial world to-day, the most important feature of its life is the credit feature. The credit man is the backbone of every business house. His information as to the customers of a house is gained from many sources and must of necessity be accurate. But if you were to ask him, or ask, in fact any of the great commercial agencies of this country, what they know of a certain bank, they will hand you a copy of their last published statement. In advocating this change in your law, Mr. President, I hope very much my purpose will not be misunderstood. I have not intended to criticize you, nor yet to take you to task. I will freely admit that there are some excellent reasons why this section of the law should not be amended, the principal reason being that it puts banks too much in the power of the superintendent of banks. An examination of a synopsis of the banking laws of the various states discloses the fact that almost all of them have similar provisions to those contained in your law on this subject. In fact, in many states the penalties are much more severe for violations of this provision. In Idaho and Oregon, giving information as to a bank's condition is punishable by a large fine, imprisonment in jail, and removal from office. My friends, you have no doubt often heard the expression, 'A dead fish can float down stream, but it takes a live one to swim up stream.' It is a far easier task to deal with the matters pertaining to this office along lines where there is no resistance. A few spoken platitudes, and a lot of bombastic nothings, and my remarks might have been acclaimed by some as a great paper. But unfortunately, for myself, I am not built along lines where there is no resistance. In the solemn and conscientious discharge of my duty in the administration of this great law, I dare not fail to advocate those measures that I believe to be for the best interest of those whose servant I am. I would rather leave this office to-day with the conviction that I had so far administered these laws without fear or favor than to retain it forever simply by drifting with the tide. As I have already said, in my opinion, Alabama to-day has the best banking law in the United States and I repeat, the bankers of this state have already shown the best loyalty they could have shown by obeying these laws in the very letter. But can you blame me, my friends, for having an ambition to see Alabama take the lead in reforms in all banking practices and procedure. In amending your law, so as to show the world and the public that you are not afraid for any man to know your actual condition, you will have struck a keynote that will awaken the banking world. Therefore, bankers of Alabama, let us be leaders, not merely imitators. I, therefore, confidently suggest the following amendments to section 12 of your law: 'Provided, however, that the superintendent of banks may, in his discretion, exhibit the report of the examination of any bank, and may also reveal the true condition of any bank to a depositor, officer, director or stockholder therein, or to any other person who, in good faith, seeks information for the purpose of becoming a bona fide purchaser of the stock in, or assets of said bank.' Also amend Section 36 of the act by striking out the words 'or superintendent of banks.'

"Section 18 relates to the amount of capital to be paid in, before a bank can begin business, according to population and is graduated from $25,000 in cities of 2,500 or more inhabitants to $10,000 in cities of less than 1,000 inhabitants. I do not think a bank should be permitted, with as small a capital as $10,000, and recommend that the clause permitting this amount of capital be stricken out of Section 18, having $15,000 as the smallest amount of capital allowed.

"Section 20 relates to loans to salaried officers and provides that they must be approved by directors, or loan committee, and shall not be made without good security. I find that most states limit the amount that a salaried officer can borrow from his bank, and I believe it to be a good provision. Therefore, I suggest that the following be added to Section 20: 'And in no event shall any salaried officer, agent, or employee of a bank be permitted to borrow more than 30 per cent of the capital, surplus and undivided profits of said bank.'

"Section 21 is the excess loan provision, and provides that not more than 10 per cent of the capital, surplus and undivided profits of a bank, which shall include firm loans, and to the members thereof, without approval of a majority of board of directors or loan committee, and unless amply secured. By reason of these exceptions to excess loans; viz., approval of directors and ample security, this section is practically of no value. Excess loans are largely to directors and their favorites and the word 'amply secured' is an expression permitting great latitude to the directors, who pass on the nature of the security. I think, therefore, an additional clause to this section, like the following, would greatly decrease the danger arising from so many excess loans: 'If any of the directors, or loan committee, of a bank, if a corporation, or the officers, if not a corporation, shall knowingly approve any excess loan, within the meaning of this section, without the same being amply secured, he shall be liable in his personal and individual capacity for all damages, which the bank, its stockholders or depositors, or any other person, shall sustain in consequence thereof.'

To Forbid Use of Words Bank or Banker

"In addition to the above, I recommend the following new sections to the bill: Section 28½. No person or persons, firm or corporations shall use either, or any, of the terms 'bank,' 'banker,' 'bankers,' 'banking house' or 'trust company' unless he, they, or it, shall have first fully complied with all the provisions of this Act. Any person, firm or corporation, violating any of the provisions of this section, after thirty days' notice given by the superintendent of banks, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty dollars and not more than one hundred dollars, for each day, during which such violation shall continue after the expiration of said period of thirty days. The use of the words above indicated are misleading to the public and should not be permitted, except to a 'bona fide' bank or trust company, properly supervised.

"Section 29½. 'When a deposit has been made or shall hereafter be made in a bank in the name of two persons, payable to either, or payable to either or the survivor, such deposit, or any part thereof, or interest or dividends thereon, may be paid to either of the said persons whether the other be living or not, and the receipt or acquittance of the person so paid shall be valid, and sufficient release and discharge to the bank for any payment so made.' This amendment is aimed to cure a defect in the law, which indefinitely ties up in banks a joint deposit, when one of the parties interested dies. It is obvious that this will be a most wholesome benefit to depositors.

"Section 21½. 'The directors of a bank are required to examine a bank twice each year, and shall report to the superintendent of banks in writing the result of their examination. Should the directors fail or refuse to make said examinations, it shall be the duty of the superintendent of banks to require said directors to examine the bank within ten days after being notified so to do. The refusal of the directors to comply with this requirement of the superintendent of banks shall be a sufficient grounds for summoning the bank before the banking board to show cause why it should not be liquidated.' The sole purpose in this amendment is to compel the directors in a bank to become familiar with its affairs and to assist the banking department in holding a check on the officers and employees of a bank. The lack of interest in the bank by the directors has been the cause of many bank failures.

"Section 30½. 'It shall be unlawful for any bank to permit overdrafts exceeding 10 per cent of their capital, surplus and undivided profits, and all overdrafts permitted to remain on the books of a bank for more than sixty days shall be charged off and not claimed as an asset of said bank.' I realize that it is next to impossible to occasionally prevent some overdrafts, but they can be limited in amount, and the time they shall exist. This is the double purpose of this amendment.

"Section 23½. 'No dividend shall hereafter be declared by any bank until after 10 per cent of the profits, arising from said bank each year, shall have been placed to the surplus or undivided profits of said bank. Provided, however, that after said surplus and undivided profits shall have reached 20 per cent of the capital of said bank. Then said bank shall not be required to place any of the profits thereof to its surplus or undivided profits account.' This amendment has been suggested by the fact that there are not a few banks in the state, who persist in paying out all their earnings each year, as dividends, or after accumulating a surplus, increase their capital stock and use their surplus to pay for the new stock. With the requirement for an unimpaired capital, a surplus is almost a necessity, as every bank suffers an occasional loss and, however small, unless there is a profit to charge it against, the stockholders must make the loss good. This leads to distrust and dissatisfaction.

"Section 33½. 'The bills payable and rediscounts of banks, within the meaning of this act, shall not be permitted to exceed, at any one time, the amount of the capital, surplus and undivided profits thereof.' There is no limit in the law now on the bills payable and rediscounts a bank may have. I cannot help but believe a limit should be placed on the amount a bank can borrow. Certainly this limit is sufficiently liberal.

"Section 34½. 'The superintendent of banks is authorized to require all officers of a bank to give good and sufficient bonds for the faithful discharge of their duties.' A number of state banks do not require their officers to be bonded. It unquestionably should be done. It not only safeguards the bank, but it checks oftentimes the temptations that come to officers and employees in a bank, because of the additional chance for prosecution in the event of defalcation.

"Section 36½. 'Any person making a false statement to any officer, agent, director or employee of a bank, for the purpose of procuring a loan from said bank, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be fined therefor not less than $100.00, nor more than $5,000.00 and, in the discretion of the judge, may be sentenced to hard labor for the county, as an additional punishment, for not more than six months.' This strikes at the fraudulent borrower, and is intended to protect banks more effectually from fraudulent representation from this class of borrowers. Our criminal statutes on this subject are somewhat involved, and this greatly simplifies the conviction of dishonest borrowers.

The Law Good As It Is

"I fear it may be presumed by some that, from the number of amendments suggested, I am of the opinion that your laws are defective. On the contrary, I believe they are the very best laws in the United States governing banks and, in my opinion, if no single amendment was adopted, as proposed, your laws would still be the best, as a whole, now in operation. These amendments are intended to increase their efficiency. I suggest that they be referred to your committee on laws, or other proper committee, for careful consideration, or discussed at this meeting, as you see fit. You must realize that in presenting some of these amendments, I have had a delicate task to perform. I am exceedingly anxious to avoid any unnecessary discussion of any of these amendments from any of this association who may oppose them. I have suggested them for what they are worth, in response to a general demand, from some of the leading members of this association, for my views on these subjects.

Law Enforcement

"You will perhaps notice that I have suggested but few amendments to the penal provisions of your law. These provisions are very broad and very general in terms. They are framed with a view of punishing severely all dishonest practices in connection with banks and banking. The vital question is, 'can' and 'will' these laws be enforced? Are the courts, the judges and the juries sufficiently imbued with the grave importance of these laws, intended for the protection of the patrons of banks, to see to it, that the violators of these laws, are punished therefor? The way in which the courts and juries of Alabama answer this question is, in the ultimate, the real life or death of this law. Let it be once understood in Alabama that all violators of these laws will be punished as provided for therein, and you will gain a measure of public confidence that means everything to banks. But, on the contrary, let the public get the impression that Alabama juries and courts will not convict for the infraction of these laws, then you cannot hope to retain the confidence of the public. So well is it understood now that the United States will convict bank wreckers and dishonest bank employees, that every depositor in a national bank feels that his money is safe from them and, if not safe, he will at least have the consolation of knowing that the man who took it has to pay the penalty. It is a tremendous advantage, in this respect, that the national banks of Alabama have over the state banks. It is an advantage they are not entitled to, and should not have. The lax enforcement of our criminal laws and the inadequate protection afforded us by reason thereof are, to my mind, two of the greatest dangers we are to-day facing in our state. To cite an illustration, a bookkeeper in a bank in Alabama was discovered by your examiners short in his accounts about ten thousand dollars. The shortage was unquestioned. Neither the president nor the cashier of the bank wanted the bookkeeper prosecuted and refused to swear out a warrant for his arrest. The solicitor of the circuit was a brother of the bank's cashier. The judge of the court was a director in the bank. The cashier, his brother, the solicitor, another brother, and the president of the bank made good the bookkeeper's shortage. My examiners swore out a warrant against the bookkeeper, and he was put under a $1,000 bond only. The grand jury of the county met. An uncle of the bank cashier and of the solicitor was foreman of the grand jury. At the regular term of the circuit court in the county, my examiners went before the grand jury. They testified, I suppose, to the facts. The

By C. C. Burford

George Woodruff, president of the First National of Joliet, believes that business conditions will be "rejuvenated" after our political and economic difficulties have been corrected and another bumper crop has been raised. He says:

"In regard to conditions in our country, I beg to say that we are doing a good normal business in Joliet in practically all lines, but this business is being conducted on a small margin of profit and net profits are not what they should be. This condition seems to exist in practically all of the industrial centers of the country and locally there is not any very strong indication of any change in the near future.

"People are buying from hand to mouth, and are not stocking up to any extent, and as long as conditions in America remain in the present unsettled state, our people will doubtless continue their present policy. If we could arrive at anything which looked like a definite settlement of our political and economic difficulties, then the business people here in Joliet would immediately feel that confidence in the future which would prompt them to stock up, and as the business people throughout the country would doubtless feel much the same as the business people here in our town, the results would be a very great improvement in the prosperity of the country.

"In view of the somewhat depressed condition of business in general, the crop situation this year will be of the utmost importance, and in this connection the outlook in Will county is only fair. Practically all of the winter wheat was lost, and the season for other grains is rather backward. Nevertheless the ground is in good condition, and with good weather from now on, Will county should produce a fair average crop. It is of course too early to make any definite estimates, but the success or failure of the crops will mean a great deal to the country this year, and we will accordingly expect to watch agricultural conditions in our community with more than usual interest."

Quincy Bank Increases Capital

The State Savings, Loan and Trust Company has increased its capital stock from $500,000 to $1,000,000, and the allotment of the new shares of stock is now taking place.

S. B. Montgomery, chairman of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association, is president of this bank, over which the late E. J. Parker, well-known to Illinois financial men, presided so many years.

New National for Cobden

Cobden, in Union county near Cairo, is to have a new national bank soon, application having been made to the comptroller of the currency for a permit by A. C. Parmly, W. P. Mesler, Fred Fowley, N. Green, and R. A. Vanbuskirk.

Customers See Bandit Work

While the Farmers Exchange Bank of Broughton, twelve miles south of McLeansboro, was transacting business with a number of customers, a lone bandit entered the bank, fired one shot at the cashier, John Irvin, and compelled him to hand over $2,000 in currency. The village marshal fired two shots at the bandit, but he crossed a swamp and escaped. Bloodhounds were immediately put upon his trail.

Late Spring Causes Uneasiness

The late spring with its long continued rains and cold weather has caused no little uneasiness among farmers and bankers. The sowing of the oats crop was delayed for some weeks after its usual time by the continued snow and ice, and now the planting of the great staple crop, the corn crop, is also being delayed. Spring plowing is late, while fall plowing is in many cases reported so packed down that it will not readily respond to treatment as it usually does. While Illinois, and especially the great central part of the state, is well tilled, yet ponds of water are seen scattered over the fields, and the cultivation of such ground is idle.

The rains have caused abundant pastures, however, and oats straw should be plentiful, which makes cheaper feed for live stock. Gardens and small fruits will be good, but the former especially needs warmer weather.

The late condition of the corn cultivation means that farmers will be conservative in their buying, and that merchants in trading centers will need small stocks for a few weeks yet. However, many farmers report that corn planted in late May and early June is sometimes the best, but a late fall with delayed frosts must follow a late planting. Seldom, if ever, has the country needed an abundant crop more than this in this more or less critical year of 1912. With food products soaring in price, and with the cost of living becoming an almost national issue, it seems that with a partial failure of the crops this year some grave questions will arise. The political questions are also causing some conservatism, and all in all the summer of 1912 will be a fairly quiet one. Business is on a good foundation, however, the farmers and townspeople of Illinois are in a good condition to wait, and with a bumper crop this year, economic conditions will go forward with a bound. As President Woodruff of the First of Joliet says above, there has seldom been a year when so much will depend upon abundant crops as this year. The eyes of America will be upon the fields.

As another result of the wet spring, the farmers and villagers have found automobiles almost useless this year in communities where there are no paved streets or hard roads. However, there has been an unprecedented number of cars sold this spring, many dealers being unable to supply the demand. With dryer weather the farmer will joy-ride on Sunday in his automobile, and on week days on his corn-planter. There will be music in the sound of both this year.

State Banks Increase Deposits

A statement of the resources and liabilities of the 576 state banks in Illinois, as compiled by the state auditor of public accounts, shows a large increase in total deposits, as compared with deposits on February 21, 1912, the date of the last statement. Total deposits April 19th were $682,628,250.70, an increase of $11,364,085.64.

Total cash and due from banks was $184,532,672.99, a decrease of $9,865,057.80. The per cent of reserve to deposits, including amounts due banks, is 27.03.

The total capital, surplus, contingent fund and undivided profits on April 19th were $119,338,968.93, an increase of $1,517,315.09.

The statement of resources shows a decrease of $61,165.74 in overdrafts and a decrease of $228,128.55 in holdings of United States bonds.

A large increase in the amount of paper money deposited in the state banks, and a corresponding decrease in deposits of silver and gold, is an interesting feature of the statement. On February 21st, deposits of gold coin totaled $6,108,605, and on April 19th there was but $5,064,160 in gold coin on deposit, a decrease of $1,044,445. Total deposits of silver coin on February 21st were $1,240,548.20, and on April 19th, $1,159,015.65, a decrease of $81,535.55.

A large decrease in the amount of time certificates is shown. On February 21st the amount of time certificates was $73,466,719.72, and on April 19th the amount of this form of liabilities was $68,055,270.16.

Seven new banks have been licensed since February 21st.

C. J. Peeples

C. J. Peeples, formerly national bank examiner, and for several years vice-president of the American National at St. Paul, has been elected vice-president of the Citizens Trust and Savings, Garfield Boulevard and State Street, Chicago. The other officers of this institution are: Oliver F. Smith, president; Frank Nahser, vice-president; A. H. Luken, cashier. This is a state institution with a capital of $50,000, surplus $12,000, and deposits of over $400,000.

C. P. Coolidge is now president, R. S. Armstrong vice-president and W. L. Norton cashier, of the Winnebago State Bank, Illinois.

W. G. EDENS ON BRIARCLIFF MEETING

W. G. Edens, member of the executive council of the A. B. A. from Illinois, had the following to say in regard to the sessions held at Briarcliff Lodge last week:

"The meetings of the executive council held at Briarcliff impressed me as being of great importance. The inclement weather kept us all together and made it possible to become better acquainted. I think the matters which came before the council were more thoroughly discussed than possible heretofore, owing to the fact that we felt acquainted and felt inclined to take part in the proceedings. The fairness with which Chairman Reynolds presided and the opportunity given each member of the council to be heard in all matters were pleasing to all and must necessarily dissipate the suggestion that council meetings are star chamber sessions and that gag rule generally prevails. The action of the council in abandoning the council dinner at the places of meeting of the big convention will have a tendency to make the next meeting at Detroit more democratic and popular with the entire membership that attends."

LIVELY CONTEST BETWEEN BANKER CANDIDATES

The contest for treasurer of the Hamilton Club between L. H. Grimme, cashier of the National City Bank, and W. F. Van Buskirk, vice-president of the Standard Trust and Savings, is waxing warm. Mr. Grimme represents the Reds and Mr. Van Buskirk the Whites. The election will be held on May 20th.

MONEY SITUATION

There is nothing very new in the money situation. Deposits are steady and money fairly easy. Good paper can be bought at 4 per cent, while sales of high grade names may be made at a somewhat lower figure. Paper is being bought freely in the larger cities, and there are some country orders. Reports of general conditions in the country are satisfactory and hopeful.

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

The event of principal interest among Wisconsin bankers this week was the convention of Group 7, Wisconsin Bankers Association, in La Crosse on Thursday. The new income tax law and the proposed plan for mutual insurance of bank deposits were the chief topics under discussion. The meeting ended with a banquet at the LaCrosse Club at which A. W. Barney, vice-president of the Bank of Sparta and president of the group, presided as toastmaster. Arrangements for the meeting were in charge of E. J. Wiles, cashier of the State Bank of Bangor and secretary-treasurer of the group.

Milwaukee bankers attending the group meeting were: William P. Post and Godfrey W. Augustyn, National Exchange; E. H. Williams, Marine National; E. A. Reddeman, Germania National; Edgar J. Hughes, First National; F. X. Bodden, Marshall & Ilsley; A. C. Elser and W. L. Cheney, Second Ward Savings; Walter Kasten, Wisconsin National; E. C. Knoernschild, Merchants and Manufacturers; Mortimer I. Stevens, editor Wisconsin Banker, and George D. Bartlett, secretary of the state association.

Arrest Three Bank Robbers

With the arrest of three men giving the names of James Woods, Charles Mason, and William Collier, private detectives in the employ of the Wisconsin Bankers Association believe they have landed three notorious members of a gang of bank robbers which detectives in all parts of the country have been seeking for years. The three men were arrested in Washington county this week and brought to Milwaukee by Sheriff Fred G. Schloemer of that county to be lodged for safekeeping in the county jail, pending trial. According to the police and sheriff's forces in Milwaukee the men have long records behind them. Woods is said to be the notorious "Daddy Flynn," and Mason "Toronto Jim," whose operations on country banks throughout the Middle West date back to twenty years ago, and who have both served penitentiary terms. Sheriff Schloemer of Washington county says that with the aid of the police of several Wisconsin cities he hopes soon to arrest the remaining members of the suspected gang.

Second Ward Savings

The Second Ward Savings Bank issues a statement this week that its deposits have reached the $7,000,000 mark, comprising one-fifth of the total savings in all Wisconsin state banks at the present time.

Oliver C. Fuller Back from Briarcliff

O. C. Fuller returned on Monday from the meeting of the executive council of the American Bankers Association, at which he was elected chairman of a committee to draw up a model plan of organization for trust companies, to be considered at the national convention in Detroit. Mr. Fuller's various civic activities promise to keep him very busy for some time. Upon his return to Milwaukee he was greeted with the notification of his appointment as chairman of the finance committee of the Auditorium Governing Board of which he is an active member, and two days later was called upon in his capacity of chairman of the entertainment committee of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association to appoint subcommittees to take charge of the arrangements for the entertainment of the members of the International Congress of Navigation who will visit Milwaukee on June 14th at the invitation of the association. Assisting Mr. Fuller in the financial arrangements for the entertainment are J. W. P. Lombard, of the National Exchange; L. J. Petit, of the Wisconsin National; Fred Vogel, of the First National; George W. Strohmeyer, of the Milwaukee National, and Willis L. Cheney, of the Wisconsin National, all active members of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

Wisconsin State Has Successful First Day

First day deposits received by the Wisconsin State Bank, which was formally opened last week, were more than $100,000, according to officers of the institution. This figure sets a new record in Milwaukee banking circles.

James K. Ilsley Honored

James K. Ilsley, president of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank, has been elected president of the Milwaukee Abstract and Title Company

Johnson Ogden, secretary, was chosen to succeed Mr. Weller as manager.

Milwaukee Notes

George C. Markham, president of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, has returned from a month's visit in California and Washington. Mr. Markham characterizes the automobile accident which befell him near Spokane as "nothing but a little shake up."

Postal savings deposits in Milwaukee now amount to more than $150,000, according to Postmaster David C. Owen. In an effort to raise Milwaukee's average of $93.30 per depositor, which is said to be the lowest of any of the large cities, Mr. Owen has written to Washington authorities asking the authorization of three more branch depositories, which will bring the total number of branches in Milwaukee up to seven.

"The showing of $93.30 per depositor is not a reflection on Milwaukee," said the postmaster on Wednesday, "for the reason that the other cities all had postal savings banks prior to the establishment of one here."

State Banks Show Increased Resources

An increase of $4,000,000 in the resources of state banks in one month is shown in an abstract report of State Bank Commissioner A. O. Kuolt on the call statements of business at the close of business on April 18th. There are now 584 state banks, a gain of two in the last month, with total resources amounting to nearly $200,000,000.

State News of Interest

Bankers and business men of Kenosha have organized a commercial club with a membership of 160, articles or incorporation for which were issued this week.

M. S. Harmon, cashier of the Lumbermens National of Menominee, Mich., died at Kenilworth, Ill., on May 10th. He was one of the founders of the bank of which he was an officer and a stockholder in several manufacturing enterprises.

The National Bank of the Republic, Chicago, has been approved as the reserve agent for the First National of Racine.

MAKING GOOD IN OKLAHOMA CITY

Among the growing banks of Oklahoma City always must be mentioned the City State Bank of which Walter D. Caldwell is president and Colin S. Campbell is cashier. Mr. Campbell was connected for a number of years with the Fort Dearborn National Bank of Chicago, and before that was prominent among the junior bankers of Denver. At present he is acting as president of the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce, of the Credit Mens Association and of the Manufacturers Association. He has been president of the Rotary Club of this city and was chairman of the Oklahoma City bankers committee which had charge of the entertainment of visiting delegates at the last convention held there. His undoubted popularity is adding materially to the progress of the bank, which is controlled chiefly by himself and Mr. Caldwell. All of his friends in the Middle West will be pleased to know that he is making good in his adopted city. Oklahoma City is going to the front in both a business and financial way and many think it is destined to become the metropolis of the Southwest.

P. C. Kauffman

Secretary P. C. Kauffman, of the Washington Bankers, en route from Briarcliff to Tacoma, stopped off in Chicago on Friday to see what the Cubs would do to the Phillies. Being a Pennsylvanian, Kauffman was a rooter for the eastern team.

VISITING BANKERS

S. W. Reyburn, president of the Union Trust Company, Little Rock, Ark., and a member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association, stopped off in Chicago on Wednesday on his way home from the East. Mr. Reyburn was greatly pleased with the work of the council at Briarcliff and believes that it will have a good effect on the welfare of the organization. Charles S. Davis, in the financial and real estate investment business at Denver, stopped in Chicago this week en route to Indianapolis. Mr. Davis recently has been designated as the assistant to President Union B. Hunt of the insurance department of the Knights of Pythias. The insurance department carries a substantial line of municipal bonds, and the experience which Mr. Davis has had makes him a valuable member of their finance committee. Col. George H. Russell, former president of the American Bankers Association, and president of the Peoples State Bank at Detroit, was a caller in the financial district during the past week. He was looking hale and hearty. The Colonel says that Detroit will take good care of all the delegates to the A. B. A. convention to be held in his city in September. He promises to furnish the best brand of September weather. James K. Lynch, vice-president of the First National Bank of San Francisco, and who attended the sessions at Briarcliff, arrived in Chicago on Monday morning on the Pennsylvania Special, and left for home in the evening on the Overland Limited. George W. Boyden, vice-president of the Farmers State Bank at Sheffield, Ill., visited Chicago on Monday.

J. W. Heffernan, cashier of the Hibernia Bank of Savannah, Ga., and a member of the executive council of the A. B. A., has sent out a good statement under the last call showing deposits in excess of a half million. This bank commenced business only in 1906.

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, May 15.—The past week has developed absolutely nothing new in the local monetary situation. Practically all bankers here agree that the demand for credits, both from city and country, is apathetic. As one cashier expressed it, the farmers have been too busy bailing out water and keeping warm to need money for agriculture. On the whole, however, the outlook is good, and a little seasonable weather will doubtless do wonders to revive things in all lines. Wholesalers report their business light, relatively, but still about up to expectations, and certain lines, such as hardware, are quite active. Deposits are picking up with several of the larger banks. Building activities, which a few weeks ago promised to be a redeeming feature in the situation, have been put back by labor troubles. Work on numerous large structures has been stopped owing to factional disputes among the unions. It is not war between capital and labor, but labor and more labor. Collections are holding their own, and clearings are running well over those of the corresponding period a year ago.

Huttig Eack Home

The most notable bit of news in financial circles in St. Louis this week was the return home of Charles H. Huttig, president of the Third National, after an absence of many months. Mr. Huttig came with his family from New York, stopping en route at Muscatine, Iowa, his former home. As yet he has not resumed his duties at the Third National, but his health is completely restored, and he is anxious to get back to his desk, and it is only the solicitations of other officials and his friends generally that have induced him to hold off for a few days longer.

Dick Hawes for Treasurer

The St. Louis delegation to the Missouri Bankers convention at Joplin next week will, to a man, support Richard S. Hawes for treasurer of the association. Besides the local delegates, Mr. Hawes has a numerous following from all parts of the state, and his election will doubtless be unanimous. According to the regular routine and custom, this means that Mr. Hawes will be president of the association in 1914. He is the youngest man to be elected treasurer, and this, with the unanimity of his choice, is considered an exceptional honor. The St. Louis delegation will travel to Joplin in a body, arrangements having been made for a private car.

Real Picnic for Bankers

Plans have been about completed for the informal gathering of bankers to be held here on May 25th. Something over 250 acceptances have been received, including many financiers of national and international reputation. The St. Louis Bankers Club, which is giving the entertainment, proposes to have something new. All discussion of business for the day is tabooed. Guests are to be taken out to the Log Cabin Country Club, where there is to be an old-fashioned basket picnic and barbecue. Such diversions as hunting, fishing, trap shooting, golf, tennis, polo and rambles in sylvan glades will give place to the usual features which mark assemblies of bankers. Every acceptance implies the pledge not to mention business. In addition to bankers from the large cities, representatives have been invited from towns of more than 10,000 population in fifteen states. Arrangements have been made to meet the visitors at Union Station, and escort them to a down-town hotel for breakfast. After that motors will whisk them through the residence and park sections of the city out to the Log Cabin Club. The festivities will last far into the night, and the main feature will be the barbecue, performed by an Indian chief.

Those Who Are Coming

Among the bankers expected are: From New York: F. W. Allen, Mechanics and Metals National; J. S. Alexander, National Bank of Commerce; A. B. Hepburn, Chase National; J. B. Martindale, Chemical National; C. D. Norton, First National; D. E. Pomeroy, Bankers Trust; Charles H. Sabin, Guaranty Trust; Joseph T. Talbert, National City Bank; G. G. Thorne, National Park Bank; Clarence Williams, Windsor Trust; William Woodward, Hanover National. From Philadelphia: Albert A. Jackson, Girard Trust; William A. Law, First National; R. J. McAlester, Franklin National; L. L. Rue, Philadelphia National; B. F. Shanbacher, Fourth Street National. From Boston: William A. Gaston, National Shawmut Bank; George S. Mumford, Commonwealth Trust; Philip Stockton, Old Colony Trust; Eugene V. R.

Thayer, Merchants National; D. G. Wing, First National. In addition there are a host of bankers from other large centers, and smaller cities.

No Set Speeches Allowed

"All the guests distinctly understand there is not to be a single business feature connected with the gathering," said Breckinridge Jones, president of the Bankers Club, and of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company. "It is simply going to be a play day for the men of big business, and those representing smaller institutions as well. There are going to be no set speeches, no public discussion of banking questions, and no bankers association politics. We just want to get these men out there and let them rest easy, and unburden themselves of irksome business for one day. There will be plenty of diversions for everyone. Golf, fishing and rambles through the meadow and plenty of shady nooks for meetings of the yarn-swapping brethren. There will be food in abundance, including some unusual bits that one does not find in the commonplace bills of fare."

German-American Bank

The German-American Bank, which has long rested in the lap of ultra conservatism, has at last decided to spread itself and modernize. It has leased the southeast corner of Broadway and Pine Street, and will erect thereon an up-to-date building, exclusively for its own use. Wrecking of the old building now occupying the site will commence at once, and work on the new banking edifice will be pushed rapidly. In interior arrangement the new building will resemble that of the Mississippi Trust Company, with main floor, mezzanine floor and basement, the interior to be lighted by a huge skylight. The main lobby will be 40x44 feet in area. The exterior will be of pure white marble, and the interior construction of steel and concrete. The German Savings Institution is one of the oldest banks in the West, dating from long before the Civil War. It has always been famous for its solidity and conservatism. Directors of this bank say that it has some of the original money deposited by its first customers, the same never having been drawn out in all these years. The clients are mainly among the Germans. The president is Nelson W. McLeod, who is also a director in the Mississippi Valley Trust Company.

Akins on Postal Banks

Postmaster T. J. Akins of St. Louis has advanced the theory that postal savings banks are having a marked tendency to check the national extravagance of Americans. He believes that the rank and file of citizens will save and save, and that thus, ultimately, the people will control the bonded debt of the country, this change being brought about by the conversion of savings deposits into government bonds. Mr. Akins says also that the banks will keep endless money in this country, which otherwise would go to banks in Europe, as foreign laborers are not high thinkers of our lay financial institutions, but have perfect confidence in banks with the government's stamp upon them.

ACTUAL value received from their connection with us has increased over accounts from other banks 50% in two years. We therefore invite the business of others with the assurance of mutual satisfaction.

Bank Cashier Surrenders

Advices from Muskogee, Okla., are to the effect that J. A. Plumley, cashier of the Peoples National of Checotah, Okla., was arrested at the former place early this week under a federal indictment, charging false entries in the books and misappropriation of the funds of the bank. Plumley was in Colorado when he learned of the indictment against him and voluntarily returned to Oklahoma and surrendered.

N. W. HARRIS FOUNDATION

Preparations to put into active use the money given by N. W. Harris for the benefit of the school children of the city are under way, and it is thought the work for which the Harris foundation was intended will start at the beginning of the fall term.

The foundation, amounting to $250,000, with interest at 5 per cent, is to be used to transfer exhibits from the Field Museum to the various schools of the city in order that the pupils may in the classrooms have the benefit of the specimens that they might not see without a visit to the museum.

R. W. Baxter

R. W. Baxter, for the last two years general superintendent of the Illinois Central Railroad with headquarters at Chicago, has resigned to accept the vice-presidency of the Copper River & Northwestern Railroad and to become president of the Alaska Steamship Company with headquarters at Seattle. Chicagoans are sorry to hear of Mr. Baxter leaving the service of the Illinois Central, where he has made a splendid record during the past two years. He was at one time vice-president of the Oregon Short Line Railroad with headquarters at Portland, and for a time president of the Portland Trust Company. All his friends will wish him continued success in his new position.

LARGE PURCHASE OF CORN

"The Corn Products Refining Company has purchased 420,000 bushels of Argentine corn for export to this country. This is without precedent. Buying of corn by the Corn Products Company is due to the high prices of the cereal in this country. In fact, the Argentine corn purchased can be laid down in this country 12 cents below the current price for domestic corn. The Corn Products Company is the largest buyer of cash corn in the country. Its purchases represent something like one-sixth of the total. The company is forced into buying foreign corn in order to protect its export trade. Consumption of corn by the Corn Products Refining Company aggregate something like 36,000,000 bushels a year."

If these sort of statistics can be relied upon it is high time that the farming interests of the United States began farming along lines that will produce better results.

A TIP ON FARMING MATTERS

Some of the eastern owners of western lands have adopted the method suggested by some of the state agricultural colleges, by having tenants fill in on a blue print each year a sketch showing the different fields which are planted and the kind of crops that are being grown. By keeping these blue prints from year to year it furnishes a history to the owner of the land as to what crops have been grown on his land, and he can use it for other purposes, showing the location of buildings, position of roads and other data which may be of interest.

GROUP 8, INDIANA

Group 8, Indiana, will meet this year at Princeton, on June 7th, and has W. G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, down for its principal address. Ten counties of southern Indiana are included in this group, and they expect to hold a rousing meeting. J. L. Bayard, president of the First National at Vincennes, is chairman of the group, and Stuart T. Fisher, cashier of the Peoples National at Princeton, is secretary. Princeton bankers will exert themselves to make this one of the best meetings of the year.

$1,000,000 BANK PLANNED

Cleveland, O.—A movement is under way to establish a bank, capitalized at $1,000,000, in this city under the auspices of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. A resolution authorizing the formation of the institution will be presented at the annual convention of the brotherhood in Harrisburg, Pa., this week. It is said that one thousand members of the brotherhood have pledged themselves to invest $1,000 each in the shares of the bank.

Editorial Comment

MR. ROOSEVELT AND THE BOSSES

It is estimated that Mr. Roosevelt's campaign to date has cost in the neighborhood of a million dollars. It might be interesting to learn the exact sources from which this money has been derived. It is known that sixty-seven thousand dollars of this amount were contributed by Flinn, Perkins, Munsey and Cochran. Huge sums of money have been spent by the ex-president in all states where primaries have been conducted. In Massachusetts the "advertising bill" was $57,000. Now a great deal of money is being used in the Ohio campaign. It is said that one Ohio paper has charged that two Ohio bosses have a working agreement which is pecuniary in its nature, and by the terms of which the two men are to work to get delegates for the great "foe" of the bosses. The secretary of the Roosevelt committee is a corporation lawyer. The steel trust is trying to secure the defeat of President Taft because he prosecuted them, and favor Roosevelt because he failed to prosecute them and allowed them to absorb their only great competitor—the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company. Mr. Roosevelt also held up the prosecution of the harvester trust. It is difficult to see how he is anything but the candidate of the interests. One cannot help wondering how the people can believe him when he states that he is an arch enemy of the trusts. No doubt Mr. Roosevelt believes that his personal popularity with the people is so great that it completely will obscure any little discrepancies between what he proclaims himself to be and what the cold facts show him really to be.

It now is proposed to amend the constitution so as to limit the term of the president to six years, he being eligible for only one term. One does not have to think twice to understand why Mr. Roosevelt is so strongly opposed to such an idea. A third term was refused by Washington, Jefferson and Jackson and was denied to General Grant. Mr. Roosevelt, who is so fond of comparing himself with Abraham Lincoln, no doubt believes himself much better qualified and more entitled to receive a third term than were the distinguished ex-presidents above referred to. It is a great thing to have confidence in oneself, but when this confidence assumes such proportions that it amounts to the rankest kind of egotism, it is time that somebody interfered. It is said that the proposed amendment to the constitution is receiving favorable consideration at the hands of the congressional committee. There is no doubt but what Mr. Roosevelt's action was the cause for such a movement. It is not likely, however, that such an amendment will be necessary in the near future, as there are few who believe that the Colonel will receive the nomination at the convention to be held in Chicago in June. It is to be hoped urgently that after this joyful oc-

"BANKING REFORM"

"Banking Reform," a quite pretentious book, recently has been issued by the National Citizens League. No proposed bill has been recommended by the league. It would appear from a perusal of the book that the National Citizens League is not a supporter of the National Reserve plan. However, frequent quotations are made from the sections of the National Monetary Commission bill, and there is constant reference to the notion of a central reserve association. There seems to be very little emphasis placed upon general legislation. Many banking reformers believe that this indicates that the league regards reformation of the existing law as less significant than the creation of a new kind of banking institution. "Banking Reform" studiously avoids supporting the commission bill in all cases in which it differs from other plans looking to the same end.

NEW YORK DEFIES MONOPOLY

Much unfavorable comment was heard among the visiting bankers at the trust company dinner in New York last week over the following printed in all daily papers:

The new $65,000,000 city bond issue will not be listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Inquisitive people in Wall Street are asking why the Stock Exchange makes a practice of immediately listing the temporary certificates while there is every prospect of activity, but strikes off the bonds because the city refuses to bow to its mandate and have them engraved by the American Bank Note Company.

Stories were in plenty to explain the situation, and thus dissipate the idea that New York City bonds failed to be listed for reasons affecting their value. They tell that "big interests" own the bank note company, and make enormous profits by creating a monopoly at exorbitant prices. This is done by controlling the stock exchange so that stocks and bonds not printed by the American Bank Note Company are not listed. Other reasons advanced are the protection feature, insuring against overissues by irresponsible houses. In truth, an inquiry by the U. S. Government is hinted at, as the only remedy for an embarrassing situation. The credit of New York City is in no wise affected, and it merely stands pat against the demands of a co-operative monopoly, which should be broken up.

THE BANKERS OPPORTUNITIES IN ALABAMA

There is an awakening among the state bankers that cannot be misunderstood, and that awakening is the outgrowth of the improved conditions, which are so evident on all sides in our great state. It is the awakening of a giant who is only beginning to realize his strength, and who, when he has fully awakened, will realize that for years he has been sleeping upon great opportunities for wealth and power. In my opinion, the bankers of the South have a great work to perform. In their hands is the very destiny of this great land. With a monopoly of the greatest crop in the world within our borders, by the proper fostering and building up of banks, we can hope to handle alone this great crop in a way to make it bring a price that will make us the most independent, and, finally, the richest people in the world. Year by year, we are growing less dependent upon the East and more independent of Wall Street. Let the banks of the South continue to grow in number and in prosperity, let them continue to improve their old methods, as they have in the past few years, and we soon will see the South independent of outside help, and it will be of no importance to us whether the central reserve plan is a success or not. We will need no reserve banks. We will have and we will keep a large part of our reserves at home. It is my firm belief that in five years after the opening of the Panama Canal the demand for cotton and cotton products will have so greatly increased that a sixteen million bale crop of cotton will look like a calamity and every pound of it will bring 25 cents. Then the bankers of Alabama will come into their own. The world then will pay a long-delayed tribute to this great Southland of ours, where chivalry and heroism always have been supreme, but where now they will unite with commercial supremacy and show to the world that both can exist, and the former grow no less. To have built this country from a great waste to a land of joy and promise, a land of prosperity and happiness, in the short time that has elapsed since the surrender, stamps our people as a marvelous race and at once is a refutation of any slander upon our methods and our industry. If, indeed, there was ever any room or foundation for the charge that we were slothful in business it cannot be charged to us to-day. We have struck hands with a most lavish Nature and she is leading us by leaps and bounds to an unmeasured height of prosperity and happiness. Nature holds an outlook bright with promise. For many years she has smiled upon our land and we have but half enjoyed her charms, but now we are beginning to understand her advances and we intend hereafter to meet them more than half way. Heretofore, I have been speaking of the material side of these questions. Now, of the outlook for the banker as an individual, as a man in Alabama. In my opinion, the bankers of Alabama, as men, are the most potent influence to-day in the life of the state. They exert more influence on the business, religious, educational and political life than any other men in our state. It used to be, and that not so many years ago, that the lawyers were thought to possess all the wisdom and all the knowledge in the state.

The convention was well attended, Chicago being well represented by the visitors present. Everyone seemed satisfied with the manner of conducting the sessions. Mr. Wakefield also visited Tulsa, Oklahoma. He reports that the city now is very thriving and prosperous. It contains 31,000 inhabitants, and boasts of well-paved streets and good sidewalks. There are seven growing banks in the town. Mr. Wakefield attributes a great deal of the phenomenal growth of the city to the extensive oil business which is being carried on.

ILLINOIS GOOD ROADS CONFERENCE

Members of the good roads committee of the Illinois Bankers Association met at the Rookery on Thursday of this week under a call issued by Chairman S. E. Bradt, vice-president of the First National at DeKalb. Members of the committee present were: O. P. Bourland, president of the National Bank of Pontiac; O. W. Hoyt, president of the First National at Geneseo, and Thomas Sudduth, a director of the Farmers National at Springfield. A committee report was adopted and Chairman Bradt was authorized to have it printed and circulated among the bankers of Illinois and the members of the federated commercial clubs of the state. At noon the bankers' committee met with the officers of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association at luncheon at the La Salle Hotel, where a joint meeting of these good road interests was held. R. J. Finnigan, secretary; H. Paulman, chairman of the executive committee; W. G. Edens, president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, attended this conference. Energetic efforts will be put forth by these committees to secure the respect and confidence of farm and land owners in Illinois, to the end that there will be co-operation on the part of all citizens in the state for permanent improvement of Illinois highways.

NEW OFFICES AMERICAN BANKERS ASSOCIATION

During the week that the executive council of the American Bankers Association was in session at Briarcliff, Secretary Farnsworth was having the executive office of the association removed from the eighteenth floor to the twelfth floor of the building at 11 Pine Street. This removal was made necessary by the continued growth of the association, and by the consolidation of all the offices of the sections under the supervision of the general secretary. The new offices will occupy the largest part of the twelfth floor and have been remade to the order of Col. Farnsworth and his associates so that a large corridor has been enclosed and made into a private reception room in addition to both outside and inside offices, which will take care of the increased business of the association for some time. One large room will be devoted to library purposes, which, under the care of the present efficient librarian, already has become a very useful adjunct. Financial and banking subjects are being filed and card indexes are kept of all articles of that nature appearing in the financial and banking publications as well as in the general press. These clippings are at all times available to bankers who are preparing addresses or papers touching upon such subjects. The standing invitation to bankers from all over the country to call at headquarters will mean considerably more than it has meant before, owing to the reception facilities, stenographic, and other accommodations at headquarters.

President Frank M. Moody to Alabama Bankers

In rounding out a score of years of usefulness, it is indeed fitting that this convention should be held in the great seaport of our state, one destined to be the wide gateway to the Panama Canal. Through this city will pass ship load after ship load of coal, iron and finished products from diversified industries located in this and other states. Through this same gateway will pass the agricultural products from a wide area, particularly those raised in the fertile fields of Alabama. When we reflect that as each ship weighs anchor and turns her prow to the open sea carrying one or more commodities in which some banker in this state has held or now holds either a direct or indirect interest, we realize the strength of the tie which binds us to a seaport within our own borders, a seaport which will soon become one of the largest and most important on the Gulf of Mexico.

During no period in the history of banking in Alabama have our banks been in a better condition than at the present time. There has been a material increase in their deposits and earnings within the last twelve or eighteen months. It is an unusual exception for any of our banks not to report a healthy percentage of increase in both of these items, though just now, on account of unfavorable weather conditions, loans are somewhat contracted and reserves are larger than usual. There is a tendency towards greater conservatism and sound banking, rather than towards a strenuous and unwise competition for business of a speculative or doubtful nature. Volume of business should not be sought at the expense of safety.

The cotton crop of 1911 was one of the largest ever produced in this state, and while a large portion of it was sold at a rather low figure during the early fall months, many of our farmers, merchants and factors realized a good price by holding until 1912. It is a pleasure to note that many farmers raised not only sufficient corn, oats, hay and other food crops for their own use, but a surplus for market purposes. This is a healthy condition and one which should be stimulated by every banker. We have nothing to encourage us regarding crop conditions and prospects at the present time on account of unprecedented rains for some months past. However, with good seasons from now until fall, it is possible for the state to produce an average yield. While we may not be very optimistic concerning present crop conditions, on the other hand we note that mining and manufacturing conditions are much better than they have been for some time. Prices for coal, iron and steel have materially advanced, while our mines, furnaces and other industrial plants are running at full time with a healthy atmosphere pervading all sections of the country. As soon as political conditions become settled the United States will undoubtedly enter upon an era of prosperity heretofore unknown.

Extols Work for Supervision

About two years ago, this association appointed a strong legislative committee and instructed it to prepare a state bank bill for consideration at the next annual meeting. How well this committee performed its work is now a matter of history. Suffice it to say that the bill as recommended received the unanimous endorsement of this association, and soon afterwards was enacted into law with but minor changes or amendments. At the present time no state in the Union has perhaps a better banking law than has the state of Ala-

Twentyeth annual convention at Mobile gives a résumé of conditions in the state. Progress of the association reviewed. New banking law and supervision among the recent accomplishments bama and this is due entirely to the foresight and efforts of this association. The days of the bank promoter have ended, and the financial institution that does not conform to either wholesome national or state laws must close its doors. This is a condition, not a theory, and one toward which farsighted and conservative bankers have looked forward for many years. The management of our state banks is now vested in a banking board composed of the superintendent of banks and two officers of state banks. These are ably assisted by competent examiners. The personnel of the banking department is all that could be desired and there is probably not a state banker in Alabama who does not feel that the best interests of the bankers, as well as the public, have been conserved by these improvements in our state banking system.

Believes Currency System Defective

It is a well known fact that in some respects our currency system is quite defective. Congress, tardily recognizing this weakness about four years ago, appointed a National Monetary Commission. This commission worked diligently, visiting nearly all sections of this country, as well as spending considerable time in Europe. It has had the benefit of the advice of some of the ablest financiers in the world. The result of their labors has been given to the public in a tentative measure for a proposed National Reserve Association of the United States. I will not tax your patience with an enumeration of its provisions, as each one of you has in all probability considered the plan in detail and given it much serious thought and consideration. I believe that the minutes of the last American Bankers Association will bear me out in the statement that the plan was almost unanimously endorsed at that meeting.

At no time since this association was divided into groups, have the group vice-presidents been more active and zealous in the discharge of their duties. Most of the group meetings have been well attended and have proven most beneficial and instructive to the bankers present. Too much stress cannot be laid on these meetings, for, as a rule, formality is cast aside and the discussions which follow are, consequently, valuable and profitable.

Advises Agricultural Development Committee

In reviewing the work of this association since its existence we find that it has accomplished much which has been wholesome and beneficial not only to the banks, but to every citizen of the state. There is every reason why there should be a continuance of such a policy, and we would be unmindful of our duty as patriotic citizens should we not reach out and extend our sphere of usefulness. Remembering the vast natural resources within the borders of our state, we are, nevertheless, forced to believe that the bone and sinew of our wealth lie in our agricultural development. As a material aid in the development of our farms and vast mineral resources we are forced to conclude that immigration will, in a certain measure, advance and hasten our progress. For the foregoing reasons I most respectfully recommend and urge the appointment of two standing committees by this association as follows:

- (1) Agricultural Development and Education.
- (2) Immigration.

The first conference of the committee on agricultural development and education of the state bankers associations of twelve of the states of the Northwest was held in Minneapolis and St. Paul, October 18th and 19th, 1911. The conference was well attended and the results of the work accomplished by the committees during the preceding two years proved to be more gratifying than anticipated. A similar conference will be held during the latter part of this summer and this association has been urgently requested to have one or more representatives present with a view of co-operating along the lines outlined by the conference.

After conferring with many who have worked for the best interests of this association for a long term of years, I suggest that the by-laws of this association be so amended as to take away from the "Nominating Committee" some of their prerogatives and that in the future all nominations for the offices of president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer shall be made from the floor of the convention by a duly accredited delegate. Such a change and procedure would doubtless meet the views of the association.

We are indeed fortunate in having with us on this occasion speakers who are specialists in their several lines of endeavor. Each is devoting his time and energy to some line of work particularly interesting to the members of this association and I am sure that we all feel deeply grateful for their presence and that their remarks will be much enjoyed. I desire to most heartily commend our efficient secretary-treasurer for his untiring efforts and for his ceaseless devotion to the interests of this association.

In conclusion, I wish to most sincerely thank you for the honor which you have con-

However, I desire to say that I will always be found endeavoring to promote the best interests of the Alabama Bankers Association.

CAPTAIN PORTER ON COUNTERFEIT MONEY

Captain Thomas I. Porter, in charge of the United States secret service office in this city, at the invitation of the officers of North West State Bank, delivered a lecture to the employees of that bank on the 14th, exhibiting samples of all recent counterfeits and especially emphasizing the characteristics, which most easily would enable a person to identify them as counterfeits. His lecture was not only instructive, but very interesting, and the officers and employees of North West State Bank feel under great obligations to him for his courtesy.

President Joseph R. Noel believes other banks could have talks from Captain Porter, and that much valuable information is thus available. The captain is an interesting talker and stands very high among those of his craft.

INNOVATION IN CLEARING HOUSE REPORTS

Secretary O. Howard Wolfe of the clearing house section, A. B. A., is deeply interested in the action taken by this section in attempting to secure total business transactions instead of total clearings, as at present. This has come about as a result of several suggestions received from various cities wherein it has been recognized that the present statistics covering clearings only reflect to a certain degree the business transactions of any city. "If we should succeed," he writes, "in securing the co-operation of twenty or thirty important clearing houses in submitting total transactions, we will then have figures of some practical value." The plan is to have banks in each town report their transactions to the local clearing house, which would, in turn, transmit the figures to the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association. These would be tabulated for the period of one year, and at the end of that period the new statistics could be used as a basis for comparison with the figures which then would be published as total transactions prepared under present methods. In this way there would be both uniformity and accuracy which now are lacking. There is no intent to abolish the present statistics which have been compiled for many years. It may be presumed, however, that in the course of time, when the majority of clearing houses report total transactions the present lists will be more or less disregarded as an index of business fluctuations."

Wm. J. De Vol

William J. De Vol, president of the First National at Lebanon, Indiana, anticipating the approach of the summer season, spent several days at his hotel at Bay View, Mich., this week, where he is making preparations for the season's opening. Additional bathrooms and other improvements will be made in this popular hotel for the care and comfort of this season's guests.

AGRICULTURAL TALKS AT ALABAMA CONVENTION

To show the importance of the agricultural development idea as shown by the proceedings of the Alabama Bankers convention at Mobile it only is necessary to point to the strong stand taken by President Frank E. Moody in his annual address, which is printed in another portion of this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER; also to the strong paper read by W. E. Hinds on the "Business Man's Part in the Boll Weevil Fight," and to another on "The South's Empty Acres," by G. Grosvenor Dawe, managing director of the Southern Commercial Congress. In presenting his ideas to the convention Mr. Hinds said in part:

"A study of the actual facts of the boll weevil occurrence in previously infested sections shows us that the weevil quite regularly has caused a reduction of approximately 50 per cent in the cotton yield in territory infested from one to three years. During this critical period the reduction is brought about directly by severe injury to the crop, and indirectly by destroying confidence among the planters in their ability to raise cotton profitably with the weevil present. This period commonly is characterized by a more or less well-defined business depression, if it does not indeed amount to a small panic. It would not be difficult to prove that this feeling of panic actually has caused greater loss to the business interests of the territory infested than has the loss of cotton directly destroyed by the weevil."

Mr. Hinds believes that the bankers are to determine the financial policy to be followed in this emergency; that it must be remembered that the calling in of existent loans, or the refusal to make new ones on account of the boll weevil occurrence, is certain to precipitate the panic which it is desired so much to avoid. In nearly all cases it probably would be safe to advance from one-half to two-thirds of what formerly has been allowed. Mr. Hinds believes that the advancer should have the right to insist that the borrower follow such practices as best will enable him to meet the obligation when it falls due. He strongly urges the business men of the various communities to unite in their attitude and action in the boll weevil fight, and believes that the banker is the logical party to see that such action is taken as best will conserve the business interests of his community.

Mr. Dawe stated that the people of the United States are prone to boast of their agricultural achievements. In February of this year the country imported two and one-half million bushels of potatoes; in the eight months ending in February, 1912, we imported $7,000,000 worth of bread stuffs, which could have been grown and manufactured here. This also is true of other articles which have been imported. There also has been a large decrease in the exports of the country. The urban population has been increasing steadily, and the immigrants who are coming to our shores are of a new strain and are crowding our cities. At the present time the average yield of a European crop is two and one-half times that of an American crop. Mr. Dawe believes that the nearest approach to the standard of European production exists in the South. There are, however, 258,444,568 acres of idle lands in the South, an area twice as large as that of Germany or France. Mr. Dawe thinks that if a contented farming population were engaged in the raising and growing of staples for home consumption and for exportation, there would come into existence ten times the commercial activity that now exists in the South. In fact, the South, if producing in accordance with its opportunities, could maintain a population of over two hundred millions instead of twenty-eight millions.

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

P. W. Goebel, president of the Commercial National of Kansas City, Kan., brought a message of good cheer from the East where he attended the meeting of the executive council of the American Bankers Association. "The financial condition of the United States, barring perhaps two little spots on the Pacific Coast, is sound," said Mr. Goebel. "There is less inflation than in many years, and there are no indications of panicky conditions that might arise during the next six months. If we raise a fair average crop over the country, no matter who is president, I believe business will be better than it has been for the past several years. Money is not only extremely easy all over the country, but American interests have an enormous credit balance in Europe that could be made available in little time. American bankers have loaned $400,000,000 to German interests in the past eight months. The business outlook of the country, as viewed by the eighty men attending the New York meeting, is the best in years."

Oklahoma Convention a Big Success

The sixteenth annual convention of the Oklahoma State Bankers Association, which ended a two days' session at Tulsa Saturday of last week, was the most successful and best attended meeting of the association since its organization. The election of officers resulted as follows: president, Asa Ramsay of Muskogee; secretary, W. B. Harrison of Enid, and treasurer, J. R. Prentice of Duncan. The two vice-presidents elected are: W. S. Guthrie of Oklahoma City and P. C. Dings of Ardmore. Muskogee is a strong bidder for the 1913 convention and it is practically certain that it will get this honor. The selection of the meeting place is in the hands of the executive committee, which will not act for some time. One of the most important acts of the convention was the decision to create an agricultural committee and to send the chairman of the committee to the agricultural conference at St. Paul in August. J. D. Lankford, Oklahoma state bank commissioner, and the other members of the state banking board received a formal resolution of thanks for the arduous work they have been doing in raising the standard of banking in Oklahoma. Mr. Lankford in his address before the convention said that last year had been a trying period not only for the bankers of Oklahoma but for business men in all lines as well. But in spite of this condition he expressed a spirit of optimism for the future, declaring that with her wonderful resources Oklahoma will recover speedily. He denounced the men who go into the banking business and use the money which they receive for speculation, and advocated the most severe penalties for embezzlement. During the convention the members of the American Bankers Association held a meeting and G. D. Davis of Claremore was elected vice-president for Oklahoma, and H. M. Spaulding of North Enid was named as the Oklahoma member of the nominating committee.

Complete Plan for Mutual Bonding and Insurance Company

At the last convention of the Kansas State Bankers Association a committee of five members was appointed to develop a plan for organizing a mutual bonding and insurance company to handle much of the business which Kansas banks now give to eastern bonding and insurance companies. The committee has finished its work and will present its plan to the Kansas bankers at their next meeting. The new mutual company is to do only two kinds of business. It is to write bonds of banks for counties, cities, school boards or other public corporations as a guaranty that the full amount of deposits will be returned to the depositors. The company also is to write burglary insurance to protect the banks against loss in case of a robbery of any kind or in case of a theft by an employee. It will also write bonds of employees of the different state banks. It is planned to require each state bank to pay an assessment of one-tenth of its capital and surplus as the new company is organized and there will be a small assessment each year to maintain the surplus created by the first assessment and to pay the operating expenses of the company. If there should be any losses additional assessments would have to be made to maintain the surplus fund.

Reports on Bank Burglaries

C. W. Tobie, Kansas City manager for the William J. Burns National Detective Agency, employed by the American Bankers Association, attended the Oklahoma State Bankers convention at Tulsa, where he presented a detailed report of the bank burglaries in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma since January 1, 1910. Mr. Tobie said that the total amount of money derived by bank burglars throughout the United States for the year 1910 amounted to $197,347, and by holdups in banks $4,510. "I haven't the exact figures of the loss of 1911," said Mr. Tobie, "but can safely say that the amount was diminished by one half. Of the three states where I have charge of our work, Kansas banks were the hardest hit by this class of criminals in 1910, when they secured $27,420 by burglary and holdups in twelve banks. Only one of these banks, the one at Ford, Kan., where they secured $3,639 by burglary, was a member of the American Bankers Association. The association spent

$1,720 to bring these men to justice. In 1911 there were but five attacks upon Kansas banks, less than half the number of the year before. They secured $9,164, only about a third of what was lost the year before. Only two of these banks were members of our association. At the Chautauqua State Bank, which was attacked on the night of September 10th, the robbers secured nothing, and a short time afterward, in holding up a Missouri, Kansas & Texas train at Oketa, Okla., one was killed in a running fight with a sheriff's posse. Another was recently sentenced to 25 years in the federal prison. When the bank at Hudson, Kan., was burglarized, the night of March 24, 1911, by three men, $4,600 was secured. Our association spent over $1,200 to bring about the apprehension of these men. One of them was sentenced to life for killing an officer; another was sentenced for 45 years for shooting a night watchman and the other was sentenced for 35 years. Missouri did not have so many attacks as Kansas, although the burglars fared better in 1911 than 1910. There were but four banks attacked in 1910 and only two of these were successful burglaries, in which $8,482 was secured. Neither bank belonged to the American Bankers Association. In 1911 there were seven attacks, four being successful, entailing a loss of $13,000. Although there are 1,105 banks in Kansas and 1,401 in Missouri there hasn't been an attack upon a bank in either state so far during 1912. Oklahoma has not been so fortunate. In 1910 there were 14 attacks upon Oklahoma banks, eight of them being successful, the robbers securing $14,806. In 1911 there were fifteen attacks, eight of which were successful, the loss being $11,300. Seven of these were non-members of the American Bankers Association."

Mr. Tobie says that bank burglary is getting to be a thing of the past in this part of the country. The banks are so well protected that it is a hard matter for burglars to escape capture.

When the federal government changes the name of a postoffice, it is not incumbent upon a state bank operating in the town to change its name to conform thereto is a recent ruling of the Oklahoma attorney-general. The post-office department changed the name of Nashville, Okla., to Nash, but the State Bank of Nashville, Okla., declined to amend its articles of incorporation accordingly.

Recent rains have helped to boost things along, backing up what the heavy snows did last winter. We look for Oklahoma to produce the record bumper crop of her history."

TRUST COMPANY BANQUET

The second annual banquet of the trust companies of the United States, members of the trust company section of the American Bankers Association, was held at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York on May 9th. This gave an opportunity to the members of council and of committees who attended the sessions at Briarcliff to be present at the banquet. Bankers from many different sections of the country were present. Col. F. H. Fries, president of the trust company section, and of Winston-Salem, N. C., presided in an able and dignified manner. Out-of-town bankers who were seated at the speakers' table included F. H. Goff, president of the Cleveland Trust Company; Oliver C. Fuller, president of the Wisconsin Trust Company of Milwaukee; William Livingstone, president of the Dime Savings Bank at Detroit and president of the American Bankers Association; H. P. McIntosh, president of the Guardian Savings and Trust Company of Cleveland; George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National of this city; Festus J. Chicago was well represented by John Jay Abbott, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings; John S. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn; Lucius Teter, president of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company, and Solomon A. Smith, vice-president of the Northern Trust Company, also attended from this city. Boston sent Daniel G. Wing, president of the First National, and H. A. Rhoades, president of the Dorchester Trust Company. This shows that the attendance at the banquet was national in character, the Pacific Coast being represented by H. S. Fletcher of Watsonville, Cal.; Samuel M. Jackson, manager of the Branch of the Bank of California; and P. C. Kauffman, second vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company, represented Tacoma. It is said that thirty-six states of the Union were represented by the attendance. Those present voted it one of the best bankers' banquets ever held in the history of the organization.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

After touching on the Titanic disaster the Northwestern National Bank Review for May takes up the general Northwestern condition as to finance and crops. In part the Review says:

In the Northwest, there is a general feeling that this year will be a prosperous one, for all indications at present point toward a good yield of all the important products of this great agricultural district. An abundance of rain last fall, a rather late spring with plenty of moisture, and no set-backs, occasioned by chilling frosts, is the consensus of reports received from all directions, and an optimistic spirit is evident everywhere, as brought out by interviews with well-informed bankers and business men from all parts of the Northwest.

There is an abundance of money available at reasonable rates to meet all legitimate demands. Minneapolis bank statements showed again at the last call, April 18th, total deposits of over $100,000,000, thus maintaining the prominent rank the city has taken among the financial centers of the country. With the rapid development of the territory tributary to Minneapolis, these figures in the not distant future will seem small.

We, so far, see no occasion to change the opinion expressed in our number of December last, that this will be a quiet but satisfactory year in business.

M. B. Koon Back from California

As gallantly as if he were complimenting a "Coca Cola" beauty, Judge M. B. Koon, vice-president of the Northwestern National, said on his return from a winter in California: "Not in thirty years in which I have gone away nearly every winter and returned in the spring, have I seen Minneapolis looking so well," and Minneapolis returns the compliment. Incidentally handing something to George F. Orde, chairman of the street cleaning committee of the Civic and Commerce Association, he added: "The streets are cleaner than I ever saw them at a like time. The city looks livelier, and it seems good to get back. If the influence of the new association has helped to bring this about it has been well worth while."

Hold Conference in Minneapolis

To put itself into the eye of the Twin City business men so that it will be as effective in drawing attention as a sylvan scene, prominent South Dakota leaders had a day in conference with representatives in Minneapolis of bankers, the North Dakota Better Farming Association, and of the Civic and Commerce Association. It transpired that while South Dakota joins Minnesota on the west the Twin Cities get only a small amount of the trade. What South Dakota needs, said one, is recognition of the mutual relations between the two. The movement for diversified farming, rotation of crops and better things for the rural communities, does not mean less grain, but more grain on a decreased acreage, produced more economically, and in addition more live stock and better dairying."

C. D. Brown Addresses Group Meeting

How to mix with the yeggmen and spoil their plans is said to have been the tentative subject for Charles D. Brown, head of the Interstate Protective Association, before the bankers of the Sixth Minnesota district, May 15th, at Little Falls. One hundred and fifty attended the meetings. The banquet was served at the Hotel Buckman, addressed by J. W. Wheeler, president of the Capital Trust Company, St. Paul. Mr. Brown's real subject was yeggmen, but he slopped over into the realm suggested by the tentative subject, something with which he is intimately familiar.

Depositors Will Not Lose

State Bank Examiner Kelsey S. Chase at Winnebago, Minn., examining into the Bank of Commerce, estimates that the loss to the bank will be $25,000, covered by capital and reserve. Officers are still searching for the former vice-president, H. W. Parker. President J. Sharp says that in so far as his resources permit depositors will receive dollar for dollar, as he is ready to put in his personal fortune. His two sons, directors, are reported to be willing to stand with the president in regard to depositors.

W. B. Gerry of St. Paul Recovered

Rehabilitated by an operation for goitre, W. B. Gerry, well-known club man, vice-president of the Capital, has returned to St. Paul from the Mayo surgical shop at Rochester. For a few days Mr. Gerry will sit around and meditate how, if it were only a few degrees colder, there might be curling ice again. When he is back to a normal strength basis he will sit in again at his desk alongside J. R. Mitchell and J. W. Wheeler, and concoct plans to raise the deposit aggregate in that institution.

F. M. Prince's Views on Spain

After inspecting Spain, F. M. Prince, president of the First National, has come back to Minneapolis with a more optimistic view than he got on a previous trip. He found the Pierson syndicate of Englishmen active in Barcelona, where it operates street cars, and he found an American pickle well represented in Sevilla. That Spain is encouraging travel, Mr. Prince relates for the benefit of others who may contemplate the peninsular trip. Hotels are generally good, people friendly and the country end of the trip enjoyable. Madrid has some new buildings.

"Agriculture is not modern in our sense," Mr. Prince said, "but the land, which as a rule is usually held in large tracts and rented out in a small way, is made beautiful by the tillers of the soil, who work in the old-fashioned way. Modern machinery is being introduced.

"The people of Spain are far more intelligent, better appearing, self-respecting and independent, far more pleasant to meet, than

Agricultural Movement Progressing Rapidly

Returning from Briarcliff Joseph Chapman, Jr., said:

"The Minnesota Bankers Association meeting at the state agricultural college in June where eminent men will be speakers, and the meeting of the committee on agricultural development and education later, will give Minneapolis much prominence this year.

"The executive council of the American Bankers Association was strongly in favor of an appropriation by congress to carry on the work of agricultural education undertaken by the bankers, and so expressed itself."

Twenty state bankers associations have already indicated that they are to be represented at the meeting August 7th and 8th in the Twin Cities under the auspices of the Minnesota bankers committee on agricultural development and education. Florida, New York and New Hampshire have named delegates.

J. W. Wheeler Addresses Meeting

In part Mr. Wheeler said as follows: "Agricultural education is to-day a national movement of very great importance to the country. We are far behind Germany in fitting the young for the occupation they are to pursue. Seventy-five per cent of our high school girl graduates get married five years after leaving school and only three and seven-eighths per cent have any training in household economics. The farmer represents a large part of the world's business, but he does not wield the influence that he is rightly entitled to. More must be done to encourage scientific farming and to increase the production of farms. The first agricultural school was started in Michigan in 1850, and now we have 875 such institutions in the United States besides extension work and agricultural training in the rural schools. To meet the demands of the rapidly growing population, which in 1950 will be 200,000,000, we must increase the present yield by one per cent every year. We must, like Germany, double the yield per acre."

Group 7 Elects Officers

Officers were elected by the seventh district group of bankers at Glenwood, Minn., May 14th, as follows: President, L. R. Moyer, Montevideo; vice-president, T. F. Ofsthun, Glenwood; secretary-treasurer, F. R. Putnam, Morris; executive committee, D. W. Wells, Herman; Andrew O'Bryan, Graceville. President A. A. Bennett of Renville responded to the address of welcome by Mayor H. Shipstead. Addresses were made by Professor P. E. Miller of the agricultural school at Morris on "Better Seed Selection as a Factor in Crop Improvement"; L. R. Moyer, Chippewa County Bank, Montevideo, "Simplification of Land Titles and Improvements in Conveyancing"; J. W. Wheeler, St. Paul, "Agricultural Development and Education in Minnesota"; Secretary C. R. Frost of state association, "The Work of the Association"; J. A. Latta, Northwestern National, Minneapolis, "Monetary Reform." In the evening, at the banquet, the toasts were as follows "Our Hosts," M. J. Dowling, Olivia; "Some of My Experiences," C. D. Brown, Interstate Protective Association; "Recall of the Banker," R. T. Daly; "Medicine, Money and Mirth," Dr. J. Jeffers, Glenwood. The Glenwood male quartet sang.

Plan New Bank for Minneapolis

Bankers are identified with a move to form a new national bank in Minneapolis with $250,000 capital and $125,000 surplus. The bank is to be in the Masonic Temple at Sixth Street and Hennepin Avenue in the market and wholesale districts. Isaac Hazlett, director in the First National, and Vice-President C. T. Jaffray are interested. The stock is said to be nearly subscribed at $150, and provision is made for more backing if required. Men representing the T. B. Walker-Hazen J. Burton real estate holdings in the vicinity are represented in the financial institution also. One of the younger men in a central bank is to be cashier.

"The new institution will open, if we close the lease, with the good will of the other large banks that are located in the financial district proper," Mr. Jaffray said. "It is the judgment of the men who have organized the new bank that there have not been sufficient banking facilities for that rapidly developing and already very important part of the city that is situated in the district adjacent to our proposed location. That district includes the produce and fruit trade center, the large wholesale establishments that have moved up, many important manufacturing establishments, and an important retail trade and general business, all of which is too far away from the existing banks."

Banking Miscellany

Good crop prospects are said to be the cause for advance in bank stocks on the Minneapolis exchange. The Security National went to 430, the Northwestern National to 280, and the First National to 280. Minneapolis Trust went to $132.50.

Joseph Chapman, Jr., has been elected a governor of the University Club.

George F. Orde, J. W. Wheeler, N. F. Hawley and George C. Power are back in St. Paul and Minneapolis from the Briarcliff meeting.

Spokane

Spokane, Wash., May 14.—Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars is the amount of a bond issue asked by Fred P. Greene, president of the board of school directors of Spokane. The money is to be used for new buildings and improvement and extension of school facilities. J. Grier Long, Zack Stewart, D. B. Heil and Dr. Charles F. Eikenbary, members of the board are in favor of the issue, saying that new additions must be built at once in several districts. Mr. Greene said there is no question about the result of the special election, to be called by the city commissioners, as the people are cognizant of the needs of the school district.

Bond News

Bids for the sale of $44,000 in bonds, authorized by the city council of Wenatchee, Wash., will be opened May 28th. The proceeds will be used in refunding general fund warrants. There also will be an election in June to vote on the issuance of $30,000 water bonds to carry on the work of additions and alterations in the present water system.

Electors at Leavenworth, Wash., will decide the question of purchasing the present water supply and distributing system now owned by private individuals at a special election on May 21st. If the proposition is carried bonds will be issued for $21,000 for the purchase and for $19,000 for the making of proposed extensions and alterations.

Nineteen bids were received at Palouse, Wash., on May 6th for an issue of $17,000 in 20-year refunding bonds. The Exchange Bank of Spokane offered par with interest at 5¼ per cent; the Union Trust and Savings Bank of Spokane offered a premium of $187 with interest at 5½ per cent, and Causey, Foster & Co., of Denver, submitted a bid of $212. There is talk of the council rejecting the bids and readvertising for bids on straight 20-year bonds, following a suggestion of some of the bidders that offers would be better with the 10-year option omitted.

R. D. Miller, representing Eggleston & Company of Spokane, presented a plan of issuing water bonds of $180,000, at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, on May 6th. The interest is placed at 6 per cent, the bonds to be paid semi-monthly out of a sinking fund created from the water revenue of the plant. The present water revenue of the plant is $30,000 annually. Two years ago the taxpayers defeated a plan to bond the city for $134,000 for the purchase of a plant.

Finds Conditions Good

E. Lewis Rutter, vice-president and general manager of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, said on returning from a trip of 500 miles through the wheat belts of eastern Washington and northern Idaho, that conditions everywhere bear out the optimistic attitude of the people. The banks, he added, have large deposits and the cash reserves are larger than ever.

C. R. Gray Resigns

Carl R. Gray of Spokane and Portland, president of the Spokane & Inland, Spokane, Portland & Seattle and other Hill electric and steam railroads in the Northwest, has resigned, effective May 20th, to become president of the Great Northern Railroad to succeed Louis W. Hill. He will be succeeded by Joseph H. Young, president of the Northwest Commercial Company.

BANKING IMPROVEMENT IN MINNESOTA

K. S. Chase, superintendent of banks in Minnesota, writes:

"In order that you may know what this department has been doing during the past year, I submit a comparative statement showing the condition of 696 state banks on January 7, 1911, which was five days after I took charge of the department, and the condition of 741 state banks on February 20, 1912, which was the date of the last report called for from the state banks in Minnesota. You will notice that on January 7, 1911, 696 state banks had 'bills payable,' and 'notes rediscounted' to the amount of $991,502.16; and that on February 20, 1912, 741 state banks had $790,186.69 of 'bills payable' and 'notes rediscounted,' making a reduction of over $201,000. You will notice, too, that the overdrafts have been reduced almost $300,000, both of which items, it seems to me, show that the condition of the banks has improved during the year.

"There has been a large reduction in the amount of 'other real estate owned,' although the comparative statement shows an increase of $21,187.05. The reason is that a year ago a large number of the banks were not carrying their holdings of real estate in this account, but were covering them up in one way or another. The holding of real estate is now carried openly and reported as it should be on the statements of the several state banks.

"You will notice that the 'deposits subject to check' have sustained a loss on this statement of approximately $2,000,000. This is accounted for from the fact that on January 7, 1911, the savings deposits were not segregated, and were reported as 'deposits subject to check.'"

Mr. Chase feels hurt that the press of the country (including THE CHICAGO BANKER) located the failed Bank of Remsen in his territory, when, as Mr. Chase says, "It was wholly outside of Minnesota." He doesn't wish to be held responsible for conditions outside of his jurisdiction.

HEARD FROM THE VISITORS

C. D. Crites, cashier of the First National Bank at Lima, Ohio, and Henry Lennartz, cashier of the Citizens Banking Company, Celina, Ohio, stopped in Chicago on Friday on their way home from a business trip to Texas and other southern states. These gentlemen report crop conditions as promising, and the general business situation as improving. Clarence E. Smith, president of the Peoples Bank at Waukegan, was a Chicago caller on Friday. He says that there is splendid prospect for an improvement in business conditions in his locality. The management of the Corn Products refining plant at Waukegan has announced its intention of operating that plant shortly to its full capacity, which will be a decided advantage to Waukegan's business prosperity.

NEW ILLINOIS BANKS

A permit has been issued by the state auditor to A. G. Karpinsky, P. V. Hartman, Gottlieb Eggert and Emil H. Yabusch for the organization of the State Bank of Lyons, to be located at Lyons, Cook county. The capital stock is $25,000. An application has been received to organize the First National Bank of Annapolis, capital stock $25,000. The new institution is to succeed the Johnson & Co. bank of that city.

NEBRASKA STATE BANK AT LINCOLN

M. W. Folsom, president of the Nebraska State Bank of Lincoln, visited Chicago on Wednesday of this week. This bank was opened for business on January 7th, 1911. Its deposits, as shown under the last call of the Nebraska state banking department, are in excess of $600,000, making it the largest state bank in Nebraska. C. H. Beaumont is cashier of the institution and both he and Mr. Folsom have had banking experience in other sections of Nebraska. Mr. Beaumont having served as state bank examiner for several years.

CHICAGO CHAPTER, A. I. B., HAS WORLD'S CHAMPION

By OTTO J. KRAMPIKOWSKY.

The adding machine contest held Tuesday evening, May 14th, by the chapter was well crowded. The Burroughs Adding Machine Company as well as the Wales Adding Machine Company had a number of their hand as well as their electric machines on hand for this contest. There were twenty-five entries from the various banks, and a peculiar coincidence is the fact that out of the six prizes distributed by the Burroughs and the Wales Company (each contributing proportionately), five of the prizes were bestowed on clerks of the Continental and Commercial National. Great interest and applause was given to Chas. E. Johnson, of the Continental and Commercial National, while adding up his checks, and he is now the "World's Champion" (using an Electric Burroughs), adding 250 checks in the space of 3.14 minutes. The best previous record was made by a man in London, England, whose name is not at hand, whose time was 3.22 minutes for 250 checks. Mr. Johnson, as soon as he was advised of the result of his winning the world's championship, was delivered a challenge from Harry Reynolds, which has been taken under advisement. In the 500 check adding machine contest, John T. Gallagher, of the Continental and Commercial National, added up the 500 checks, with a correct total, in 7.03 minutes on the Electric Wales. The winners of the 250 check as well as the 500 check contest are as follows:

250 Check Contest	Time in Minutes
John T. Gallagher, Cont. and Coml. National (Wales)	3.27
V. Venema, Cont. & Coml. National (Hand Burroughs)	3.35
500 Check Contest
John T. Gallagher, Cont. and Coml. National (Electric Wales)	7.03
Jos. J. Engelbreit, National City (Elec- tric Wales)	7.03½
V. Venema, Cont. & Coml. National (Hand Burroughs)	7.04

At the close of the contest the members extended a vote of thanks to Herman E. Ellefson, of the Continental and Commercial National, who was chairman of the adding machine contest, for the splendid manner in which he had everything arranged, as well as the judges and timekeepers, who were composed of the following:

Judges

Geo. A. Jackson, Continental and Commercial National.

E. F. Schoeneck, Corn Exchange National.

Timekeepers

J. H. Ashley, Corn Exchange National.

Guy Wickes Cooke, First National.

John Drummon, First Trust and Savings.

David Johnstone, Union Trust Company.

Joseph J. Schroeder, National Bank of the Republic.

Walter Johnson, National Bank of the Republic.

SECURITY STATE, SHAWNEE, OKLA.

F. V. Askew, the recently elected vice-president of the Security State Bank of Shawnee, Okla., is one of the rising young men in Oklahoma banking circles. He was an official of the Shawnee National Bank for a number of years, resigning in 1910 to accept the presidency of the Farmers State Guaranty Bank of Lexington, Okla., which institution, under his management enjoyed a period of unprecedented prosperity.

Disposing of his interest at Lexington at a handsome profit, Mr. Askew and associates on March the 20th, purchased controlling interest in the Security State Bank of Shawnee, Okla. The Security State has the well earned reputation of being one of the most conservative banks in the state, and its growth, since its organization two years ago, has been phenomenal.

We predict continued growth and prosperity under Mr. Askew's able management, as W. S. Search and B. B. Brundage continue with the bank as president and cashier.

ing are the names of the members who were nominated for the various offices for the ensuing year, and will also be voted on at the coming election, Tuesday, May 28th. For the office of financial secretary, treasurer, and the three positions on the executive committee, there is only one member nominated for each office, and there will therefore be no competition at the election:

For president—Walter Johnson, National Bank of the Republic; John W. Rubecamp, Corn Exchange National.

For vice-president—Chas. W. Alison, Northern Trust; Otto J. Krampikowsky, Continental and Commercial National; F. E. Musgrove, Illinois Trust and Savings.

For corresponding secretary—William J. Bruebach, Merchants Loan and Trust Company; Wilbur W. Walton, Continental and Commercial National.

For financial secretary—Bruce Baird, First National.

For treasurer—John C. Cosgrove, Jr., National City.

Executive committee—1 year term, Claude Edmonds, Northern Trust, Lee A. King, National City; 3 year term, Guy Wickes Cooke, First National.

During the past year the membership has been steadily growing and it is to-day nearing close to 1,000 members. Last year the total membership was approximately 625, while to-day it is 950, the credit for the increase in membership being due to the hard and earnest work of Harry S. Smale, chairman of the chapter, as well as Walter Johnson, chairman of the membership committee.

Bankers Night at Cort Theatre—Friday Evening, May 24, 1912

The Cort Theatre has made a special inducement to the chapter to give a performance on Friday, May 24th, in behalf of the members of Chicago Chapter. "Ready Money," as the play is called, is a tremendous success, and as the chapter receives a profit of 25 per cent on all tickets sold, and as the profits so received are to be used for the entertaining of the incoming delegates en route to Salt Lake City convention in August, it is earnestly hoped that all officers as well as clerks see the performance on Bankers' Night. Several hundred tickets have already been sold, and there is no question but what the house will be sold out within the next week.

At a special bonding election at Metairie Falls, Wash., recently, the voters of the school district authorized the issuing of bonds of $20,000 to build and equip a school building, only 13 of the 96 votes cast being against the bonds.

Des Moines, May 15.—It is quite evident that the contest for treasurer of the Iowa Bankers Association is going to be one of the prettiest ever staged at a state convention. There are now four entries in the race. They are E. L. Stickney of the First National, Moulton; Frank Epperson, Manning & Epperson State at Eddyville; H. C. Gates, Ladora Savings, Ladora; C. R. Hannan, Jr., First National, Council Bluffs. Mr. Hannan was endorsed by the bankers of Group 5 at the meeting at Council Bluffs last week. He is the son of C. R. Hannan, Sr., one of the best known bankers in Iowa some years ago and an active worker in the cause of the I. B. A. His father died in the east. The other three candidates are from southeastern Iowa. As Cedar Rapids is in the eastern section of the state the delegates from this section will be many, and whichever pulls most from the other sections will gather the plum. Charles Shade, president of the First National at Rock Rapids, will have no opposition for president of the I. B. A. and P. W. Hall of Des Moines will have no opposition for secretary. It is hinted that if one of the candidates for treasurer will withdraw he can be elected vice-president. Anyway, it is expected that one of the defeated candidates for treasurer will be elected to that position. In the meantime, preparations for the Cedar Rapids convention are proceeding apace. Expectations are for a big crowd. The Des Moines bankers are going in a special car. They are also going with the firm intention of securing the convention for the next year, although Ottumwa, Fort Dodge and Davenport are active contenders.

New Railroad from Omaha to Des Moines

According to word which has reached Des Moines, Leslie M. Shaw has been successful in getting English capital interested in the purchase of the Atlantic North and South Railroad, which means that a railroad is to be built from Omaha to Des Moines. The road was thrown into the hands of a receiver and was ordered sold by the court at an appraised value of $402,000. Efforts to secure money on the bonds seemed to be fruitless. However, Mr. Shaw took a trip to London, and it is said he was entirely successful in securing the required amount. The Atlantic North and South has had troubles of its own, but it is thought these are now ended.

Eugene Sullivan Elected Chairman of Group 5

His activity in chasing to earth the man who attempted to rob the Panama Savings at Panama secured the chairmanship of Group 5 for Eugene Sullivan of Panama. Mr. Sullivan was secretary of the group, but his associates voted that he should go a step higher and he was made chairman. Mr. Sullivan was one of the group who gathered with in the bank at Panama the night of the robbery and unloaded his shot-gun in the face of the would-be yegg. H. M. Silsby of Missouri Valley was chosen secretary. The executive committee consists of E. E. Hart, C. E. Price, Theodore Laskowski of Council Bluffs; B. B. Clark of Red Oak; H. I. Foskett of Shenandoah. One of the features of the meeting of the group was an address by Emmet Tingley of Council Bluffs, who was one of the attorneys appointed by the I. B. A. to assist in prosecuting the Panama yegg, and he gave a most practical address on the protective work of the association. Henry Meyer, assistant cashier of the National City of Chicago, spoke on the Aldrich currency bill, and Carl Kuehnle of Denison spoke on the relations of the banker to the public. The program in detail was given in last week's issue of this paper.

A. F. Dawson Advocating Currency Plan

A. F. Dawson, the well known Davenport banker, has been doing some good evangelistic work for the Aldrich currency plan. Heretofore this has been left to Arthur Reynolds of the Des Moines National. However, Mr. Reynolds has been busy as chairman of the executive council of the A. B. A., and Mr. Dawson is doing some effective missionary work. Recently he addressed a crowd of interested business men at Cedar Rapids and was given the closest attention. A question box followed his speech, and the measure was thoroughly explained.

Group 2 Meeting

Group 2 held an interesting session at Fort Dodge on Wednesday of last week. Agricultural topics were prominent in the program and the bankers showed an acute interest in the question of the financier as related to the agriculturist. J. H. McCord of Spencer advocated that the farmers who wish to build silos and are short of cash be loaned the money for that purpose without interest. The program throughout was interesting and about ninety live wires attended the sessions. E. W. Townsend of Fort Dodge was chosen chairman, and J. F. Hutchinson of Rockwell City secretary. Charles Shade of Rock Rapids was endorsed for president of the Iowa State Bankers Association. P. W. Hall, secretary of the state association, was a guest, and spoke.

Resolutions Passed at Group Meetings

The propositions of J. H. Ingwersen of Clinton for changes in the Iowa banking laws are meeting with favor over the state. Several groups last week adopted resolutions favoring the passage of a law which will permit the Iowa bankers to loan money on real estate outside of Iowa. Group 6 at its session at Colfax passed a resolution along this line and so did Group 8 at Clinton. Group 8 also endorsed a resolution presented by A. F. Dawson of Davenport, requesting congress to take action in enacting a new and adequate currency law. The resolution says that the currency system should measure up to the needs of the nation's expanding business and afford immunity from disastrous financial disturbances of the past with their enormous losses to the business men, the producers and the wage earners of the republic. Group 8 also went on record in favor of a law that will permit banks to act as trustees, executors and guardians of the interests of minor heirs. The bankers also expressed their belief that the state auditor should arrange to issue calls to correspond with the calls issued for the national banks. J. W. Richman of Grand Mound was re-elected chairman and F. L. Butzless of Charlotte was chosen secretary. Charles Shade's candidacy for president of the I. B. A. was endorsed.

Group 6 Holds Meeting at Colfax

The bankers of Group 6 departed from their usual custom of holding their sessions in Des Moines. This year they met at Colfax. The attendance was large and the program interesting. Dr. McElweene of Chicago was employed to entertain the bankers and he did it to perfection. Prof. Brindley of Ames, an authority on questions of taxation, was another speaker prominent on the program. Simon Casady, president of the Central State of Des Moines, also spoke. The members of the group endorsed the movement for a law to permit Iowa bankers to loan money on real estate located in other states than Iowa. The associated banks of Jasper county were hosts to the guests, and the sessions were held at the beautiful Hotel Colfax. Registration was at 10:30 in the morning. Luncheon was served at 1:30. Then came the business meeting. A. E. Hindorf of Newton was re-elected chairman and S. J. Pooley of Grinnell was re-elected secretary. There are now but two group meetings to be held. Northwood, May 15, and Lamoni, May 17, will wind up the series.

Buys Iowa National Stock

An important transfer of bank stock occurred in Des Moines when J. H. Cownie of this city purchased 672 shares in the Iowa National from E. K. Butler of Chicago at $300 per share. Two years ago, Mr. Cownie had an opportunity to purchase the stock at $84,000 but he refused. E. C. Finkbine is the heaviest individual stockholder in the institution with 1,200 shares. Mr. Cownie is now second with 1,100. Mr. Butler held 1,300 and has over 500 left.

Bank Clearings High

Bank clearings in Des Moines set a new high mark when they increased $1,291,217.11 for the week ending May 11, as compared with the corresponding week last year. The total for the week was $5,260,793.83, while for the corresponding week last year they were $3,969,576.72. This is considered an excellent showing by the officers of the Des Moines clearing house association, and it is one of the biggest weekly gains in many months.

Peoples Savings of Des Moines

The Peoples Savings of Des Moines enjoyed its twenty-second birthday on May first. This institution is in the same location as when it first started but it is now in a seven story block of its own. C. H. Martin, president, was first cashier of the bank and served at that desk for ten years. Frank P. Flinn, now vice president, was messenger boy twenty-two years ago, and E. A. Slininger, present cashier, has been with the institution for eighteen years. The bank began in its new quarters with a capital stock of $50,000 but it now has twice that much and $150,000 of surplus and $2,500,000 of deposits.

Iowa Banking News

The first serious accident to mar the construction of the Central State new building on Fifth Street, Des Moines, occurred when C. B.

Grahl, one of the metal roof contractors, fell off the building to the ground. He was badly hurt but will live. His brother fell eleven stories to his death while working on the Fleming block some years ago.

G. E. MacKinnon, president of the Mechanics Savings, has a severe case of whooping cough and his friends have been dodging him for some days past, fearing contagion. However, his sickness has not prevented the active beginning of the new building for the Mechanics, diagonally across the street from the Central State. The two buildings on the site for the new bank are now being razed.

Christ J. Kemming, assistant cashier of the Crawford County State at Denison, succumbed to an attack of appendicitis after he had been in the hospital for six weeks in search of relief. Kemming was very popular and the leading business houses closed during his funeral.

Fred Haynes, former cashier of the bank at Rudd, is held responsible for the loss of between $12,000 and $13,000 by that institution in a finding of Judge Kelley of the district court at Mason City. Col. W. A. Burnap, a Clear Lake accountant, was put to work on the books and found as above. Haynes appealed but the court sustained the accountant. Haynes has been indicted for embezzlement.

Waterloo bankers are having trouble with women again. Last week they arrested a woman forger and now it is reported a bunch of women floated a number of lead dollars in that city and escaped. Parties suspected have not been arrested at this writing.

The comptroller of the currency has granted permission for the organization of the First National at Rockwell City. The capital stock is $25,000. The organizers are G. H. Felt-house, F. C. Siegfried, W. B. Bruce, M. Dexter, W. A. Grummon.

Word has been received by Iowa friends that Ralph Stacy, formerly a banker in central Iowa, has been elected head of the Pacific National at Tacoma. The institution is said to have deposits of $4,000,000.

The Security Savings of Cedar Rapids has filed amendments to its articles of incorporation increasing the capital stock from $150,000 to $200,000. This is one of the strongest institutions in Iowa and its growth has been remarkable.

E. E. Cling has succeeded C. D. Waterbury as cashier of the First National at Dayton. Mr. Cling was assistant cashier prior to the resignation of Mr. Waterbury.

The Des Moines bankers have received word that the Farmers and Merchants at Milton has suspended business. The death of A. W. Bell, one of the partners in the institution, is stated as the reason.

S. P. Mott has been chosen cashier of the Iowa State at New London to succeed Cashier McGrew, resigned, and George Drorsky has been chosen cashier of the Commercial Savings at Iowa City to succeed J. U. Plank, resigned.

P. J. Jacobson is the prime mover in a new bank which it is said is to be formed at Gilman. This will be the third institution in the city.

The Commercial Savings at Washington has filed articles with the secretary of state giving capital stock of $100,000. The incorporators are H. C. Hull, D. J. Ross, F. R. Sage and others.

The Clayton State has been granted a charter and has started out with a capital stock of $25,000. Albert Johnson is president and L. D. Johnson is cashier.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

The Northwestern National is considering plans for the addition of several stories to its bank on the corner of Fourth and Pierce streets. The bank has probably the best location in the city but has on it only a two-story structure. The increasing value of the ground on which it stands makes it a serious question whether the property is yielding the income that might be expected of it. The adding of three or four floors would make the building commensurate with the others at the same intersection.

Culmination of a "Camera Romance"

The most important instance in a "camera romance" took place last week when Chas. X. Hopkins, a bookkeeper in the Northwestern National, took a day off from his duties and was married to Miss Alva A. Mitchell, a young woman of this city. He got his first view of his bride through the lens of a camera. Their mutual fondness for photography was the means of their acquaintance and marriage.

Banking News

The group meeting of bankers of Beadle, Spink, Miner and Kingsbury counties, South Dakota, held at Huron, resulted in the election of the following officials: President, H. I. Olston, Lake Preston; vice-president, R. J. Steffin, Hitchcock; secretary-treasurer, E. T. Bratrud, Roswell. The following executive committee was named: John Pitzkau, Redfield; D. E. Adkins, Carthage; C. R. Bond, Esmond; Fred Gellerman, Cavour.

As a farewell token of esteem, a group of Sioux City bankers have presented to Rev. Father T. J. McCarty, of Sioux City, a silver service. Those who participated in the gift to the popular priest were: J. A. Magoun, Geo. S. Parker, Jas. F. Toy, T. F. Harrington, E. T. Kearney.

A new bank, to be known as the Wayne County Bank, has been organized at Sholes, Neb., with the following officers: W. H. Root, president; A. E. McDowell, vice-president; B. Stevenson, cashier. Mr. Stevenson is formerly from Verdigris and has had banking experience. The bank has $10,000 paid up capital. It took in $800 on deposit the first day.

The Cushing Savings, of Cushing, Ia., has increased its capital from $20,000 to $30,000.

The strange action of a traveling salesman while in the office of the Redfield National at Redfield, S. D., led to an investigation that revealed the man, who was identified as C. E. Burnett, of Joliet, Ill., who had suddenly lost his memory. The bank officials caused him to be taken into keeping until his house could be apprised of his condition.

The annual meeting of the Iowa State Savings Tuesday night resulted in the re-election of the following officers: John McHugh, president; Henry G. Weare, vice-president; L. H. Henry, cashier. The report for the year was favorable.

Christ J. Kemming, assistant cashier of the Crawford County State, Denison, Ia., died in a hospital there on May 4th, where he had been taken six weeks prior for an operation for appendicitis. The leading business houses of the city closed their doors while his funeral was being held.

Sioux City bankers are being represented at the meeting of the executive council of the American Bankers Association by W. P. Manley, president of the Security National.

The Ames Savings has purchased a property at Main and Kellogg streets and will erect a modern bank building.

Banker and Farmer Work Together in Oklahoma

President T. J. Hartman tells the Tulsa convention of banking conditions and what is being done by the association and the groups for the prosperity of the state and her people

Sixteen years ago a small body of bankers met in Guthrie and organized the Oklahoma Bankers Association. These sturdy pioneers, from the states, foresaw that much good could be accomplished and much service rendered by banding themselves into an association for education, protection and mutual advancement. It was the belief of those pioneer bankers that if they would give the best service to their customers it must be done through organization and adoption of good sound banking principles. That the organization perfected by them has met with utmost success is demonstrated by the large number of bankers present to-day. The association has grown from less than a dozen members in 1895 to 900 at the present time—a most phenomenal growth. There are only 29 banks in Oklahoma non-members. Last year at convention there were 55 non-members. Never in the history of this association has the membership been so nearly unanimous.

The object of this association is to promote the general welfare and usefulness of banking institutions, and to cultivate the acquaintance of our correspondents and customers. Every bank in the state should be a member and all work together in a spirit of harmony toward a successful goal. It is to be hoped that the banks that are not now members of this association will soon see the error of their ways and join with us in building up the best association of any state in the Union.

Your secretary is a real live wire. He is giving your association good, honest conscientious service, and has been untiring in his efforts for the promotion of our interests, and special credit is due him for the success of the association during the past year. The fact that our association shows $1,500 more earnings than at this date one year ago speaks well for his ability. I have just passed through a severe illness, during which time he has carried my load as well as his own, and I wish to publicly extend my thanks to him.

The secretaries of the various groups have been working faithfully to secure new members, and perfect county organizations, thus better providing for local conditions. A great deal of personal work has been carried on by them. To G. D. Davis, secretary of Group 4, is due credit for having every bank in Group 4 a member of the association. Your officers have presented Mr. Davis with a fitting memento for his most able service to this association. Slowly but surely the sheep are gathered into the fold where they can feel secure from the howl of the hungry wolf,—the bank burglar, who well knows the consequences of an attack on a member bank. Little did those pioneer bankers think when they were perfecting this organization that it would resolve itself into a detective bureau, and that fifteen years hence the secretary of the O. B. A. would make Oklahoma a very unhealthy place for the yegg and the bad check artist. The service rendered by your association back in the early nineties were meagre indeed. Your association was poor and not able to partake of the many benefits of organization. Your membership was too small to afford a salaried secretary. As a consequence much of the good to be accomplished by association work was not undertaken. Now you have a secretary who receives a good liberal salary and who devotes all of his time for the upbuilding of this association, and the grievance of each and every member is given most careful consideration.

I had the pleasure of attending all of the group meetings which were held in February. I believe I can truthfully say they were the best ever held in the state. Here in Oklahoma we have had a common grievance,—scarcity of feed for live stock. Your executive committee, realizing that the banker prospers only as the farmer prospers, and that the farmer is the real producer, and further realizing that the basis of any live stock loan should carry with it sufficient feed to carry such live stock until a new crop could be produced, sought a remedy for the evil. J. B. Adams, cashier of the Butler County Bank of El Dorado, Kansas, kindly consented to attend our group meetings and tell us what Kaffir corn has done for Butler county, Kansas. He addressed every group in the state and was met everywhere with enthusiasm and the most careful attention. His message was a new one to most bankers in Oklahoma, but his sincerity of purpose and recital of facts left no room for doubt. I fully believe that Kaffir corn and its relation to the banker as presented by Mr. Adams will do more for the upbuilding of the banking condition and the prevention of another feed famine in Oklahoma than anything yet attempted in this state. The bankers who were so fortunate as to hear this lecture fully realize its import. This address was printed in pamphlet form, and 140,000 have been distributed by member banks to their customers. Mr. Adams gave his service gratuitously to this association. He gave his time and experience, and he will always receive a hearty welcome in Oklahoma.

Hon. John Fields of the Oklahoma Farm Journal also volunteered his service and attended each of the group meetings. His address, "The Co-operation of the Banker and the Farmer," was met with enthusiasm. He gave his time and talent for the good of the cause in Oklahoma, and if the acreage of alfalfa, Kaffir corn and Bermuda grass is doubled in 1912, Mr. Fields will feel that his efforts were not in vain.

Business conditions depend upon development along agricultural and industrial lines. Co-operation of the banker and farmer is necessary. The past year in Oklahoma has been a discouraging one for the farmer and in turn has reacted against the banker. In some localities the crops were a total failure. The bankers in these sections have had their trials and tribulations but the farmer has had the bulk of the burden to bear. The movement by the bankers over the state to help the farmers realize the importance of crop rotation and diversification whereby the general conditions would be bettered and larger crops produced is a worthy one.

We are advancing to a higher plane in the relation of man to man. We know that consideration for others is productive of human happiness. Real progress is when man can learn to "give and take," "live and let live," and this broadening spirit is growing rapidly among men in business. A really successful banker must be something more than a machine. He comes in contact with every form and phase of life. He learns to study people and their needs. However engrossed in business a man may be, he must extend his mental horizon beyond the confines of his own office and realize there are many things still worth while outside. He should not forget that his patrons have the same hopes, the same struggles, the same burdens and the same rights as himself. He should realize he is a citizen of the state to which he also owes responsibilities and duties. By helping the farmer of his community he is adding to the assets of the state. A man must be big and broad for his business to reflect it. In this practical age we lose sight of the ideals and the things given us to enjoy. The banker should realize that there are other things in life that should command his attention besides mere money making. A man will be all the stronger for his struggles in the business world for having an occasional visit with the farmer of his community to enjoy the woods and streams and the big out-doors. In our mad race for money we lose sight of a great many excellent things along the way. You all know how easy it is to follow in the "calf path" of our fathers. We are prone to stick religiously to one certain way of doing a task simply because it has been done that way for centuries. This reminds me of my visit a few years ago to the home of my childhood. When I was a boy there was an old tin sign at a cross-roads which read, "Pleasanton 7 miles." I see that old sign still points religiously in the same direction, but instead of a road it now points towards a field. The road has been closed for many years. A great many of us are like that old sign. We stick to our task and do it the same old way unmindful of another and better way. I do not mean to advocate that we should be looking around for some new way of doing our work, but that we should be willing to give new methods a fair and impartial trial.

I hope the co-operation movement as inaugurated by our committee will meet with the approval of this association. I do not feel that it is an innovation. The banker produces nothing. He only helps the other fellow to produce. If the campaign carried on by this association during the past year will result in bringing the farmer and banker in closer relation with each other and encourage crop diversification, I will feel that some good has been done.

I wish to thank each and every banker who has been instrumental in helping to make the association work a success during the past year. You have been faithful workers, and I have had the hearty co-operation of all our members. The association work has been a great pleasure to me, and the spirit of harmony that has prevailed during my administration is very gratifying to me.

It is indeed a pleasure to be entertained in this beautiful little city, located as it is in the richest oil and gas belt in the world, where but a few years ago the only sound to break the stillness of the night was the howl of the coyote and the ripple of the Arkansas. Here, where fortunes are made in a day; where the god Midas is succeeded by the god Oil, Tulsa is often spoken of as "The City of Wealth." It is altogether fitting and proper that we should meet here, that by association we may be better able to learn from you the art of making money. Your magnificent hotel and beautiful office buildings are monuments to the pluck and energy of your citizenship.

We have again met in annual convention. We have come together for the purpose of interchanging ideas and communing one with another. I am sure that much good will be accomplished. Your officers have made every possible effort to give you the best talent that could be procured to make this meeting a success. I note that the good people of Tulsa have provided well for the inner man, with those things that make life worth living. Drop for to-day the busy cares of life so that you may appreciate the splendid entertainment to be given by our host and enter well into the glories of the feast, realizing that the day is not far distant when you must surrender the work you have so nobly advanced to the boy who is the companion of your declining years. I give it you strictly in charge to throw off the fetters which bind you to that dingy dungeon in which you have so often conferred the third degree on some unsuspecting borrower, and enter into the pleasure to be derived from association with your fellow man. Let each and every one of you enter into the spirit of the game and return to your task with renewed hope and determination to give to life the best you have in store.

grand jury refused to indict. The solicitor stepped aside, and the governor, at my request, allowed me to employ special counsel. A special term of the court convened a few weeks after the adjournment of the first. Again an examiner appeared before the jury. Special counsel was on hand in place of the solicitor. A full investigation was had and special instructions were given the grand jury in the case by the judge. Result again, no indictment. Is it a wonder that the national bank at this place claimed to have gained largely in deposits as the result of this fiasco, this miscarriage of justice? Gentlemen of the Bankers Association of Alabama, it is your duty to educate, if you can, a more determined public spirit for the enforcement of crimes against banks and banking in Alabama. Your influence is strong enough in Alabama to accomplish much in this direction. Let me urge on you to cultivate in your homes a greater respect for the enforcement of all laws and especially the laws that are essential to the protection of banks.

The Blue Sky Law Commended

"I am in favor of a law for the regulation and control of investment companies, both foreign and domestic in this state, similar to the law now in force in the state of Kansas and commonly known as 'The Blue Sky Law.' This law briefly is as follows: Before any company or concern, either domestic or foreign, can do any business in the state of Kansas, or offer for sale any stocks, bonds, or other securities, they must submit to the banking department a sworn statement, showing a full and complete history of their affairs and exhibiting a copy or description of the security they propose to sell. The commissioner of banking must examine into these matters fully and, if satisfied with the genuineness of the concern, and is reasonably sure that the securities proposed to be sold offer a fair opportunity for a proper return, he must issue a certificate to that effect, stating in said certificate that he in no wise recommends the securities, or advises the purchase thereof.

Once a year these concerns are required to file a sworn report of their condition with the commissioner of banking and he may examine into the affairs of the concern like examining a bank. All expense of the examination is borne by the investment concern. Heavy penalties are imposed for engaging in business without a permit from the commissioner of banking, and for failure to file sworn statements each year. My investigations show that this law has been productive of much good in Kansas. A similar law is badly needed in Alabama. I am told that Alabama is regarded as the very best field for the operation of the fake investment seller. Many thousands of dollars are annually invested in wild-cat stocks, bonds and other so-called securities, most of them out of the state investments. The bankers are deeply interested in abolishing this evil from the state. Much money is annually withdrawn from banks for these fraudulent schemes, and legitimate investments suffer. You should see to it that the next legislature passes a law to regulate and control this evil. Whether this law should be under the supervision of the banking department or under the supervision of the secretary of state's office, I am not prepared to say; and, in fact, this is a matter of detail that is of little moment. I promise you to lend all my energy to aid you in securing the passage of this law, should the legislature convene in extra session. And, if it should fall to me to administer this law, I promise you to drive these swindlers out of your borders, as Mr. Dole of Kansas has driven them out of his state."

KANSAS CITY DEFICIT

Edward P. Moxey and Gardiner W. Kimball, of the firm of Edward P. Moxey & Co., Philadelphia, certified public accountants, have returned from Kansas City, Mo., where they recently have completed an investigation of the books of the city comptroller and the city auditor, for the purpose of determining the amount of the deficit in the general funds of the city at the close of the fiscal year ending April 15th. Their examination reveals the fact that the city had expended up to that time, according to the comptroller's books, $816,490.49 and according to the books of the auditor $818,648.81 more than the revenue of the city. This money was drawn from the city treasury and represents moneys of the bond, sinking and other special funds.

MAINLY ABOUT BANKS AND BANKERS

until 1913. Those on the 1912 list embrace T. R. Preston of Tennessee and D. McK. Lloyd of Pittsburgh, both of whom have given good service.

E. S. TEFT, New York, and E. R. Gurney of E. Nebraska quit in 1912, and they will be missed. Mr. Gurney is a particularly able speaker. J. W. Wheeler of Minnesota goes off also. He isn't a public speaker, but is a prince of good fellows, and has a host of friends.

W. J. BAILEY, Kansas, retires. Some call him a kicker but the governor says he only did it to get acquainted. He left his mark in many places, but always for the good of the association, and "no favorites" were played.

NEXT year R. C. Stephenson of South Bend, Ind., will head the savings bank section, and J. F. Sartori of Los Angeles will be in second place. They make a strong team—"the long and the short of it."—Mr. Stephenson tips the scales at about 240, and Mr. Sartori at about 110. Both are serious workers.

H. P. BECKWITH is on until 1914, and there is talk of his organizing a glee club. He gave us a sample at New Orleans and made a hit.

THE American Bankers Association maintains eleven standing committees in addition to the executive committees elected by the various sections. At Briarcliff there was an attendance of perhaps two hundred persons authorized by custom and otherwise to charge up their expenses to the association. The administration by committee had grown to be an abuse.

THE constitution does not permit members of council to delegate their functions to appointive committees. This is very clear when that ancient document is examined with a view to determining that responsibility.

AT Briarcliff by an almost unanimous vote of the council it was decided to go back to the former system wherein the work of the association devolves upon the regularly elected members of the executive body. Further, it was decided that hereafter the expenses of committeemen will not be paid by the association. Two committees which have been in the harness for many years promptly resigned, one of the resignations to take effect at once and the other to become effective at Detroit.

ONE of the committees referred to had been in existence so long that several of its members no longer were in the banking business and consequently not members of the association, yet they still participated and regularly sent in their expense accounts.

WHETHER or not the elimination will be carried to the extent of not paying the expenses of the executive committees of the sections to the mid-year conference was not fully determined. It is certain, however, that Governor Bailey, who introduced the resolution to cut off all committees from expense account privileges, intended to include every sort of committeeman and to leave only members of council in their former standing.

COMMITTEES were in attendance at Briarcliff which had not been called for any purpose and which held no sessions during the week. This helped some to create the sentiment which practically abolished this much abused system of administration. One of the committees which resigned was that on express companies and money orders. Its work will have been finished at Detroit. Another committee which handed in its resignation to take effect at once was that on fidelity bonds and burglary insurance.

THERE remains work to be done under these subdivisions but hereafter it will be done by members of council. Rumor had it at Briarcliff that R. E. James of Pennsylvania will be the new head of the committee on fidelity bonds and burglary insurance. Mr. James is an attorney and has had legislative experience. He is at the head of a trust company which has more deposits than all of the other banks in his city combined, which ought to give him a passport to a front seat when it comes to doing committee work, especially on the subject of bonds and insurance.

THE committee on agriculture is in some sense a special committee. Of the $2,000 appropriated for its use at New Orleans but $25 have been spent, and the members of that sterling organization did not send in any expense account. There could be no possible excuse for discharging such a committee nor for passing any threatening resolutions about expense accounts.

THERE were a score or more members of council at Briarcliff not connected with any committee whatsoever. They are the authorized representatives of their respective states and are both able and willing to do the work of the association. Naturally they ought to be getting experience, and the fact that committees have been preferred in the management heretofore was what stirred up the council to swing the ax at Briarcliff and to behead the favorites.

SEVERAL other reforms are promised at Detroit. Some of the best minds in the association believe that many of the abuses which are so obvious can be eliminated without crippling in the slightest the work of the organization or its power for good.

INDIANA bankers convention will be held at Indianapolis as usual this year with headquarters at the Claypool Hotel. Secretary Andrew Smith notifies us that the dates selected are October 16th and 17th and that a strong program is being arranged. Indiana draws a large attendance and this year will be no exception to the rule.

HENRY W. YATES, head of the Nebraska National, has had published in pamphlet form his reply to the National Citizens League and will send copies to every banker in the state of Nebraska.

MR. YATES believes himself to have been unjustly attacked in the printed matter sent out by Mr. Farwell's organization, and being something of a "natural born fighter," went after the organization in his usual emphatic way. His reply was printed in a recent issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER.

PRESIDENT C. J. WEISER of the Winnesheik County State Bank of Decorah, Ia., makes a strong report in his statement of April 3d, showing deposits of $1,410,773.21.

WOOD COUNTY (Wis.) banks show a big gain in deposits in the last statement. There are nine banks in the county, and deposits have increased from $4,187,163.73 to $4,388,060.20, a total gain of more than two hundred thousand.

LATEST reports from the Northwest indicate that J. S. Pomeroy is being given general support for the vice-presidency of the Minnesota association.

THERE is quite an even race for big figures between the First National and the Ottumwa National at Ottumwa, Iowa. The resources of the First are $1,415,288.97 and those of the Ottumwa National are $1,363,947.

While the First has slightly the better of it in resources, the deposits of the Ottumwa National exceed those of the First by about one hundred thousand.

ANDREW J. FRAME is said to be recovering slowly from the dissipations (nothing stronger than Horlick's served) connected with the celebration of his golden jubilee in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of his connection with the Waukesha National.

MR. FRAME is said to be considerably disturbed about what to do with a solid gold plate which was presented to him and which was highly advertised. It will be a temptation to thieves if kept at the house, and of no particular service if locked up in a vault. Mr. Frame is said to be contemplating putting it in the banking rooms upon a pedestal and encased by glass.

NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL of Minneapolis in its review letter for May predicts that this year will be a very prosperous one for the Northwest. They have had just what the Northwest requires—lots of rain and a late spring with no setbacks or chilling frosts.

U. S. NATIONAL at Salem, Oregon, has published a comparative statement showing its growth in deposits since 1905. In the eight years covered by this report the bank has increased its deposits from $99,000 to a million and a quarter.

MARION COUNTY, in which Salem is situated, has seventeen banks with a capital of one million forty-seven thousand dollars, and total resources of more than seven and one-half millions. Outside of the three large banks in Salem the deposits seem to be pretty evenly distributed among the others.

WARE & LELAND have received telegraphic reports from bankers all over Minnesota and the two Dakotas regarding the crop in that section. A summary of the telegrams would indicate that the condition of the wheat crop varies from "good," and "favorable" to "the best ever," which bears out the Northwestern National's prediction for prosperity.

ANOTHER Teeter has been discovered. He uses one more letter "e" in his way of spelling it, but doubtless "Nelson Teeter, pioneer Indian fighter," pictured and written up in the Spokesman-Review, is kin to Lucius Teter. Our Mr. Teter isn't in the "scrapping class," but is willing always to contend for what he believes to be right. At least this is his reputation in A. B. A. circles.

SECRETARY ARCH. B. DAVIS reports that only 29 out of a total of 611 banks in the state are not members of the Kentucky Bankers Association. This means that 582 banks actually have paid dues for this year, breaking all membership records.

THE fiscal year is exactly six months old, and every week several additions to the Kentucky membership are recorded. Groups 2, 3, 5 and 9 have every bank a member, while several other groups lack from one to three banks of having a solid membership. Davis hopes to be in the Keyser class by and by.

NO other state has so rapidly cut down the rates on fidelity and burglary bonds, and Secretary Davis has saved Kentucky bankers from six to eight thousand dollars per year in premiums alone.

RALPH C. WILSON isn't to be allowed to have the race for the Illinois secretaryship all to himself. A dark horse is spoken of and there may be additional entries.

MECHANICS-AMERICAN NATIONAL (St. Louis) May letter tells of improved business conditions and considerable "rush business" in which the bank has completed retail stocks at its new downtown center.

COMMISSIONER KUOLT, reporting the state banks and trust companies for April 18th, shows, over February 20th, a gain of over four millions, chiefly in time certificates and savings, indicating general prosperity in Wisconsin.

CENTRAL TRUST sends out an attractive municipal and railroad bond circular, well worth attention by investors.

W. D. VINCENT is to "speak" on agricultural and vocational education at the Washington convention. Will Secretary Kauffman kindly explain how he did it?

ORVILLE A. PARK, counsel for the Georgia Bankers Association, has advised that paying drafts attached to bills of lading for whisky is a violation, by the Georgia banker who does it, of the prohibition law of the state.

"RULES and Regulations" to be observed by employees of the First National, Sioux City, Ia., is a clever little booklet which ought to be put on sale. Perhaps President John McHugh, one of the best of Iowa's many good bankers, will send you one if you ask it.

BANKERS AND AGRICULTURE

By a unanimous vote the executive council of the American Bankers Association has endorsed the field-demonstration bills pending in congress for giving national aid to the teaching of agriculture. One of the bills provides that the federal government shall appropriate $10,000 to every state that shall appropriate an equal amount for such teaching; another bill is for the appropriation of $3,000,000 in the various states.

Between bankers and the farms there is a close connection which makes it possible for the various associations of bankers to have much influence over farmers and farm methods. At least twenty state bankers associations have taken action toward promoting farm betterment. The American Bankers Association, comprising some 12,500 banks, has a standing committee on agricultural development and education, on whose report the resolution favoring aid by congress was passed.

There cannot be too much instruction in agriculture of the right sort. The nation and the states should provide for it, in view of the prospect that unless farm production increases we shall suffer as a people. Liberal appropriations should be made by congress.—Record-Herald.

INTERESTING GUESTS AT BRIAR-CLIFF

Those who attended the Briarcliff sessions had much pleasure in meeting Mrs. White and her companion, Miss Marie G. Young, of Washington, D. C., who are among the survivors of the "Titanic" disaster. The ladies in the party found much interest in visiting Miss Young's apartments at the Lodge and viewing her splendid collection of paintings, bronzes and bric-à-brac. Miss Young told in a modest yet thrilling manner her experiences in getting away from the doomed boat.

CHICAGO HAS LARGEST BANK

Much as it is supposed to hurt a New Yorker to admit anything favorable to Chicago, one of its newspapers has finally acknowledged, what THE CHICAGO BANKER repeatedly has pointed out, that this city has the largest bank in the United States. The Financial Chronicle, one of the best known of Wall Street's publicity organs, says:

"It is marvelous how Chicago is growing in every direction, particularly how its banking institutions are increasing in size and magnitude. That city now enjoys the distinction of having the largest bank in the United States.

"There are a number of Chicago banks which rank on a par with the biggest banks in this city, but it remained for the Continental and Commercial National Bank to reach an aggregate of deposits which exceeds even that of the National City Bank of New York.

"Under the call of the comptroller of the currency for a statement of the condition of the national banks on April 18th the National City Bank shows deposits of $228,419,618. The Continental and Commercial Bank of Chicago for the same date reports deposits of $190,959,580, but this is exclusive of the $26,694,776 deposits of the Hibernian Banking Association, whose entire capital stock is owned by the stockholders of the Continental and Commercial National, and it is also exclusive of the $22,202,836 deposits of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, the stock of which is similarly owned. This makes combined deposits of $239,857,193, which exceeds by over $11,000,000 the $228,419,618 of deposits of the National City Bank of New York.

"That a Chicago institution should be able to record such imposing results is even more significant than for a New York bank to attain a similar distinction. For it is to be said for the Chicago banking concerns that they are banks in the truest and best sense of the word. It cannot be charged that their business is with Wall Street or with the stock market. They cater to the needs of the mercantile community. No doubt some portion of their funds is invested here in the East, but, broadly speaking, their energies are devoted to satisfying the ever expanding needs of the West."

GROUP 6, INDIANA

The annual meeting of Group 6, Indiana, will be held at Rising Sun on May 22d. Visiting bankers will be welcomed by the local bankers, and on the arrival of the boat the Rising Sun brass band will play selections from "Blue Jeans." It will be remembered that Joseph Arthur, a play writer, put Rising Sun on the map during the World's Fair in Chicago when "Blue Jeans" had a long run at a local theatre.

The German American Savings Bank, La-Motte, Ia., has increased its capital stock from $10,000 to $20,000.

Supervision of Private Banks

George Woodruff, president of the First National, Joliet, has long been considered one of the leaders in increasing the usefulness of the Illinois Bankers Association to its membership and to the public. Group organization, county organization work, and "revision and rejuvenation" of the time serving constitution can be credited in large part to his foresight and energy. In the matter of supervision for private banks Mr. Woodruff goes on record in an interview, in which he has said for publication:

"The question of the supervision of all banks in the state of Illinois is engaging the attention of the Illinois Bankers Association, and to a more or less extent the public in general. In the past I have advocated the supervision of private banks, believing that the interests of the public are paramount to the interests of the gentlemen engaged in the private banking business, but at the last convention of the Illinois Bankers Association I stated that I did not believe that it was to the best interests of the association to carry on the campaign for supervision inside of the organization.

"I took this position because the private bankers had given up the special privileges which they formerly had enjoyed by reason of the special provisions in the constitution; because one-third of the members were private bankers whose rights to the protection of the association were just as good as the rights of the other two-thirds; because after some supervisory law has been passed, as it surely will be passed in the reasonably near future, the association would wish to retain, as interested enthusiastic members, all of the reorganized private bankers; and last of all, because I believed the campaign could be carried on with dignity, and without bitterness before the legislature of the state with greater chance of success than could be carried on within the bankers association. Victory in the bankers association puts no laws upon the statute books. The convictions of the officials of the association have been slightly at variance with the convictions held by me on this subject, and they have presented this entire matter to the association for action. It therefore occurs to me that it is just as well to meet the facts as they actually exist, and regardless of individual opinion as to whether the matter should have been threshed out before the association or before the legislature, recognize the fact that the association is going to thresh it out, and urge every member to take an active interest.

"A majority of the members undoubtedly are in favor of supervision, and those members who are opposed to supervision should carefully analyze the situation and firmly grasp the fact that supervision of some sort will without doubt be advocated by the organization. It therefore is up to them to advance some plan. To oppose all supervision is a mistaken policy, for public sentiment is for supervision, and the wise opponent will take no obstructive attitude, but rather will come forward with a constructive plan. Such a plan unquestionably would receive the respectful consideration of the committee that has been appointed as well as everybody else for, while public sentiment in Illinois is in favor of supervision, nevertheless, it at the same time, is friendly toward the great majority of private bankers, and very strongly inclined to guarantee all of those bankers vitally interested in this question treatment that is absolutely fair.

A constructive program on the part of the private bankers of the state of Illinois doubtless would lead to legislation that would safeguard the interests of the people of the state, and would prove to be satisfactory to the interests of the private bankers. Such a program would, further, serve to eliminate any feelings of bitterness or resentment against those leaders in this movement who are but voicing the real public sentiment of a majority of the people of Illinois. It is up to the private bankers themselves to take some action."

CHICAGO ANSWERS MONEY TRUST QUESTIONS

Several of the larger banks in Chicago have completed and either have sent or soon will send to Washington the reports containing most of the information asked for recently by the house committee on banking and currency, which is bent upon an investigation of the "money trust." In expressing their willingness to co-operate with the Pujo committee Chicago bankers have drawn down upon themselves the displeasure of prominent bankers in other centers where the disposition is to ignore the request for information and to resent what is called "congressional interference with business."

CHICAGO SAVINGS BANK AND TRUST EXPANDS

Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company will move its trust and real estate loan department on May 27th to the third floor of the building to provide additional facilities for their increased business.

J. S. Aisthorpe

Col. J. S. Aisthorpe, Cairo, was the presiding officer at the Carbondale meeting of Group 10, and was honored by being elected a regular member of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association. It was openly talked at Carbondale that the Colonel will again be a candidate for the chairmanship at the Peoria convention.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

AGRICULTURAL development is having a place on almost every state convention program as well as at the group meetings this year.

THE American Bankers Association endorsed the movement at the New Orleans convention and the executive council at its Briarcliff meeting went so far as to petition congress for an extension of farm demonstration work in the North and West. No movement ever set on foot by the bankers has become so popular in so short a time. Not even the gold standard movement nor that in favor of reserve association banking can compare with it.

THE whole thing was started about three years ago by Joseph Chapman, Jr., at that time president of the Minnesota Bankers Association. The farmer-bankers of the state thought it a pretty good joke and began calling him "Farmer Joe." There is considerable glory in that title now.

J. W. WHEELER, then located at Crookston, was minded facetiously to address an express package to "The farmers' friend, Minneapolis." It was delivered to Mr. Chapman all right, and the whole subject began to take on a more serious aspect.

FARMERS themselves, university professors and heads of agricultural schools began to be interested. Congressional committees saw something in it and a number of bills now are under way before congress, and but for the political exigencies of the season might have been enacted into laws long before now.

NEXT came the calling of the agricultural and educational conference at Minneapolis and St. Paul last year. This was rated the most interesting meeting ever held by bankers in this country. The proceedings were printed in a pamphlet, which was distributed to the members of nearly twenty state associations. Illinois, Kansas, Iowa, the Dakotas, Washington, Wisconsin and other states fell promptly into line and took their quota of the books.

ALL of the states named and referred to have appointed, or have agreed to appoint, agricultural committees. The American Bankers Association appointed a standing committee at New Orleans of which Mr. Chapman is the chairman and of which B. F. Harris of Illinois, E. J. Curtin of Iowa, and W. D. Vincent of Washington are among the most enthusiastic workers.

ILLINOIS started second in the fight but is coming fast. Her state association has issued more printed pamphlets than any of the other state associations. President Harris has accepted speech-making appointments at all of the state conventions which it has been possible for him to attend.

THE original Minnesota committee discovered that more than 96 per cent of the children in school never get beyond the primary grades; only 2 per cent attend the secondary schools and less than 2 per cent go to college. In the face of this showing the absurdity of basing primary education on collegiate requirements is apparent. Minnesota, Wisconsin, the Dakotas, Illinois and other states are hard at work introducing agricultural and vocational training into the public schools as well as into the colleges and universities. Great good eventually must come of this work.

EARLY in August the second annual agricultural and educational conference of bankers, farmers and educators will be held at Minneapolis and St. Paul. The program is being prepared with the greatest care and the proceedings volume will furnish a text-book which no doubt will find a useful field in every state in the Union. Farming and primary education of children have not been advanced with the other arts and sciences nor with the business and banking development of the country. Consumers have been multiplying much more rapidly than producers until the country has reached a point where James J. Hill has been led to remark that "If nothing else does, an empty stomach will drive the people back to the soil."

FINANCIAL and banking newspapers of the country have been making much of a paragraph supposed to have originated at Briarcliff in which it was stated that "90 per cent of the bankers of the country are land owners and 70 per cent of them are engaged in farming operations."

WHAT was said was that "90 per cent of the country bankers in Illinois own land and 70 per cent of them are engaged in farming operations." There is a very wide difference between what was said and what is quoted as having been said.

MANY editorials have been written which have been based upon this misquotation. As applied to the country districts of Illinois it is true; as applied to the bankers of the whole country it is not true, and even might be thought ridiculous by those who are posted.

THOSE who attended the group meeting at Carbondale on Wednesday noticed that George Woodruff and J. S. Aisthorpe had a number of apparently confidential conferences. Very likely the subject of the chairmanship of the next council might have been mentioned? Both gentlemen have a great many friends, and a little contest between them ought to be very entertaining.

THE Peoria convention will be much more interesting if there are a number of candidates, but the chief difficulty will be to get both Mr. Aisthorpe and Mr. Woodruff in the field at one time. It has been whispered that one will not run against the other.

COMMODORE WILLIAM LIVINGSTONE of Detroit, president of the American Bankers Association, went through Chicago on Sunday headed for Joplin, Mo., where he was to speak on Tuesday. From Joplin he went to Topeka, Kan., and was busy preparing his address on the train, so W. G. Edens telegraphed.

ALBERT MOBLEY of Monroe, Ga., in delivering his address on "The Conservation of Our Money Power," at Atlantic Beach, on Friday, ranked the banks of the country along with the churches and the schools as leading features of our civilization.

A BANKER friend has figured it out that Bryan will be the nominee at Baltimore. He says that the democrats figure that Bryan can beat Taft, and that on a third term proposition he could beat Col. Roosevelt. This sounds like true democratic doctrine, and it might be well to give it some consideration.

WARE & LELAND of this city are advising the greatest caution in market operations. This firm lists as among the unfavorable possibilities a failure of the wheat crop, continued unseasonable weather, labor troubles and political unrest and disturbances.

MEMBERS of the Chicago Association of Commerce took a prominent part in the laying of the corner-stone of the new Commerce Building, which was erected by the University of Illinois at Urbana on May 21st. President E. N. Kimbark went down from Chicago and delivered an address. There were present beside him Governor Deneen, President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association; H. T. Markham, president of the Illinois Central Railroad; W. L. Abbott, and W. C. Zimmerman, all of whom made short talks.

DR. JAMES nearly thirty years ago became a professor of commerce in the University of Pennsylvania, and ever since that time has had confirmed convictions that the teaching of commerce is part of the work of every state university.

BANKING associations all over the country have taken up the subject of vocational training, which of course includes training of business men. Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and California maintain such departments, as well as Pennsylvania, New York and some of the New England universities.

COL. ROBERT J. LOWRY, president of the Lowry National at Atlanta, has been elected a director of the American National at Macon, Ga. The Colonel is one of the best known bankers in the entire South, and is a

THE LIVE STOCK Exchange National BANK
OF CHICAGO

Explains Co-operative Farm Loans at Joplin

All business must prosper in direct proportion as the products come from the soil. No bank can prosper except as other business prospers; no business can prosper when crops fail. A bank's best asset is its absolutely safe investment, or when its money is on a profitable working basis. Idle capital or that on an unprofitable investment or on questionable security is a poor asset. It is poor policy for a bank or any other business to make its customer poorer, or deprive him of his working or earning capacity. To keep our soil fertile that it may feed the world, and in addition allow the world to earn a living is of first importance to the nation.

The above propositions are fundamental, and this discussion will be largely based upon them.

About 75 per cent of the raw material for the shop and the factory comes directly from the farm, and when the farms fail to produce the raw material the shop and the factory must close doors. This means idle workers, and idle workers mean uncollected bills, which mean poor and unprofitable business, which means idle capital or bad investment; so getting to first principles it should be clearly a business proposition to see that the farms do prosper. Bad policy has worked such mischief to our fertile soils in this country that it will require a great many years of hard labor and expense to put them back to the fertile condition in which we found them when we took them from the red man.

It requires broad sense to intelligently till the soil. This truth in all our schools has not been recognized, and only in the last decade has it dawned upon us that a farmer needed educating in his business, and in too many of our states to-day, our own not excepted, the people are not liberal enough in caring for our institutions that are training our young people to rightly care for and protect the fertility of our soil. Not half the work demanded can be done for lack of funds. So our policy toward the farmer's school has not been liberal enough.

As nearly as I can ascertain 8 per cent income on the money invested in the banking business would be a conservative figure, and many bankers are also investors in farms, and not to consider land prices changing, the investment from rentals, etc., would perhaps not average above 4 per cent profit. Then the question arises, if the banker cannot realize above 4 per cent in farm investment, can the farmer be expected to realize more than that? Also, is it good business for banker or borrower when money is loaned at a higher rate than the investment will produce? The bank is taking not only too great a risk, but it is making the borrower poorer to the extent of the difference between the rate of interest and rate of income on the borrowed money invested. It is certainly poor policy for the bank to make its customer poorer, which it does when it loans him money for an investment on which he cannot realize as great a rate of income as he pays interest.

The question I'm driving at is, that from what I can find out interest rates to farmers are too high to be either safe for bank or farm-

Manager S. M. Jordan of the Pettis (Mo.) County Bureau of Agriculture tells bankers the easiest way to help the farmer. An able and interesting paper from a practical, successful teacher who stands for—a more fertile soil, better live stock, better seed grains, better markets for farm products, better public highways, better country schools and better farm homes er, because we must have prosperous farmers to have prosperous banks.

A farmer may have grown a good crop, and would like to be able to feed it, but he does not have the money to buy stock. He goes to his banker to borrow and is asked from about 7 to 8 per cent. He knows farm investments bring about four, so he sees himself losing 4 per cent on his loan, and does not borrow, but sells his crop on the market. He makes up his mind that he will not take any risks of borrowing, and to sell his crop will make him less work besides.

Note results: Every ton of hay that goes from his farm takes from $7 to $10 worth of his soil fertility with it. Every ton of grain that leaves the farm takes from $12 to $15 worth of his soil fertility along. That is, should he return this fertility to his soil it would cost those amounts. He thus is very rapidly selling the very source of his income, or if you please, "killing the goose that lays the golden egg"; while could he have fed his crops and returned the manures to his land he would then have sold little from his soil in the way of fertility, as there is less than 50 per cent worth of soil fertility in a ton of animal fat.

Thus when a rate of interest is higher than the rate of income on the investment the borrower must lose; when he loses then the bank's asset is impaired. If the farmer does not make the loan but sells his crops on the market, he is selling the fertility of his land, and is the loser thereby. It thus would seem clear that some plan should be devised whereby the farmer can secure cheaper money on personal security.

The facts are, that some plan must be worked out, and the farmers as a class desire that the banks work it out. The farmers do not like to take hold of such matters, and they never do so until necessity compels them. A plan by the banks can be started much like the farmers of some countries of Europe have had to do. The plan is not difficult and it works. The state bankers association, it seems to me, would do well to see if the plan cannot be put into operation in this state, and be done by the bankers.

The farmer must get cheaper money, and if the banks cannot get it for him, he must take steps to get it for himself. The plan as adopted by farmers of Europe is to take first mortgage security, and issue bonds against the organization, the bonds being secured by these mortgages. The organization collects all interest and payments, so that the holders of the bonds absolutely are as secure as if they held government bonds.

Much money that is not bringing more than 2 per cent or that may be idle would be called into action on farms to make them produce more and better surplus, and enable the more conservative use of crops.

Credit Systems

Would it not be ideal if every man who tills the soil could own at least a part of the land he tills?

If every man in Missouri owned a home and lived in it, padlocks would find poor sale. Instead of wider ownership of land the reverse seems to be taking place. Notwithstanding all that has been said of making farms smaller, in many sections of the country, they are becoming larger and fewer persons are owning them. This certainly is brought about because, when the buyer must go heavily in debt on his lands, the average one never gets the debt cleared, and when this condition confronts him he sees that his easiest escape is in selling his farm and finding work in town, or in renting his land. And under our modern system of renting, the destruction of our soil fertility begins the day the renter begins operation. Again is our source of the nation's wealth impaired.

Many young men to-day are being prepared by our colleges to take up the best modern systems of farming, but by the time they are done work at the colleges their means either are exhausted, or nearly so, and many actually are in debt when their terms close. These are young men of our finest types, and if some plan could be devised whereby they could begin more quickly ownership in farms it would result in a great national blessing. Their methods would be copied and better systems could be brought about much more rapidly.

Young men of good character who are industrious, and who have some scientific training for the farm, and who have to begin as renters are about the only ones who can hope to be land owners except those whose fathers give them land. Their fathers, to be sure, paid for the land without this special training, but I know of as good land as the sun shines on, that men who still are living bought for 50 cents an acre. This same land to-day is selling for upwards of $100 an acre.

This brings us to the point of the Farmers Credit System—a system designed to aid persons to cheap money on personal security. First mortgage farm loans are very reasonable, but not so on farm personal security. The rate of interest on farm personal security is often more than on city personal security, where business men borrow money. These personal loans are backed by the organization, and only persons of the best moral character, and who are known to be industrious, and to have had training for their work would be those who would be beneficiaries of the credit system.

"To get a start" is the hardest pull, and a little help at the outset is where the greatest good can be done.

Most any such young man as above described can get aid of his friends or directly from his banker, but the rates of interest are not safe for him to assume. And the co-operative plan makes the security gilt-edged, hence should be secured at comparative rates with those on first-mortgaged real estate lands.

The credit system is conducive to good citizenship since only those of quality can secure its benefits, and good citizenship is of first importance to our Republic.

It seems to me that bankers from the very nature of things eventually will put just such a plan in motion. Such a credit system as this exists in many universities whereby students are loaned money from a fund created for the purpose, who could not complete their courses without some aid.

Such a plan might not render returns quite so quickly but ultimate results certainly would be greater. It occurs to me that the Missouri Bankers Association could put this plan in motion to their own, and to the state's great gain. I believe that could the rate of farm money be made equal to the rates of income on farm investments, much more working capital could be put into service on our farms. That this would be desirable is evident, as too little cash capital now is at work on our American farms. This certainly would add much to the earning capacity of the farms, thereby adding a like proportion to the earning capacity of all other lines of business. This would mean that the only way a bank could fail would be from crooked work or too expensive operation.

These ideas hold well in theory, but the difficulty lies in their operation. Human nature asserts herself (a sort of a fashion human nature has), and we charge "all the traffic will bear." When the demand will pay 8 per cent we charge it and get it. When the demand will pay but 4 per cent that is all we will secure. It is, no doubt, that the demand as it comes is prompted by our love of risk. We love the gamblers' chance, and base our action on the record of the few who win rather than on that of the many who lose.

After all our theories have been spun we eventually will find that to be secure we must on our farms operate so as to eliminate as many risks as possible, and so far as I know, the most effective way to do that is to mix more brains with our farm work, in other words, men on the farm succeed in proportion to the judgment they can exercise. Wide scientific knowledge of agriculture is perhaps our greatest aid in exercising good judgment, yet that knowledge is not all, for it has been truthfully said that to "educate a fool makes him a bigger fool." Yet, "educating the farmer for the farmer's business" is the only known way to secure good judgment, as this judgment must be reached through scientific fact.

Many successful farmers, it is true, have had either little or no scientific training in school, yet by close observation, they are truly scientific. They may not be aware of it, but they are so, nevertheless. Science is simply sense, not a code of rules, nor an almanac full of signs. We have been farming too long by rules and signs, and the sooner we learn that there is no one way that is best everywhere all the time, the better off we will be. We, who are older, will continue the balance of the time that the Lord allows us to farm, to farm largely by rule, and by sign as our father did, and it is to the young to whom we must look for betterment of method and, incidentally, more than 90 per cent of our farm boys and girls get all the schooling they ever get in the country school, and that schooling teaches them comparatively nothing of farm matters.

The course in the country school is made to fit into the course in the town or city high school, and that is made to fit into the course in the college and the university, and these courses have trained for every vocation under the sun except that of farming. Twenty-five years ago, who ever heard of an agricultural graduate? A farmer as a "graduate" not long ago would have been thought a joke.

The farmer must, in the future, be trained for his business the same as for any other business.

The farmer is very skeptical as to things he does not understand, and that is wise. He has been the object of the swindler for all the ages, and his suspicious nature has been bred in him for generations. Yet to-day the farmer is not the man who is most often "gold-bricked." It is more often the banker, perhaps, or some other man in what we call "business." I draw an idea that should you turn me loose in your "safety deposit" vaults, I could dig up a little stock in an oil (?) well, or a gold (?) mine, neither of which yields up anything as good as limestone. Or I could find a deed to a town lot which you drew by chance in a new town site in the Panhandle on the survey of the new "International Consolidated Stem Winding Electric Railway," or that town site may be in the Gulf of Mexico. Anyway, these things are without doubt in all your vaults, and they are "embalmed in fond memory" in the names of editors, doctors, lawyers (sharp ones, too), merchants, rich widows, and even bankers—in fact all tribes are represented there except farmers. He buys some patent gate or chicken yoke or a setting of scratchless hen eggs, and before "hatching" he tells of his investment, or his wife does, and everybody knows it, but these deeds and certificates never come to light, and "the whole country" don't know it. It was not the farmers who got stung in the Belgian Hare industry.

The farmer has been "leary" about agricultural science for the reason that he has drawn wrong conclusions, and this is not at all to be wondered at, as so many "false prophets" have been abroad in the land with what they term science, that was not science at all, and the farmer with good sense would know it was wrong, hence too often it has all been put in the same class by him and cast into the junk pile.

These conditions must be remedied, and we can get a common knowledge of agricultural science by but one great means, and that is by way of the school, but the interest or desire must precede the getting, and this must be done largely by creating interest outside the school, and most largely in contest work among the boys and girls.

Bankers, and other business men, commercial clubs, and farmers' clubs rapidly are coming to the front with such splendid work that the world has never known such progress in agriculture as is at the moment now passing. The attention of the whole world's business is turning to the farm, and farmer's co-operative plans actually are being aided by the business of the town, and I confidently believe that the time is not far distant when the towns actually will aid in securing a parcels post, and from self interest alone. Time forbids a discussion of reasons here. Farmers co-operative credit systems will actually be worked out by the towns, contradictory as this may seem to-day, for the fact is basic that a prosperous farm community makes a properous town and the time is here now when many of our towns are driving from their midst the parasites that suck the farmers' "life blood" away.

The banker from his close relations to the farmer, becomes his closest counselor; hence the banker can render him greater service because of the farmer's confidence in him.

Getting down to cold facts, it must be resolved to producing and maintaining a fertile soil that greater yields of a higher quality may be produced, and when this is in operation the capital will flow to the farm. This will be done by training our young people how to do it.

I have understood that the Illinois Bankers Association, as an association, has taken an active interest and part in the Illinois Boys' Corn Growing Association by printing literature for distribution and offering prizes for contests.

It occurs to me that if the Missouri Bankers Association desires to take some action in this matter and co-operate with the Missouri State Corn Growers' Association great service can be rendered. The literature of the State Corn Growers' Association is sent over the entire country, and many of our great manufacturing interests are spending thousands of dollars in extending this splendid work, and since the banks share in the general welfare, you might deem it wise to lend your aid as an association. It would be but a small item from each bank, and the Missouri Corn Growers' Association is without capital, and its splendid secretary serves without pay. He has to beg for premiums he offers, or this once was the case, as I well remember a few years ago, when I was secretary how I "landed" on business concerns, and how most of them turned me down, yet those who "came across" are with us yet, and most of them simply ask us what we want, and they do so from the fact that this organization of farmers has made it a business proposition to do so. Your addition to the premium list would help, but I am going to "touch" you differently. Maybe you won't like it, as my plan may not be the best, but our present secretary, Prof. C. B. Hutchison, of Columbia, is one of our finest types of young men and has splendid ability, but is doing the work of secretary of the Corn Growers' Association at odd times, and doing it without pay. This work is state-wide in its results, and possibly the state should pay him, but it does not, and if this work could be done as conditions demand, it would require his entire time.

Would it be well for the Missouri Bankers

Association to pay $1,000 a year as part pay for this work? Or to lend your influence in getting the state to pay it? Or would it be well to add to the premium list? I am not begging, because to me the difference is not much, but am simply offering suggestions, and if it looks good, accept—if not, reject. I candidly think this man who is competent, by devoting all of his time, could be the means of increasing the Missouri corn yield one bushel to the acre each year for five years. Missouri plants nearly 8,000,000 acres of corn each year. One more bushel a year for five years would mean forty million more bushels of corn; this at 60 cents a bushels would mean $24,000,000 more money for the farmers' pockets, but it does not stay in his pocket. Every dollar comes to your town sooner or later, goes through the channels of business of your towns and eventually finds its way to your banks. Every dollar that the farmer gets from his farm surplus comes to town. That $24,000,000 by a cost of $4,000 a mile for rock roads, and the state averaging 300 miles across, would be enough money to build twenty rock roads entirely across this state.

It seems like poor policy to permit the organization that is doing so much to increase the production of the greatest cereal the world has ever known to have its work done by an able man whom it has no funds with which to pay. It is poor policy for state or nation to hamper our colleges of agriculture and experiment stations in their great work of showing us how to keep our soil fertile, that we may grow better crops to feed our splendid live stock. It is poor policy for state or nation to curtail by meager funds those things that are for the making of better farm homes, wherein we are to grow better girls and better boys for the future citizenship of the world. Our boys and our girls, the "paramount issue," are worth more to us than all the crops of all the fields.

A CHAPTER FROM THE ARCHIVES

By GEORGE W. MARTIN

Secretary State Historical Society.

There is no limit to the interest in Kansas history. Every feature of it bristles with attention. I am glad you asked me to indulge in hindsight. This enables one, with the aid of the magnificent Historical Collection founded by the fathers, to talk about something we know. Foresight has often proved quite faulty, but there were a few prophets in the beginning, political enthusiasts, who saw Kansas as she is to-day. A person had to be blinded to practical things and inspired by a sentiment to have in 1854 a vision of Kansas as she appears in 1912.

How can one start a talk about banking in Kansas? What was there here in the beginning to require the use of a bank? Who were the first settlers in Kansas? Were they capitalists and depositors? The settlement and organization of the territory and state of Kansas was a great enterprise, and to use a modern word, somebody had to finance it. The start of Kansas was wholly different from that of any other section of the country. It was the result of a bitter moral and political controversy. Of course there were many people who came to Kansas with the ultimate intention of establishing a home on a piece of government land, but there was a great sprinkle among them who came to fight for a principle, including many reckless ones who coveted excitement. The smartest and best of them had but little conception of the suffering, the sacrifice, the trials and the development which would follow. I am now convinced that if they had all been depositors where they came from, Kansas would to-day be a wilderness, and the buffalo and the Indian would not have been exterminated. Nerve and fortitude was the capital required, and our forefathers had plenty of it.

In those days the pioneers had to contend amidst ten years of war with very little agricultural production. The war gave government employment to many, and aside from this there were no industries of any sort. Prior to the war the people indulged in politics, conventions and elections every sixty or ninety days. From November, 1854, to November, 1860, there were twenty-five elections in the territory, or four each year. Who kept them going has been a problem in my mind for years. True, there were but few hotels with extravagant prices, but there was boundless hospitality at the dugout, the board shanty and under the canopy of heaven, with a menu everywhere that has never been surpassed since—corn bread, sorghum and sow belly. The principal capital required was a pony and a saddle. But there never was anything without expense, and how did the people live?

The man who came to Kansas in those days needed a few hundred dollars for a shanty, a plow and a yoke of cattle, and if he had enough for a year's provisions he was considerable. It was in the days of old shin-plaster money, and everybody was suspicious whether he had a cent or not. A gentleman down East has lately furnished the Historical Society with a manuscript of fifty-five pages, giving the proceedings and disbursements of an aid committee in a certain township in 1860-1861. It is a wonderful statement of the closeness with which people had to live. Every issue of aid was limited to a half bushel of potatoes, twenty-five pounds of flour, one-half peck of beans, etc., and notwithstanding much scandal and slander about that aid business these papers show an honest and square deal. Of course many settlers were able to pull through without it.

The donor of this manuscript was secretary of the aid committee and is now a brigadier-general on the retired list of the U. S. army. There are only four or five names on the list recognized to-day. There is one man charged with receiving "one half bushel of meal and twenty-five pounds of flour." This man afterwards established a small industry in that township aided by a son. It was a success and he moved East, and when he died he left one of the greatest industries in the country, involving millions, in the care of a son-in-law, general manager, and the son, general attorney. The past history of Kansas is made up of just such wonderful details. How we will to-day stack up in comparison the future must judge.

But how did the bank get a foothold in Kansas? There were no agricultural or local deposits. It was through the great transportation business on the river at Atchison and Leavenworth, supplemented during the war by government work at various forts. The bankers then were enterprising, all-round men, conducting all sorts of schemes and work. They must have been impelled by the idea that there first had to be some production before there could be a safe, steady and dignified banking institution. An instance of the scarcity of money during the territorial days of Kansas may be inferred from the following incident which is said to have occurred to John Brown: One day Brown was notified that a letter awaited him at the postoffice and he immediately made a trip for the same, only to find that the missive would be surrendered upon the payment of a small charge for transportation, which was payable in coin. Brown did not have the amount with him, but promised to soon return with it. His search, however, developed the fact that his friends and neighbors were in the same fix. There was no money in the neighborhood. A month or six weeks later he secured sufficient change and got the letter. Brown received occasional remittances from the East, but generally speaking he was always in a state of impecuniosity. Gerritt Smith at one time sent him $200 and Frank B. Sanborn was quite active in securing money for him.

A member of the Prairie City Town Company told me that in June, 1857, they induced S. S. Prouty to move his printing plant to Prairie City (now Baldwin). After a little while Prouty applied for expense money. They did not have a dollar among them, and they stood him off with the statement that his plant was not large enough for the town.

About all our people had friends or family connections back East. Enthused by the excitement over Kansas, they were easily worked in behalf of the suffering heroes on these plains. As late as the grasshopper raid of 1874 it was a common joke to ask a man on a railroad train, "Where are you going?" and the response would be, "Back to see wife's folks."

This meant he had to have another stake to get through the winter.

We talk about financing an enterprise, financing the Panama Canal, a railroad, and many sorts of projects, but there was great business done then by some one in financing the territory of Kansas. It was a great undertaking and very expensive for a region that many deemed a desert. But has the financing of any other scheme on earth paid better, in cash returns or in the comfort and happiness of mankind?

In one statement of the New England Emigrant Aid Company we find $455,000 expended in Kansas, $100,000 of which Pomeroy used in the drouth of 1860. Much of the balance was for town sites, saw mills and hotels. The Kansas National Committee prior to January, 1857, when it dissolved, sent to Kansas about $200,000. A report says that "one half of this value probably reached its destination; the remainder, during the disordered times of the summer and fall (1856) was interrupted and destroyed and appropriated by the numerous bands of pro-slavery regulators who infested the landings on the Upper Missouri plundering Free State emigrants in the name of law and order." A Boston relief committee by June 1, 1856, sent out $20,000, and in the summer and fall of 1856 George L. Stearns gathered and sent $80,000. Gerritt Smith's contribution to the Kansas fund was $1,000 per month, which he continued until October, 1857. The widow of Lord Byron sent sixty-five pounds sterling, for the relief of the Kansas sufferers. The Massachusetts legislature appropriated $100,000 but the governor stopped it by a veto. Vermont appropriated $20,000 notwithstanding Governor Geary wrote the governor of Vermont that it was not necessary. There are innumerable statements of the raising of money for Kansas, but how much duplication there may be it is not my purpose to straighten out, or is it necessary to be accurate. It is enough to show that we were liberally financed. Daniel W. Wilder estimated the amount of anti-slavery money sent here to be about $250,000.

There were three issues of scrip in territorial days, and being without a redeemer it is curious to know what became of it. We have occasional inquiries to this day as to the value of this paper. There was first the "Kansas State Scrip," issued to pay the expenses of the Topeka movement. It was signed by James H. Lane, president, and J. K. Goodin, secretary. We have a piece of this scrip for $20 issued to Timothy McIntyre, a doorkeeper of the Topeka Constitutional Convention. He was one of the first settlers of Topeka. He was born in New Hampshire in 1819 and died in the Topeka Hospital of old age, November 10, 1910. The Chicago Tribune said there was $50,000 of this paper issued.

Another issue was called the Kansas Protection Fund. We have a piece of this for $130, and dated February 29, 1856, signed by

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

C. Robinson; J. H. Lane, J. K. Goodin and George W. Deitzler. The full amount is stated at $23,858 and it was to liquidate losses during the invasion of December, 1855. Governor Robinson secured donations in Massachusetts to redeem $10,000 of the Protection scrip.

Another issue is known as "Free State Warrants." We have two samples of this issue, one for $62, and one for $18, dated March 15, 1856, signed by George A. Cutler, auditor of state, and issued under act of March 15, 1856, defining certain duties of the auditor of state.

The Historical Society also has among its curios quite a number and variety of bank notes issued in Kansas from 1854 to 1862, representing institutions at Fort Leavenworth, Leavenworth, Lecompton, Sumner, Lawrence, Atchison, Wyandotte. We can find no mention of organized banks at Lecompton and Sumner.

Another interesting feature of financing those days was the sale of town shares and lots. There was no bookkeeping in this line from which we might obtain something definite. On those days it was all velvet, and not like the latter day booms that usually pulled more men down than they made. Government land or no land at all was used; there was no occasion for surveyors or other expenses. There was no moral or political enthusiasm or conscience in this, so that the victims were suckers pure and simple. But the financial loss and heartaches, the busted hopes and ambitions, which followed town failures later, make an appalling story. Six or eight years ago I gathered material concerning lost towns in Kansas, covering in all only thirty-two counties. I have lately gathered about two thousand geographical names once familiar on maps and in our documents and publications; now these names are unknown.

The funds to carry on the free soil controversy and to maintain the same people through drouth, war and pestilence were not for charity aid or begging, but a legitimate expense in maintaining a great and very creditable movement of people. Those who invested their money in the territorial scrip referred to were not swindled; they were paying for a free soil state in Kansas, and the scrip was taken in the North freely and enthusiastically. One statement says that $200,000 was sent from the South to western Missouri, ostensibly to buy land but really to affect the Kansas controversy. There was much talk in the South, but little in a financial way was done. A southern orator said Kansas as a slave state would be worth to the South a tax of ten per cent on $250,000,000 of slave property. Major Jeff Buford's expedition was the only organized attempt at colonization. Buford sold forty slaves at an average of $700 apiece, or $28,000, all of which he lost in his Kansas movement. His men were mostly sand-hillers, none of whom owned a negro, and hence they were of no use to the cause of the South in Kansas. The Yankee spent his money at St. Louis or Kansas City for wagons, and agricultural implements, and immediately went to work, but Buford's men were a great disappointment to him and he returned to Alabama broke. The grasshopper raid of 1874 caused great loss and disappointment, and while there was some meritorious begging there was much humbug. There was practically nothing here in 1860, so there can be no comparison.

When we consider the strength and importance of the banking interests of Kansas today, as in other lines of activity, the wonder is how the start was ever made. Probably the first advertisement of a bank in Kansas appeared in the Leavenworth Herald of July 12, 1856. It was called the "Banking and Exchange Office of C. P. Bailey, Jr., & Co., Delaware Street, Leavenworth." It reads thus: "Buy and sell time and sight bills on the principal cities in the United States, at the most favorable rate. Collections made and proceeds promptly remitted at current rates of exchange. Interest allowed on time deposits. Exchange for sale on the Royal Bank of London." Then followed a list of ten references. In his History of Leavenworth County, H. Miles Moore says: "Mr. Bailey opened up early in the spring of 1855, in a little one-story frame building . . . on the north side of Delaware Street between Main and Second. Mr. Bailey was a timid man and his money more so. As things progressed rapidly in the summer and the boys began to get a little gay with their guns, he thought the town was getting too rapid for him, and he soon pulled up stakes and returned to Ohio, bank and all." Cutler's History mentions this as the first bank, but says its life was neither long nor vigorous.

The first bank failure was that of the City Bank of Leavenworth. It was opened in the winter of 1856-7. Henry J. Adams, the first Free State mayor of Leavenworth, was president; A. C. Swift, cashier; and F. G. Adams, a brother of the president, and for twenty-four years secretary of the State Historical Society, was also interested. It was a bank of issue located on Delaware Street, between Second and Third. It failed during the crisis of 1857 with heavy loss to its owners. A number of the red back two dollar bills of this bank are still in existence.

In Sutherland's Directory of the City of Leavenworth for 1859-60, there are eight banks advertised. In the list are the following who made great fame subsequently, and in various ways: D. R. Anthony, Clark, Gruber & Company, J. C. Hemingray & Company, Scott, Kerr & Company, and Smoot, Russell & Company. From other sources it is learned that from 1857 to 1859 four other attempts at banking were made, two of which left their mark: J. M. Larimer and J. W. Morris.

Smoot, Russell & Company opened a bank in the fall of 1855 at the southeast corner of Main and Shawnee in a stone building, the north wall of which collapsed when the street was graded. It was rebuilt of brick and still stands. This was one of the largest and most important private banks in the West. When the Majors, Russell & Waddell government freighting concern was removed, the bank was succeeded by that of J. C. Hemingray & Company in the same place. L. R. Smoot, W. H. Russell and W. B. Waddell were directors of the Atchison Branch of the Kansas Valley Bank of Leavenworth, which was authorized by act of legislature of 1857, but never materialized, although the Atchison Branch was organized. In this connection it is proper to speak of the immense business opened up in Leavenworth in the fall of 1855 by the Government Overland Transportation Company of Majors, Russell & Company. It built stores, blacksmith shops, wagon and repair shops, employed annually over four hundred wagons, 7,500 head of cattle and about 1,000 men. In 1858, upon receiving a contract for the government freighting for General A. S. Johnston's arm to Utah, they increased operations to the employment of 4,000 men, 3,500 wagons and teams, with over 40,000 oxen and 1,000 mules to haul the supplies. They also had a contract with the government for beef cattle, and it is said they had many contracts to the amount of more than $1,000,000 a year. For the years 1855 and 1856 their profits footed up to about $300,000. W. H. Russell was the financial genius of this firm as well as of the Central Overland California and Pike's Peak Express Company, of which he was president and manager. The founder of the freighting concern, Alex. Majors, the transportation genius, had begun his career freighting to Santa Fé in 1848 with an outfit of six teams. There is a memorial window in his honor in the dome of the Capitol at Denver, where he died in 1899.

PREVENTS PUNISHMENT OF DEFALCATORS

Business men who use methods which are not legitimate in promoting sales place themselves in an unenviable position when they find dishonesty in their organization. Ten years ago the Everett Audit Company of this city was retained to audit the financial records of a manufacturing concern with a result that was entirely unexpected to the officers of the corporation. While the records of the concern had been audited for years, certain dissatisfaction developed with relation to the reports of the previous auditor. The cashier of the concern had grown up with the business and was practically in the confidence of the executives in the conduct of the company. In a measure this was necessary, owing to certain payments of alleged commissions which were made to individuals in the employ of its customers. The product of the concern was such that it required an expert to determine its variable quality. The quality varied according to price, although it was always represented to be the same. The customer usually specified the quality desired and the price named secretly included the commission necessary to be paid to the individual passing on the quality. In verifying the payments of commissions based on the quantities sold to customers, a defalcation was uncovered. They exceeded by more than $3,000 the amount which should have been paid. The records as a whole were efficiently kept in every other respect. Every payment for legitimate purposes was properly supported with approved invoices and other detailed information. In the course of the examination the cashier was seldom consulted, as the records apparently stated the transactions in a concise manner. When the report was completed and submitted to the officials they were completely astounded at the revelation of defalcation by the cashier. He acknowledged the alleged practice of inflating the commissions paid, but he did not seem interested in the amount involved for apparent reasons. He appreciated that his employers would not punish him for the manipulation of his cash, owing to the publicity which would result from prosecution. While immediately relieved of his position as cashier of the business, he was assigned to the sales department, of which he has complete charge to-day.

WISCONSIN

With a reorganized and enlarged bond department in charge of Assistant Cashier E. A. Reddeman, the Germania National took its stand this week among the more aggressive bond agencies in the Milwaukee field. In a concise and boldly printed statement that is in itself a departure from the institution's former conservative methods, the bank announces itself ready to deal in fifteen varieties of securities, listed and carefully defined and recommended for conservative investment.

Milwaukee Banking Notes

Virginian Railway first mortgage 5 per cent fifty-year gold bonds are receiving a decided impetus in the Milwaukee market at the hands of the First Savings and Trust Company bond department.

For the second time within a few months, Henry Kloes, cashier of the First National, has found it necessary to take a vacation of indeterminate length to recuperate his health. He left his duties on Tuesday for a visit and rest with friends at Park Falls, Wis.

Milwaukee delegates to the convention of Group 6, Wisconsin Bankers Association, will leave for Antigo, the place of the meeting, on Tuesday night, May 28th, via a special sleeper over the Chicago & Northwestern northern line to Ashland.

Frederick Layton, retired banker, business man and philanthropist of Milwaukee, celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday anniversary this week in New York. Mr. Layton has resided in Milwaukee for more than fifty years, the greater portion of which were spent in his Marshall Street residence. He will return from his visit in the East early in June.

The $365,000 city of Milwaukee 4½ per cent bonds have been awarded by the commissioners of the public debt to the Wisconsin Trust Company at a premium of $9,865. Nine bids were received.

The First Savings and Trust Company was named trustee of the bankrupt Romadka Brothers Co., at a creditors' meeting, early this week. The trustee's bond was fixed by Referee E. Q. Nye at $10,000. The company also is receiver for the leather company, constituting a part of the Romadka interests, which went into bankruptcy a month ago.

Group 7 Elects Officers

The seventh annual convention of Group 7, W. B. A., at LaCrosse last week, resulted in the election, for the ensuing year, of the following officers: President, J. A. Thwing, La Crosse; vice-president, L. S. Marsh, Elroy; secretary-treasurer, W. E. Sprecher, Independence; executive committee, G. S. Grubb, Mauston; H. Lindemann, Viroqua. A. W. Barney, Sparta, was elected official delegate to the state convention in Milwaukee in July.

Madison Banks Will Not Merge

After months of negotiation during which it was announced several times that all the details but the formalities had been arranged, the Capitol City Bank, the Bank of Wisconsin, and the Merchants Savings Bank of Madison have finally agreed not to consolidate. Inability to agree upon a location is said to be responsible for the dropping of the plans. If organized as planned the consolidated institution would have had a capital stock of $600,000, constituting the largest bank in the state outside of Milwaukee.

Crop Conditions Below Those of 1911

Crop conditions generally in Wisconsin are but little better than 86 per cent as compared with 1911, according to statistics compiled by Secretary J. C. MacKenzie of the state board of agriculture, while the average of the eight principal crops is 94 per cent of that of 1911.

Reports indicate a general backward condition throughout the state, with clover, alfalfa, and winter grains killed in many sections. Damaging frosts have not appeared. Pastures are reported good, though backward. In the north the ground is in good condition at present, but with only a small average of spring grain sown.

Price of Paper Advanced

Increasing cost of wood pulp is the reason given by Wisconsin paper manufacturers for the immediate advance in the price of paper announced this week. The paper industry is said to be making alarming inroads on the supply of spruce and experiments with the purpose of finding a substitute for this timber,

¶ This Bank, being at the logical center of Wisconsin banking activity, and having an exceptional list of State and Foreign correspondents, offers its services to conservative Banks with the assurance that such a connection will be of mutual advantage.

Wisconsin News Notes

A new building for the recently chartered bank of Ashippun, near Oconomowoc, is in course of construction.

The state bank commissioner has authorized the incorporation of the Farmers State Bank of Minong, Washburn county, with a capital stock of $10,000. E. F. Swanson is president, and F. T. Jenks, cashier.

M. C. Bergh, former state bank commissioner, has resigned as a director of the Stoddard-Postoy Company, a bond and mortgage house of Madison.

HARRIS SAFE DEPOSIT COMPANY

Harris Safe Deposit Company has issued a very attractive little booklet in which they set forth some of the advantages of the Harris Trust Building, of which they are the owners. The booklet is profusely illustrated, showing interior scenes in the building, among which are pictures of the interior of the safe deposit vaults, one of the vault doors and the storage room. The office building is a twenty-story fireproof structure located in the heart of Chicago's financial district, which makes it very desirable for large corporations, financial houses, insurance companies, lawyers, etc.

CHANCE TO REPAY GOOD SERVICES

The annual election of the Chicago Chapter of the A. I. B. will be held at Northwestern assembly hall on Tuesday, May 28th from 4 to 8 p. m. Contesting tickets are in the field for almost every office, and a close competition is on for delegate to the annual convention at Salt Lake City. Members of the chapter will have an opportunity to repay one of their most willing and effective workers—Otto J. Krampikowsky—who is on the ticket for the office of vice-president as well as delegate to the Salt Lake convention. His chances for election to both positions ought to be the very best. Mr. Krampikowsky has given valuable service on the press committee of the chapter, and as an editor of the chapter organ, "The Bank Man." That publication is in better financial condition to-day than ever before. Mr. Krampikowsky, also, was one of the chief workers in staging the chapter play, "Janitress Janet," which netted the chapter something like $1,500 profit for a week's run.

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, May 23.—Continued quietness marked the past week in the St. Louis money market. More seasonable weather had a tendency to enliven counter business at the various financial institutions, and the volume of loans shows a goodly increase over the preceding period. The country seemed more alive, and the movement of early small crops in the extreme South and Southwest is beginning to cut some small figure. Farm operations through the Middle West are progressing in better shape than since the opening of spring, and while backward, corn planting is on an enormous scale, and conservative authorities estimate an increase of fully 10 per cent in acreage over last year. On the whole the crop situation is much more hopeful than at the beginning of the month. In many sections where the wheat seemed hopeless, the fields are beginning to revive, and this is true of states east of the Mississippi River, where the prospects were worst and abandoned acreage largest on record. This has done much to restore confidence and increase purchasing by country merchants, which latter is reflected in sales by the large houses of the big wholesale district. The one blue spot is the flooded area, and there things are much better, with still much time left for putting in corn, potatoes and other crops. Over a large area of the South the sugar crop is conceded to be a complete failure, but this has been discounted by this time. Cotton, as a rule, is in excellent shape, with prospects for bumper yields in many important growing sections. Meantime general business is picking up, which fact is emphasized by a large gain in clearings, as compared with the past few months and the corresponding period a year ago.

Currency Reform Movement

St. Louis bankers and business men generally are beginning to take an active part in the currency movement. An enthusiastic meeting was held at the Business Men's League headquarters at which was instituted a campaign to raise $50,000 to be spent in organizing Missouri in behalf of the National Citizens League. George A. Mahan of Hannibal, president of the Missouri section of the league, was present, and outlined the plans of campaign. This meeting has already borne fruit as the banks and trust companies of St. Louis, which are members of the local clearing house association, have contributed $15,000. In addition other local financial institutions, not members of the clearing house, have subscribed nearly $2,000. Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Company and the Mercantile National, is chairman of the committee representing the bankers. Elias Michael and G. W. Simmons are representing the local business men, who have agreed to contribute about $30,000. Joseph N. Fining, who is secretary of the Missouri section, is in charge of the offices here.

Situation Outlined

One national banker here has the following to say relative to the outlook: "On the whole, business conditions are as promising as the disturbed status which always accompanies a presidential year will permit. Our business prosperity is based on good crops, and my latest advices are that prospects are much more hopeful in an agricultural way. I doubt if the Middle West has ever been on a sounder financial basis than now. There is ample funds in our banks to finance anything that comes along, and financially this section is able to cope with any situation which may develop in the ordinary course of events. Once the political incubus is out of the way, business will move forward with strides. This has got to come as surely as the pendulum swings. It will not be merely a routing awakening, but an era of new enterprise will be ushered in."

Chouteau Trust Company

The Chouteau Trust Company elected three new directors at its annual meeting this week. They are J. D. Lukenbill, Dr. W. A. Fleming and Clifford Drozda, a son of W. S. Drozda, the president. Drozda was placed on the board as substitute for a man slated for director, but who could not qualify, owing to having acquired his stock since the books closed. Drozda will resign to give place to this gentleman. The retiring directors are Gerhard Kersens, Jacob Wilhelm, and F. L. Cornwell. There will be no change in the personnel of the officers.

Bank Clerks Celebrate.

The Bank Clerks Association has just celebrated its forty-third anniversary. The celebration took the form of a vaudeville show and banquet at the Mercantile Club. This organization, which is one of the oldest of its kind in the country, has a membership of 507, and a remarkable esprit de corps. Incidentally it possesses a cash balance of $45,000. Candidates for the board of managers to be voted for at the annual election were chosen in a business meeting preceding the banquet. They are: H. A. Bridges, John J. Sherrer, J. L. Hauk, A. Shenk, Hugo Boehl, George M. Willing, H. J. Brenner, J. H. Ruenheck, W. H. Dramman, F. W. Wrieden, O. J. Gossran, J. F. Ashoff, H. Haill, F. Falkenhainer, P. D. Walsh, W. P. Burkan, H. W. Kroeger, L. L. Hill and Harry Rein. F. W. Wrieden, president of the association, presided as toastmaster.

International Bank Opening

On Monday the International Bank formally opened its new and splendid quarters at the southeast corner of Fourth and Olive streets. The banking rooms were a bower of floral offerings, and several thousand persons visited the bank, including all the members of the local fraternity. The flowers were sent to the local hospitals by J. H. August Meyer, president of the bank. After years in its old quarters, which were of the type popular in Civil War days, the International Bank will shine like a maiden decked for marriage. The interior arrangement of the new quarters is up to date in every respect, being finished in marble and mahogany. There is an immense steel vault of the latest design, and every convenience for conducting a banking business. The old quarters at Fourth and Chestnut streets will be razed to make room for the new Sub-Treasury Building. The International Bank is one of the most solid and substantial financial institutions in the West. It has a capital of only $200,000, but its deposits and business are large. The most recent quotation on its stock was $345 bid, with no offerings.

Receiver Suit Dismissed

Judge Kinsey of the St. Louis circuit court this week dismissed the suit for a receiver for the Lincoln Trust and Title Company, and for the cancellation of the deal by which the Title Guaranty Trust Company absorbed the property of the former company, June 24, 1909. He held there was no evidence of fraud or misrepresentation in the transaction. The action was brought by George E. W. Luehrmann, Edward Luehrmann, and Guy B. Fulton, and was directed against the two corporations and seventeen officers and directors of the Lincoln Trust and Title Company. The plaintiffs, old stockholders of the Lincoln Company, did not favor the consolidation and alleged their stock depreciated when the Title Guaranty took over the other company.

ACTUAL value received from their connection with us has increased our accounts from other banks 50% in two years. We therefore invite the business of others with the assurance of mutual satisfaction.

W. G. EDENS AT CLINTON, IA.

A very urgent telegram which reached W. G. Edens of the Central Trust Company of this city on Monday morning decided him to go by way of Clinton, Ia., to the Missouri convention at Joplin. The train for Joplin left at 9:15, but, instead, Mr. Edens took the 12:15 Chicago & Northwestern train for Clinton, where he spoke at a monster night meeting and banquet held by the Commercial Club of that city. Clinton business men and bankers have been engaged in a Commercial Club membership campaign for some time based upon a proposition to build a one hundred thousand dollar club building. They have about completed their work and very much enjoy the strengthening of their organization. President J. H. Ingwersen of the Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company has been an active spirit in the matter and it was mainly through his instrumentality that Mr. Edens' services as a speaker at the confirmation banquet were obtained. Mr. Edens left Clinton on a midnight trolley so as to intercept the Santa Fé at Fort Madison. Before returning he will go with other Chicago bankers from Joplin to the Kansas convention at Topeka, both the Missouri and Kansas conventions occurring this week.

DEATH CLOSES BANK

Sheboygan, Wis., May 21.—Following the death of Frederick Karste, its president, the German Bank of this city was closed to-day by A. E. Kuolt, state banking commissioner, at the request of the directors, who desire a thorough examination of affairs before resuming business. A. R. Emerson, bank examiner, will make the inquiry. Mr. Karste died yesterday of apoplexy.

Missouri Convention

Joplin, Mo., May 22.—The Missouri Bankers Association has concluded a two-days session at this place, which, so far as attendance and general interest are concerned, practically makes a new record. Headquarters have been at the Hotel Connor and the sessions were held at the Joplin Theatre, Seventh and Joplin streets. Delegates began to arrive on Monday evening and the registration department was opened in Parlor 231. The railroads had granted an open rate of two cents per mile, and trains were run from all sections of the state.

The first day's session began at 9:30 A. M., President A. H. Waite occupying the chair. The bankers were welcomed by Mayor Jesse F. Osborne on the part of the city, and by the Hon. Perl Decker for the clearing house. H. P. Wright of Kansas City responded for the visitors. Then came President Waite's annual address, which is printed elsewhere in this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER. The report of Secretary W. F. Keyser of Sedalia followed this. Mr. Keyser reported an increased membership, which in the case of Missouri comes entirely from new banks, all of the old banks already being enrolled on the membership list. In respect to its efficiency Missouri Bankers Association continues the unrivaled leader in the field of state organizations. Mr. Keyser has had the good fortune to convince the bankers of his state that membership in his association is a profitable investment. He never speaks of loyalty or duty and never uses any other time-worn phrases in looking after new members. He convinces them that membership in his association practically is indispensable. He tells them that any other investment with anything like the same possibilities would be sought for eagerly by them. He proves it and that settles the question of membership. The non-member banks at present are those recently organized and which

ANOTHER PRIVATE BANK CLOSES

Without intending to reflect upon those private banks which are conducted honestly, and with ability, attention is directed to the closing of another unsupervised, unincorporated institution in Chicago. In this case the proprietor was arrested luckily before he had made his "get away." The charge against him was failure to forward for a period of three months $200, which had been paid to him by a depositor to be sent to his family in Lithuania. When arrested the banker pleaded guilty, and paid over the sum. News of the arrest and settlement, however, circulated rapidly among his depositors, and before he had time to ask for a receiver a line of fully four hundred men and women had formed in front of his place of business, demanding their deposits, amounting to fully $40,000. "Banker" Haluska had taken warning, however, and at present writing his whereabouts are unknown. The depositor who secured the return of his $200 remittance is the only one likely to escape heavy loss. Like a great number of his co-workers in the uninspected banking field, Haluska claimed always to have invested his deposits in sheep ranches, and in lands all the way from Wisconsin to northern Alberta. His friends now claim that the past winter caused the death of most of his sheep, and that the lands which he purchased practically are without value. To avoid argument it may be taken for granted that Haluska originally was honest in his intentions. He may have intended to reap as large a profit as possible out of his deposits and eventually to pay them back. When his troubles came as an "investor" he began converting deposits and remittances as a "banker" to his own use without even formally entering them on the books of the bank. So much for the uninspected, unincorporated banking business which is allowed to continue in the state of Illinois. Under a proper banking bill, carefully administered, a "bank" such as was run by Haluska could not open or operate. In conjunction with his "bank" he operated a loan bank, or pawn shop, a ticket agency, and a saloon, all of which were run with his depositors' money.

There is every promise at present that the special committee headed by Charles G. Dawes of the Central Trust Company will draft such an equitable new banking bill that the next legislature of Illinois can be prevailed upon to pass it. If the bill can be so constructed that private bankers are given time to convert without loss their present assets into such collateral as will be recognized by the state banking department and bank inspection can be made a charge upon the funds of the state instead of those of the small banks, new and better conditions ought to come about whereby depositors will not be robbed of their savings. The state should not permit irresponsible banking nor should it allow ignorant depositors to be deceived by the further use of the terms "bank" or "banker" in cases where, in reality, no such thing exists.

FINDING HOMES FOR IMMIGRANTS

For many years this paper has advocated stipulation ports of entry for immigrants, compelling them to land at southern ports where labor is in great demand rather than to disembark at New York and Philadelphia to add to the congested population of unskilled workmen at these points. No such law has been put upon the statute books, but the bureau of immigration and naturalization, a department of the bureau of commerce and labor at Washington, has undertaken to promote a beneficial distribution of admitted aliens and other residents among the several states and territories desiring immigration. The work has been divided into five important departments, and states, cities or counties may make application for settlers, requesting laborers or men having other occupations than farm work. One division is devoted to requests for farm laborers and another deals with those owners of land who wish to rent or sell on favorable terms. Another division takes care of the question of domestics for household purposes. The chief function of the government in the matter is ended when it has furnished the desired information as to where employment may be obtained or where land may be purchased for farming purposes. So far as possible immigrants speaking the language of the community are directed to those points where they will be among their fellows. The government makes a very strong point in attempting to learn just how many will be employed, upon what terms and whether or not transportation will be furnished to the point desired; also, whether or not return transportation will be furnished in case employment is not given. All applicants for immigrant help are forced to go into the minutest of details, which are clearly set forth upon the blanks furnished. Each applicant for a position is obliged to furnish a complete schedule of his attainments in the way of training for the work specified. This is put down carefully in writing so that future disputes may be avoided between the employer and the employee. Anyone interested in securing farm help or settlers for any specific community will do well to write fully the particulars to the immigration bureau at Washington. Prompt response will be made in every case.

EARLY BANKING IN KANSAS

By arrangement with Secretary W. W. Bowman, George W. Martin, secretary of the Kansas State Historical Society, has prepared a most interesting historical sketch on early banking in the state of Kansas. Kansas had its origin in 1857 and Mr. Martin shows us how absolutely devoid the people were of the circulating medium by relating an incident of how the famous John Brown was prevented from taking a letter from the postoffice for nearly two months because neither he nor any of those among all of his neighbors had the necessary small coin to pay the postal charges. Mr. Martin goes very fully into the early financing of the state and tells graphically of the fugitive attempts to start banks at the various central points. He makes it pretty plain also that the state in its earliest days would have benefited by such a citizen as J. N. Dolley, for there were land sharks and town-site sharks almost without number. Nearly two thousand towns which figured on the records in the real estate transfers now are forgotten names. The historical sketch as prepared by Mr. Martin will be printed in three numbers of THE CHICAGO BANKER and will be found a most interesting contribution to banking history. Many of the early names became famous in after years and the state of Kansas to-day probably shows up with nearly two hundred millions of deposits in her own territory and half that much more across the line in Kansas City, Mo. Kansas has contributed some great names in finance as well as in statesmanship, and no doubt produced as many of the unexpected turns of fortune in the same number of years as were produced in any other state in the Union. Every banker in the great West will be highly entertained and greatly informed by reading the three articles prepared by Mr. Martin.

LOS ANGELES RAILWAY BONDS

"At par and interest" the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank is offering a very attractive 5 per cent gold bond, issued by the Los Angeles (Cal.) Railway Corporation. The bonds are in part of a $20,000,000 closed mortgage issue, legal for savings banks in California, even in face of the restrictions of the new banking law. The Continental and Commercial recommends them for investment, and it isn't likely that the half million in hand will last long. Vice-President G. B. Caldwell will be pleased to give further information.

The Girard National of Philadelphia has raised its surplus by $500,000 to $4,500,000.

The Northwestern National Bank OF MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

is justly proud of the record it has made in forty years of service to the public. A steady but conservative growth during this time has placed it in the first position in its territory with a capital and surplus of $5,000,000.00. In addition to strengthening its own resources it has paid to its stockholders which is an average of over eight per cent annually since organization.

have not yet begun business. The membership stands at 1,372 banks, trust companies and brokerage firms.

During the year Mr. Keyser's office sent out nearly seventy-five thousand pieces of mail of which twenty thousand were special letters. He does not believe in burdening the membership with unnecessary bulletins which have become such an interminable nuisance in some of the states. A matter to get publicity in Missouri through the state association must be one of common interest to the members.

Missouri prides herself on the efficiency of the committees appointed by the association. It is believed that any lukewarm member who will take the time to hear the reports of committees read at the annual meeting and to examine the literature sent out will be firmly convinced of the good work that is being done in his behalf. The council of administration is reported to have sat down emphatically on the movement to establish a bank supply department and the opinion prevails generally in the membership that the association should not be converted into a mercantile establishment. During the year Missouri chapters have been admitted to membership, and the council voted to donate $1,000 to any city entertaining the conventions. This is on account of the largely increased attendance from year to year. A falling off was reported in the number of bank burglaries as compared with the previous year, there being only four successful burglaries in the state during the year.

Missouri has changed her fidelity bond and burglary insurance business to a new company, after a thorough investigation by a committee composed of three distinguished ex-presidents—Messrs. J. P. Hinton, W. C. Harris and A. O. Wilson. These men are experienced in the affairs of the association and are prepared to take up such work as was delegated to them. The membership is entirely satisfied with the result of their efforts in the matter. The total commissions collected by Mr. Keyser as state agent amount to almost $9,000 and the amount of insurance in force is nearly fourteen millions. Mr. Keyser does all the work of the association with two assistants and looks after the interests of all the banks in the state, with capital stock of practically ninety millions, surplus and undivided profits of a like amount and assets of 853 millions. Following Mr. Keyser's report J. B. Jennings, the treasurer, and all of the group chairmen were heard, which completed the morning's session. In the afternoon the group secretaries reported organizations effected during the interval between the morning and afternoon meetings, and were followed by J.

Adam Bede of Minnesota on the "Pursuit of Happiness," a humorous address which was read before the Illinois bankers at Springfield last year. S. M. Jordan, head of the Pettis County Bureau of Agriculture, spoke on the banker's policy toward the farmer. This is a most interesting paper and will be found in full in another part of this issue. W. F. Gurley of Omaha spoke on the "Peril of the Hour," which concluded the afternoon session. At 5 p. m. the committee on nominations met to select the candidates for the ensuing year.

On Wednesday morning J. Thralls, manager of the Kansas City clearing house, reported for the Missouri chapters of the A. I. B. Wm. J. Burns, head of the Burns National Detective Agency, was next on the program and was followed by a report from W. Bonyng of Denver, who is on a speaking tour for the National Citizens League in behalf of the national reserve plan for the reform of our banking and currency system. The afternoon was given up to the discussion of legal subjects under the direction of William McC. Martin of St. Louis and reports of standing committees. Two reports which attracted a great deal of attention were those of Thornton Cooke of Kansas City on bank taxation, and by J. A. Lewis of the National Bank of Commerce at St. Louis on bills of lading. W. C. Gordon reported a number of amendments to the constitution and by-laws. The convention concluded with the election and installation of the new officers.

Among the social features presented by the bankers of Joplin were a reception for the visiting ladies on Tuesday afternoon at the home of President and Mrs. A. H. Waite. In the evening there was a general reception at the hotel and a grand ball in the main dining-room, followed by a smoker and vaudeville entertainment on the roof garden. On Wednesday morning the visiting ladies were treated to automobile rides throughout the city and in the afternoon visitors and delegates were taken for a trolley ride around the belt line of the Southwest Missouri Railroad and visited one of the largest zinc and lead smelting companies in the world. On Wednesday evening there was an electrical display at one of the amusement parks to which all the visitors and delegates were invited. The official convention badge admitted to all the entertainments furnished.

The big Missouri convention concluded its session on Tuesday evening by installing R. R. Calkins of St. Joseph as president for the forthcoming year. Treasurer J. B. Jennings of Moberly was advanced to the vice-presidency, and R. S. (Dick) Hawes of the Third National at St. Louis was elected treasurer, which position carries with it the certainty of the presidency later on. The next convention in all probability will be held at St. Joseph, the home of President Calkins. Missouri members of the A. B. A. elected J. S. Calfee of the Mechanics-American at St. Louis to membership on the executive council, naming A. D. Buckner of Paris provisionally. In case enough members of the A. B. A. are secured between now and the meeting at Detroit Mr. Buckner as well as Mr. Calfee will be qualified to sit on the Big Council. Among those from Chicago who left on the special train for the Kansas convention are W. G. Edens of the Central Trust; J. Fletcher Farrell of the Fort Dearborn; W. D. Dickey of the National City; R. F. Newhall of the First National, and Wilbur Hattery of the Continental and Commercial.

E. E. Crabtree

Ex-President Crabtree of the Illinois Bankers Association was up to the Cub ball game the other day, attending to a little banking business on the side. Mr. Crabtree is underscored for member of the A. B. A. council this year. For the other vacancies there is talk of John Fletcher, J. F. Hagen, Wm. C. White, J. M. Hurst, H. E. Otte, G. A. Ryther and others. There must be a special meeting at or on the way to Detroit or Illinois will have to lose two votes on important matters. By shifting her convention dates about so much Illinois keeps "balled up" to the discomfort and disadvantage of her eligibles.

Beautifully engraved invitations have been issued over the signatures of President E. J. Curtin and Secretary P. W. Hall for the Iowa bankers convention to be held at Cedar Rapids on June 5th and 6th.

President A. H. Waite, at Joplin, Endorses Kansas Banking Law

Tells Missouri bankers it is greatly superior to their own—comes out strongly for agricultural education, good roads and association loyalty in insurance matters

Many things have happened since our last annual convention. Our association has made satisfactory progress and has attempted to keep pace with the times. Many new things have come up to attract our attention. Most all of them are important and the banker is certainly interested in the growth and in the prosperity of the country and the people. Those who are active in the interest of the association at all times are engaged in bringing to your notice, and are untiring in their efforts to interest you in, all the reforms looking to better and more practical methods. All are interested in better laws, and are endeavoring to keep pace with the rapid advancement in all lines of business and commerce. The laws and the methods and the things that once served their purpose are no longer of use because of the great strides made by our people and our country.

The National Monetary Commission appointed by congress, as you know, has spent much time and money in research. This commission, made up of men who stood for ability and honesty of purpose, went forth, and as a result of their investigations, made their report to congress, and it is a well-known fact and so acknowledged by the great minds at home and abroad, as a most wonderful report or recommendation, and that its construction and its application are most marvelous. All the safeguards have been used and thrown around and about it. This recommendation has been introduced into congress under the name of the National Reserve Association, and perhaps there never was a bill presented to that body that represented such thought and care in its preparation. As much as this means to the people and to the business world, it is to be regretted that its greatest danger is politics, for it was scarcely sixty days old when one senator from a western state arose and said: "I, as a democrat, am opposed to the suggestion of a central bank, as recommended by the former senator from Rhode Island. It is incumbent upon the democratic party to present some measure in opposition to that measure." He did not say that it is incumbent to present something better, and that congress should join and give to the people a more modern financial system commensurate with their needs, but it was his thought that he must present some opposition. We can have a currency system that will care for the people if the people are let alone. This committee before spoken of has, to your certain knowledge, spent days and nights and weeks and months, with nothing else in view but the single thought that we should have the best. We owe a debt of gratitude that can best be paid by our appreciation and aid in the absence of anything better, and believing that the bill is as near perfect as the human mind can produce at this time. Each and every one of you owe this debt, and it must be paid. Nearly one hundred million people of the United States are looking for relief and the National Reserve Association, to my mind, is a sure remedy and the proper solution.

We have heard a great deal of late about the money trust, and this especially comes from the man who is unable to borrow. In my opinion, there is no such thing as a money trust in the sense of a combination restricting trade, etc. There always has been, there is to-day, and there always will be, a group of leaders of finance as in all other lines, who have tremendous power, but power vanishes quickly when abused. Great financial institutions are a source of strength and not a menace to the country, and should be regarded with pride and not with anxiety. This is one of the definitions given for the two words: "Money Trust is the great co-ordinate body of finance, recruiting, mobilizing, capturing the armies of capital in the warfare against waste, non-use or immoral use of men." Money and energy mean organized efficiency. They are the enemy of none, and the enemy of nothing except the enemy of inefficiency, incompetency, stupidity and waste in the conduct of the business affairs of our country.

The past year has not been free from the burglar and the criminal class; still the losses for the last year have been but slight. While at this time bank robbery is almost a lost art and almost a thing of the past, it is largely due to our reward fund which enables us to pursue, capture and prosecute, and in ridding the state of this most desperate and dangerous criminal. We have always had criminals and we always will have men who think it is much easier to live without work, especially when they are encouraged by the ease with which they are able to work the Missouri banker, and while there are so many "easy ones," it is beyond explanation why these things are done, for nearly every week in the year, you are advised by the press or the secretary of the association that some bank or banker in your association has been defrauded, and still it continues, and the officers of the association are asked to offer a reward to apprehend the criminal, and if the association does not immediately offer a reward, some member thinks the association is at fault, and does not do its duty. The facts are it is the duty of the association to apprehend and convict criminals, for that is the only thing that reduces crime, but I do not believe that a bank should call for aid and assistance for every little offense committed, when the banker himself is so careless and thoughtless, which makes crime so easy. The prosecution of the criminal is one of the important works of the association, and we have abundance of evidence, and we have members who do and can testify to the actual and practical benefits received by being members of this association.

We are to be congratulated that we have but one association, and not two associations as some of our state. We are united. You are to be congratulated on the loyalty, and for your moral support. You should never miss an opportunity to be of use to the association, for it never misses an opportunity to be of use and a friend to you. This brings me up to the membership of the association, which has been so well maintained and so important, and so necessary is it to be a member of this association, that a bank scarcely comes into life, and hardly opens its doors before application is made for membership. This is as it should be, for the association is worthy of your support, and you should give it your financial

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

"I consider the banking situation in the Central West entirely satisfactory," said J. R. Dominick, president of the Traders National of Kansas City, to the correspondent of THE CHICAGO BANKER last week. "Of course the business revival has not been as sharp or as decisive as we could have wished. The spring season has been backward, and this has had a stagnating effect upon seasonable merchandise. But fundamental conditions are sound. The outlook for crops is most encouraging for this time of the year. The many banking meetings in this territory has brought most of the bankers into touch with each other in one way or another, and the interchange of ideas and information lends much encouragement to the future."

Tootle-Lemon National's Report

The monthly financial letter of the Tootle-Lemon National of St. Joseph, Mo., issued last week says that general trade conditions of the Central West are fairly satisfactory. Weather conditions have been abnormal so long, it is said, as to seriously check business in seasonable merchandise, but the situation is improving, and it is reasonable to look for favorable developments in the near future. Agricultural implements are having a good sale, some large shipments being made. There also is a better demand for many lines of general produce. Jobbing trade, the letter says, on the whole is not discouraging and retail establishments are showing up well. The stockyards continue to do a good business, and it looks like the supply of cattle would enlarge before long. Generally speaking, collections are getting better. Sentiment in this section may be described as quietly optimistic about the future, although there is no disposition to exaggerate to the extent of the improvement already seen or to attempt speculative buying on a large scale.

Central West Notes

The abstract of the condition of the national banks of Nebraska, exclusive of reserve cities, at the close of business on April 18th, as reported to the comptroller of the currency, shows the average reserve held at 15.38 per cent as compared with 15.92 per cent on February 20th. Loans and discounts decreased from $52,925,933 to $52,260,126; lawful money from

Kansas Convention

Topeka, May 24.—The Kansas Bankers Association has been celebrating its silver anniversary by holding its twenty-fifth annual convention here this week. It was the greatest turnout of bankers and guests ever seen within the borders of the commonwealth. Secretary W. W. Bowman has been untiring in his efforts to make it the one grand occasion of his career. Registration began as early as 7:30 in the morning and was kept up throughout the sessions of the convention. Bankers and their wives began to arrive on Wednesday the 22d, being drawn early that they might attend an informal reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Crosby. The convention assembled the next morning at 10 o'clock in Representatives Hall. The building and loan section convened in the supreme court room. Attorney-General John S. Dawson welcomed the visitors and the response was made by J. P. Moore of Holton. President John R. Lindberg delivered his annual address and President William Livingstone of the American Bankers Association spoke on "Banks as Factors in the Development of a State." The distinguished Detroitier is a very interesting and eloquent speaker and intersperses his serious matter with a series of stories and witticisms in a manner which keeps the double interest of his audience. A humorous number followed President Livingstone, being a recitation in French-Canadian patois by Edward W. Thompson. At the afternoon session on Thursday there were talks by William J. Burns of the Burns National Detective Agency, New York; by Warden J. K. Codding of the Lansing state prison, and by J. Laurence Laughlin of Chicago on monetary reform. On Thursday evening the guests and visitors were entertained at the Grand Opera House at a play given by Margaret Illington. On Friday morning the session opened with an address by George W. Martin of Topeka on "A Chapter from the Archives." The convention then heard Judge C. E. Lobdell on legal questions and the session closed with a talk by Commissioner J. N. Dolley on "Departmental Regulations." The fourth and last session of the convention occurred Friday afternoon at two o'clock. B. F. Harris of Illinois spoke on "The Banker and His Relation to the Public Welfare," and W. E. Higgins of Lawrence and professor of law at the state university, spoke on the administration of justice. Ex-Governor W. J. Bailey of Atchison then presided at a general discussion touching upon the repeal of federal bankruptcy law; a modification of existing exemption laws; a deed of trust law; a mortgage tax law, and more perfect uniformity in the banking laws of the states. The election and installation of officers closed the convention.

It has been the custom at the Kansas conventions for a number of years to have the ladies meet together for a convention session of their own. This year they met at the home of C. W. Snyder, and after a formal organization papers were read and discussion had on topics interesting to those present.

Chicago visitors had much pleasure in meeting President John R. Lindberg, a former resident of Henry County, Illinois, who had the honor of presiding over the largest convention ever held by the Kansas bankers. The registration was more than nine hundred. Elmer Ames of Topeka was elected a member of the A. B. A. executive council and Ex-Governor W. J. Bailey of Atchison was elected a member of the nominating committee. W. J. Burns of the Burns National Detective Agency and Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin of the University of Chicago easily made the hits of the convention. Mr. Burns' talk was especially enjoyed by the bankers and delegates present.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Much making of banks interests the financial men just now. Hardly had announcement been made that a bank with $250,000 capital was to be started in the Masonic Temple than another story got out that a similar, or larger bank, would be installed in the Lumber Exchange, which has a banking room still under lease to the former Minnesota National, until the Federal Securities Company took it over, Saturday, with furniture and fixtures invoiced at $15,000. With $25,000 spent by the Lumber Exchange Company in preparation for the bank the expenditure was a good start on $40,000. The lease has eighteen years to run. A trust company is a possibility, also, which may or may not beat the bank to the lease. Among the interested men are J. S. Porteous, president of the Flour City National at the time of its liquidation; Guy C. Landis, cashier once of the same bank; R. W. Akin, Anoka State; B. A. Cummings, vice-president First National, Pierre, S. D.; August Peterson, cashier First National, Harvey, N. D., of which Mr. Akin is president also. Others are said to be F. E. McElhenny, Waterloo, president of the Iowa Life Insurance Company; F. E. Forest, South Dakota capitalist. Stock in the bank is said to have been subscribed twice over and it was necessary to do some eliminating to keep the matter within bounds. Plans are made to enlarge the banking room.

First District Group Meeting

The first district group of Minnesota bankers met Thursday and Friday in Rochester, May 23-24. Thursday evening was devoted to registration, followed by a smoker in the Zumbro hotel. Friday morning, following the routine business session, George B. Caldwell of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago spoke on "The Times from a Banker's Standpoint." J. W. Wheeler of the Capital National Bank of St. Paul gave an address on "The Agricultural Development and Education in Minnesota." In the afternoon

C. D. Brown spoke on "Our Protective Department," and D. C. Armstrong of Albert Lea, vice-president of the Minnesota Bankers Association, had charge of a round-table.

At the close of the session the visitors were entertained by an automobile ride, followed by a luncheon in the hotel. The wives of the Rochester bankers had arranged entertainment features for wives of the visiting bankers.

E. W. Decker Entertains Employees

Two hundred and twenty-one employees of the Northwestern National and the trust division were guests of President E. W. Decker last Saturday at his 42-acre farm at Holdredge, Lake Minnetonka. The place might be named Violethurst, for it was to pick violets that Mr. Decker invited his guests, he intimated. The Minnesota Loan and Trust Company team beat the bank team at baseball and got a loving-cup from Mr. Decker. Forty-one of the excursionists were girls.

Kelsey S. Chase

Kelsey S. Chase, Minnesota state superintendent of banks, is preparing a bill to be introduced at the extra session of the legislature, if that body takes up any measures other than the three designated by the governor in his call. Mr. Chase's bill is aimed at the sale of "blue sky" and "wildcat" stocks in Minnesota. The measure will require all persons selling stock to take out a state license. It requires a financial statement of the affairs of the company. Licenses will be made revocable.

For Better Farming

Bankers and business men of the southwestern part of North Dakota met May 16th to form a bankers' group to affiliate with the state association. Senator Wesley C. McDowell of Marion, former president of the state association, was in attendance, and Thomas P. Cooper, Fargo, secretary and director of the North Dakota Better Farming Association.

The object of the group association is to place farm demonstrators in each county of the state. Bankers, manufacturers, wholesalers and other business men have agreed to contribute annually for three years to promote these better farming methods. The bankers association is to assist each county by putting up dollar for dollar to defray the expense of placing demonstrators to assist and instruct farmers.

The slope country has been the only section of the state without an organization to carry on the work. Remarkable enthusiasm is now aroused and demonstrators will be placed in some of the southwestern counties at once.

Sixth District Group Elects Officers

Officers were elected by the sixth district Minnesota bankers, at Little Falls, May 15th, as follows: President, E. H. Sherwin, Monticello; vice-president, J. K. Martin, Little Falls; secretary-treasurer, Charles F. Knapp, Big Lake; executive council, M. T. Dunn, Brainerd. Curtis L. Mosher, secretary of the Citizens League, gave an address on banking reform and J. W. Wheeler of St. Paul on agriculture. John Wetzel was toastmaster at the dinner in the Hotel Buckman.

George B. Lane Back

George B. Lane, commercial paper, Minneapolis, with Mrs. Lane has returned from a trip abroad of four months. It was a novel trip. The principal places all around the shore of the Adriatic Sea were visited, and when Mr. Lane recites the names of countries of which he investigated the interiors it sounds like a railway station caller doing his duty in Herovinging.

Addresses Traffic Club

Addressing the Minneapolis Traffic Club, E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, said in part:

"We should encourage the railroads in the development of terminals, which are badly needed, and should be fair with them. It is you men who can do most to promote and maintain a feeling of fairness on the part of the shippers and the general public which will result in such treatment of the railroads that they will construct in Minneapolis those terminals that will be a pressing need of the not distant future."

Banking Notes

Elmer E. Adams succeeds Charles D. Wright as president of the First National, Fergus Falls, Minn. Mr. Wright has served since 1883. The First is the oldest and largest bank in the county.

W. A. Day, who has resigned as cashier of the State Bank at Stephen, Minn., will be succeeded by C. R. Gillespie. Mr. Day removes to Minneapolis.

Notable points in the crop situation in North Dakota covered by a crop statement from the Wells & Dickey Company include improved methods of cultivation as to seeding, increased acreage of corn, prospect for a good hay crop and a decrease in wheat acreage due to the early freeze last fall. Seed has better selection, silos are being built, and there is a feeling of conservatism of farmers in expenditures.

F. A. Chamberlain, president of the Security National, was in the wreck of the Pioneer limited train of the Milwaukee road Monday morning. He was coming from Milwaukee.

G. L. Tremain, president of the Peoples Bank of Humboldt, Iowa, has been the guest of his son, H. J. Tremain, secretary of the Minneapolis Commercial Club. Mr. Tremain was organizer and first president of the Iowa Bankers Association.

The St. Paul Stock Exchange at its first annual election put A. M. Peabody back in office as president. Other officers are: Vice-president, Edwin White; secretary, C. C. Kibbee; treasurer, A. C. Dent; directors, O. M. Nelson, A. M. Peabody, C. C. Kibbee, Edwin White.

Secretaries of the Farmers Grain Dealers associations in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Iowa, and Illinois, representing 2,000 country grain elevators, met in Minneapolis last week to perfect an organization, to fight proposed freight rate advances inimical to interests of members and for other purposes.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, May 21.—Grain, hay and fruit crop conditions are excellent all over the Inland Empire, according to Judge W. Brackenridge, traveling freight and passenger agent of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, who has just returned from a trip over the territory. Farmers report wheat coming along nicely. There is a larger acreage than last year, and the farmers believe that as a result of the heavy fall of snow during the winter, and the rain this spring the crop will at least equal that of last year. The apple crop will be the largest in the history of the district.

Report Good Conditions

P. M. Winans, cashier of the First National at Walla Walla, Wash., and Ramsay Walker, vice-president of the Wallace National, Wallace, Idaho, who were visitors in Spokane recently, brought encouraging reports of conditions in the district in which they are located. Mr. Winans says the country never looked better than at present, and that business conditions at Walla Walla are good, and the district is prospering. Mr. Walker reports unusual activities in mining circles in the Wallace district, and says everything points to a prosperous year.

The awards will be made on October 15th.

Fidelity National Celebrates Thirtieth Anniversary

Officers and employees of the Fidelity National of Spokane, assisted by a number of guests, fittingly celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of the establishment of that institution at a banquet in the Hall of the Doges the night of May 6th. Lindsay, cashier, who have been on the roster since the opening of the bank at Sprague, Wash., in 1882. Among the speakers were those named in the foregoing and C. E. Cooper, F. E. Elmendorf and Lamont Barnes.

Banker to Go on Large Farm

J. W. Anderson, retiring cashier of the Pullman State at Pullman, Wash., was the guest of honor at a banquet given by the directors of the institution, May 2d. R. C. Mr. Anderson will manage a large tract of farm land in British Columbia.

Klein Leaves for Six Weeks in the East

He will visit New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington and other eastern cities, also Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake, Los Angeles and San Francisco. CHICAGO CHAPTER, A. I. B.

By OTTO J. KRAMPIKOWSKY.

Chicago Chapter will hold its annual election of officers as well as delegates to the Salt Lake City convention on Tuesday, May 28th. The polls will open at 4 p. m. and close at 8 p. m. As the membership has increased at least 40 per cent during the past year, it is expected that a larger number of members will turn out to vote than ever before in the history of the chapter. Great improvements have been made in the educational features of the chapter during the past year, as well as the entertainment features of the various meetings that were held. Too much praise cannot be given to Harry S. Smale, president of the chapter, for his hard and earnest work, which has shown results to good advantage to the chapter. With another president as efficient, for the ensuing year, Chicago Chapter is bound to enlarge its membership as well as its educational work, which is its main principle. Another officer who has served the chapter and served it well for the past few years, and who is not a candidate for re-election, is Thomas J. Nugent, the corresponding secretary. Mr. Nugent is at present a member of the Bank Man committee as well as the corresponding secretary, and last year was the editor of the Bank Man. Mr. Nugent is a very enthusiastic and loyal chapter member.

Bankers Night at the Cort Theatre

In order to obtain sufficient funds on hand so as to take care of the incoming delegates from the East en route to the Salt Lake City convention in August, while stopping off at Chicago, the chapter made arrangements with the Cort Theatre to give a performance in behalf of the chapter whereby the chapter received 25 per cent on the profits of all tickets sold, and accordingly Friday evening, May 24th, was selected, called "The Bankers Night." The ticket sale has been more than was anticipated and a good profit made, and all delegates stopping off at Chicago, en route to Salt Lake City convention, can rest assured that Chicago Chapter will take care of them well.

We Own and Offer, Subject to Prior Sale and Change in Price,

Los Angeles Railway Corporation

First and Refunding Mortgage Sinking Fund 5% Gold Bonds

Dated December 1, 1910. Due December 1, 1940, without option of prior payment. Denomination $1,000.
Bonds may be registered as to principal. Interest payable June 1st and December 1st at the Bankers Trust Company, New York, or Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank, Trustee.

The Los Angeles Railway Corporation owns and controls the entire street railway business of Los Angeles, having for its exclusive province the City of Los Angeles and the growing suburban section southwest of the City limits, giving it a territory of about 125 square miles containing a population of 350,000. The lines of the Corporation cover a trackage of 344.29 miles.

EARNINGS AND EXPENSES FOR THE YEAR ENDED DECEMBER 31, 1911

(As reported by the Corporation)

Gross Revenue	$5,843,377.65
*Operating Expenses, Taxes, Maintenance, and also Depreciation Charges	4,005,506.27
Net Revenue Available for Interest	$1,837,871.38
Required for Interest Charges	1,000,000.00
Surplus for 1911	$ 837,871.38

*Attention is called to the fact that under the Corporation's method of bookkeeping Depreciation Charges are included in Operating Expenses.

This bond issue of $20,000,000 is secured by a closed mortgage upon the entire property of the Los Angeles Railway Corporation now owned or hereafter acquired, subject to underlying liens on a portion of the property amounting only to $5,500,000, to retire which an equal amount of First and Refunding bonds are held by the Trustee. Under the provisions of the Trust Deed the Corporation is required to make monthly payments to the Trustee for sinking fund purposes, which, it is estimated, under the most unfavorable circumstances will be sufficient to retire by maturity about 40% of this issue.

Los Angeles increased 211% in population from 1900 to 1910, which growth is continuing at a remarkable rate, as is shown by the gross earnings of the former Los Angeles Railway Corporation properties as given below:

1906	3,129,941.74	1909	3,785,152.69
1907	3,452,349.82	1910	4,003,802.77
1911		1911	$5,843,377.65

The Corporation is in an excellent position in regard to franchises. Over 25% of the trackage is upon private right of way, owned in fee. All the main arteries of traffic, and practically all streets in the downtown district, are covered by franchises having a life beyond the maturity of the bonds.

Handsome oil paintings have been presented to the State Savings and Trust at Davenport by Minnie Stevens Allen. They are of the three past presidents and the present president, S. W. Wheelock, Porter Skinner, H. A. Ainsworth and Frank Gates Allen.

Des Moines, May 23.—Arrangements for the entertainment of the visiting bankers at the Cedar Rapids convention have been practically completed. The bankers of the "Suits Me" city are in charge of this phase of the meeting. Wednesday afternoon while the bankers are attending the convention the wives of the Cedar Rapids financiers will give the visiting ladies an automobile ride to the Country Club. In the evening there will be a special vaudeville show at the Majestic Theater. The women will then be expected to go to bed, but not so the men. Following the theater party, there will be a smoker for the men at the Auditorium. Thursday afternoon, the bankers who remain for the afternoon will be given views of Cedar Rapids by automobile.

President G. E. MacKinnon of the Mechanics Savings of Des Moines, who founded the famous "Birthday Club" in this city three years ago, announces a called meeting of the organization during the convention at Cedar Rapids.

The program for the convention as announced in these columns recently has been strengthened by the addition of an address by George E. Allen, educational director of the American Institute of Banking of New York. His subject will be "Bank Education," and it will be a feature of the Wednesday afternoon program. The chapters that used to exist in Iowa have been allowed to die, so that Mr. Allen expects to make his address a sort of revival sermon. Miss Rose Reichard, well-known violinist, who lives in Des Moines, but has been on the entertainment stage for some time has consented to appear with her violin as one feature of the convention program. With the exception of these additions the program will stand as tentatively announced by Secretary Hall a fortnight ago. In the meantime the secretary is mailing out beautifully engraved invitations to each member of the Iowa association.

Group 9 at Lamoni

The Group meetings for the season are ended. Lamoni wound them up when Group 9 met there last Friday. Lamoni is a splendid little city, and the bankers were royally entertained. The program was held in the new Coliseum. Chairman Bert Teale called the bankers to order at 1:30 in the afternoon. The program was somewhat lengthy, but decidedly interesting. Those listed to speak with their subjects were as follows: Address of Welcome, Mayor George W. Blair; response, Cashier George S. Allyn, Mt. Ayr Bank; address, Secretary P. W. Hall, Iowa Bankers Association. Then came ten minutes talks on the following, the speakers representing each county in the group: "Should We Favor the Parcels Post Bill?" President Charles T. Launder, State Savings, Fontanelle; "Effect of the Postal Bank on Commercial Business," Cashier F. E. Shane, Adams County Bank of Nodaway; "The Country Banker," President A. D. Simmons, Simmons & Co., bankers, Osceola; "Gospel of Agriculture," C. W. Hoffman, Exchange National, Leon; "Why Should We Boost for Iowa?" Vice-President Webb Hultz, State Savings of Clarion; "Duties of the Bank Director," F. F. Fuller, Iowa State, Mt. Ayr; "Should the Silo Be Encouraged?" President Frank Dunning, Citizens, Bedford; "Good Roads," President S. H. Blackwell, Savings Bank of Afton; "The Man Behind the Counter," Cashier D. T. Sollenbarger, Farmers National, Allerton. The bankers were given an automobile ride following the program, and the banquet in the basement of the Coliseum wound up the festivities. The attendance was splendid and the interest intense. It will be seen that many of the addresses were along agricultural lines, showing the interest that is being aroused in agricultural topics among the financiers of the state. There is no doubt that the bankers of Iowa are enjoying an awakening along this line that is bound to have a tremendous influence upon the wealth of the state.

Group 3 at Northwood

The meeting of Group 3 at Northwood, May 15th, was a splendid success. The attendance was large, and it was a fine audience that had assembled when Morton Wilbur, cashier of the Security Trust and Savings of Charles City, rapped his gavel. The program began at 1:30, when the bankers registered at the Park Hotel. At 2:30 the bankers adjourned for an automobile drive over the city. At 3:30 the bankers reassembled at the opera house. The first address was by C. H. McNider, president First National, Mason City, on "Bank Taxation." President E. J. Curtin of the I. B. A. was expected but was not present. Secretary P. W. Hall was present, however, and made an address. Then came the discussion of timely subjects and election of officers. At 6:30 the financiers adjourned to Berg's Hall, where the banquet was served. The program for the banquet was as follows: Toastmaster, Morton Wilbur; "The Banker's Debt to the People," M. C. Sweney; "The Cashier as a Counselor at Law," E. C. Moody; "The Banker as a Utility Man," O. V. Eckert; "Profit and Loss," H. T. Toye; "Hitch Your Wagon to a Star," J. F. Shay; "One Hundred Per Cent," Emerson Depuy. A harp solo by Dr. Gioscio was an interesting feature. One phase of the convention that proved attractive was the manner in which the people of the city decorated their stores in honor of the visitors. The windows had special display and red and blue electric lights had been strung across the street giving a beautiful appearance. The women were well entertained at the home of Mrs. Iver Iverson during the convention, and were guests at the automobile drive, and later at the banquet.

National Banks Made Good Showing

The national banks of Iowa showed up well in the report of the comptroller of the currency for the period ending April 18th. The average reserve for the banks exclusive of the reserve cities was held at 15.83 per cent as compared with 15.58 per cent February 20th. Loans and discounts increased from $98,137.224 to $101,284,358. Lawful money reserve increased from $7,060,124 to $7,383,492. Individual deposits increased from $100,331,870 to $102,848,937.

One Million in Back Taxes

The board of supervisors at Des Moines has started a movement which is expected to strike terror into the hearts of those capitalists, who have left Iowa without first paying their back taxes. One of the tax ferrets who was put out of business by the legislature last winter has been retained to begin a campaign to recover the taxes which these "expatriates" are supposed to owe in Polk county. It is expected that the amount which will be collected will total fully a million dollars.

Demand Lower Assessment

The First National at Council Bluffs has demanded that the council in that city exempt $269,000 from its assessment on the ground that the amount in question is invested in government bonds. The bank appealed to the board of review, but had no success. Now it has made formal claim, and the city attorney has been given the question to ponder over. The city assessor raises the point that the amount was a portion of the capital, surplus and profits of the bank, and is therefore open to assessment under the Iowa statute.

Death of G. W. Kierulff

G. W. Kierulff, for many years cashier of the First National at Montezuma, died at his home in that city last week, at the age of eighty-six. He was an interesting career. He was born in the West Indies, and at an early day sailed to California, where he engaged in mining. Later he was a bookkeeper in San Francisco in the early days, and conducted a general store for miners. From California he went to New York and taught school. He removed to Iowa in 1857. In the seventies he formed a bank partnership with John Hall, and was identified with banking interests for many years.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

The liveliest topic in the minds of bankers as well as other business men of Sioux City, this week—aside, of course, from politics—is the wholesale inspection of the business part of the city by a whole special car of insurance experts, sent out from Des Moines to study conditions. The recent heavy fire losses, totaling in a little while practically a half-million dollars, have set the insurance underwriters to thinking, and, while they will not admit that this fact is the inspiring cause, they do admit that it hastened their determination to discover what is the matter. Business men, fearful that the inspection would result in sharp advances in premium rates, took pains to improve the condition of their premises before the inspectors arrived, owing to the fact that the newspapers saw to a thorough advertising of the impending investigation. In the meantime, business men of the city have formed a committee that will raise a large fund of credit with which to buy needed fire apparatus that the city, with its tax limit, is unable to purchase, this apparatus to be leased to the municipality until such time as it is able to buy it outright. It is expected that about $40,000 will be so expended.

MANY bankers, from time to time, have need of a special or secondary reserve fund. This reserve fund they carry in bonds or as an inactive account at interest with a metropolitan bank. We make a specialty of handling such inactive reserve accounts for banks and bankers, and of supplying carefully selected bonds for investment, circulation, emergency currency, government deposits or postal savings fund purposes. To banks intending to establish a secondary reserve fund unexcelled facilities are offered.

We have prepared an exceptionally informative leaflet on government bond data in concise enough form to be practical to every banker,—just the thing to have close at hand for ready reference. We shall be pleased to send these leaflets free upon request.

J. W. Bridge, cashier of Blair & Co., bankers, Helmville, Montana, was in the city Friday. Day & Hanson Security Company are principal owners of this bank, and will be remembered as bankers, who formerly lived at Castana, Iowa. Other Iowa bankers who were in Sioux City this week are C. C. Hass, cashier of the Woodbine Savings Bank, of Woodbine; E. H. Hennrich, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Bank, Ireton; and J. L. Mitchell, president of the LeMars Savings Bank, LeMars. Peter B. Dirks, cashier of the Citizens State Bank, Oacoma, S. D., was in Sioux City on business Monday.

LOCAL BANKERS ELECTED OFFICERS OF HAMILTON CLUB

One of the closest elections ever held in the history of the Hamilton Club resulted in the election of L. H. Grimme, cashier of the National City Bank, to the position of treasurer. Mr. Grimme was opposed by W. F. Van Buskirk, vice-president of the Standard Trust and Savings. Lucius Teter, president of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company, was elected a director of the club. Unusual interest was manifested in the recent election, owing to the fact that the Hamilton Club will entertain the notables attending the republican national convention to be held here in June. The election was held on Monday of this week.

Reasons Why Bankers Should Use Corporate Surety Bonds

The subject given me by Mr. Keyser is, "The Reason Why," and his reason for giving me such a doubtful subject—as he informed me—was that I could talk about anything I pleased, and certainly no man could ask for greater liberty than that. Under that privilege I will tell a story.

During our World's Fair in St. Louis, John Allen of Mississippi, whom many of you doubtless know, was one of the national commissioners appointed by President McKinley to represent the government at our exposition. While serving in that capacity he made occasional trips to his home in Mississippi, and upon his return from one of these visits he was met on the street by a friend who invited him to accompany him to a neighboring "thirst parlor," which invitation, to the surprise of the friend who extended it, was declined. John said that when he left his wife the previous morning he had promised her on his sacred word of honor that he would never take another drink as long as he lived, and there was another reason. The friend then asked John what his other reason was, to which he replied, "I have just had one."

As I am engaged in the surety business I am going to tell you the reason why bankers should use corporate surety bonds, as it seems to me that this is a subject that should interest every banker, as modern banking methods require the use of fidelity bonds in safeguarding alike the interests of the banker, stockholder, and the depositor.

No up-to-date, progressive and conservative banker of to-day fails to give such protection to his shareholders and depositors, and the bank that fails to adopt this well established rule of safety and conservatism is not likely to hold its own in the race for supremacy which can only end in "the survival of the fittest." Since time began men have been required to guarantee the fulfillment of their obligations and many methods of giving surety for such performance have been used. Also from the beginning of time the risk of giving surety has been recognized. Even in Holy Writ we have the evidence of this fact as shown in the Book of Proverbs, where the statement is made:

President James E. Smith of the Equitable, St. Louis, gives an interesting talk at the Joplin convention

"He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it."

You will remember also that Shakespeare, in one of his plays, gives us the instance of a grasping Jew who made a loan to a man whose friend became surety for the payment of the obligation, with the hard condition imposed that in the event of the non-payment of the loan he would exact a pound of flesh, and since that time the men of your calling who have resorted to usurious practices have been known as "Shylocks." The custom of giving personal surety, which began in those early days, remained in vogue until well along into the past century, and it is to the credit of our own country that she solved the problem by successfully establishing a system which has entirely done away with the objectionable plan of demanding and giving personal surety. It is a safe assertion that no prudent or provident man ever willingly became surety for another. Men have assumed such unwelcome and objectionable obligations but only because they could not well escape them. Many a man has been financially ruined by going on the bond of the "other fellow." No right thinking man will now ask his friend to go on his bond, and no man, no matter how fond he may be of his friend, really wants to assume any such obligation on his account.

The giving of personal surety is a rueful relic of the primitive past. The custom grew from the necessity of the time when corporate surety bonds were unknown, but they are easily obtainable now and they are replacing the plan of assuming personal liability for the obligations of others, just as the electric light is replacing the old time methods of illumination, and now the man who wants such protection can buy it just as readily as he can go into a hardware store and buy a pound of nails. The advantages of corporate surety over personal surety are so obvious and evident that no one can dispute them:

Personal sureties may die.

They may become insolvent.

They may become dissatisfied.

They may move away and get beyond your reach, and for these and other reasons cause you trouble and attorney's fees.

A corporation engaged in the surety business, when properly organized and conducted, becomes a permanent institution whose obligations are fulfilled promptly and faithfully. A surety bond is in fact a letter of credit. Almost any man can give a personal bond but every man cannot give a Company bond. The man who gives a personal bond places himself under obligation to the man who becomes his surety. He thus forfeits his independence, and every manly man wants to be independent. Every good business man wants to do business in a business-like way, and such a man will buy his bond and pay a fair price for it rather than demean himself by begging for it. These reasons as to why the individual should use a corporate surety bond apply with equal force to banks and other business institutions. Every well managed business concern now bonds certain of its employees for the faithful performance of their duties. Our national, state, and municipal governments compel their employees to give bond for the faithful fulfillment of their obligations. As I have stated already, all conservative and well managed banks protect themselves, their shareholders, and their depositors against loss caused by the employment of dishonest employees, through the use of corporate surety, and the bank that fails to give such protection is open to the criticism of not only its depositors and shareholders but of the general public as well.

It is the duty of every banker to so conduct his business that he may secure the absolute confidence of all of the people in his community and to so manage his institution that this confidence may be deserved and never be abused or forfeited. More than this, he should always follow safe and conservative methods in the management of his business in order that he may safeguard the interests of his patrons and avoid bringing disaster upon those whose confidence he has gained, for as we all know the failure of a bank in any community usually causes widespread ruin and disaster to hundreds, if not thousands, of its people.

I have found great comfort in the belief that most men are honest. I believe that the world is growing better every day, but I must confess that since I have been in the surety business my belief in the honesty of my fellow men has been at times rudely shaken, but I am still inclined to the belief that the majority of men are honest, for, otherwise, the business in which I am engaged would be not only unprofitable but decidedly uncomfortable.

The statistics of the past twenty-five years show that the business done by the surety companies with banks has been, with most companies, unprofitable, and only those companies which have followed the most careful and conservative methods have shown satisfactory results.

This does not mean that losses have been numerous, but the reason for this showing is that surety rates are extremely low and that one big loss often wipes out the premiums received for years, and if such losses are too frequent the surety company which pays them must necessarily find the business unprofitable.

Let me illustrate: A surety company bonds a bank cashier for twenty thousand dollars. For this risk the company receives a premium of fifty dollars. Suppose this cashier proves dishonest and the surety company pays the loss incurred. It means that it would take the premiums of forty years on ten similar risks to even up this loss, and hence the difficulty of managing such a business so as to prevent disastrous losses.

This can be done only by accepting such business as experience and good judgment will justify the surety company in taking, and even then losses are sure to occur, for the reason that human nature is sometimes weak and every now and then some trusted employee goes wrong and either the bank itself or the surety company which furnishes the bank protection against such happenings must stand the loss.

J. B. JENNINGS
Moberly, Missouri
Treasurer, Missouri Bankers Association

It goes without saying that no properly managed bank will take into its employ a man whose reputation for honesty and capability is not well established, for no matter how careful they may be, mistakes in their judgment will occur, and right here, Mr. Banker, is another great advantage in the bond procured from the corporate surety. The man who is bonded by the corporate surety company takes upon himself the responsibility of making a reputation for himself or of maintaining the good record he may have already established, for he knows that when he has once gone wrong the record of his wrong doing will stand against him for all time to come and that no other surety company will be likely to stand sponsor for him when he seeks a similar position and requires a bondsman.

The bond of the surety company is, therefore, an added protection to the employer as he gets the benefit of this restraining influence upon his employee.

Let me say further that the investigation made by surety companies of those persons for whom they furnish bond is a great protection to the employer, and many a bank has been saved from loss by receiving information about their employees which they themselves never would have discovered, and which had been obtained through the careful investigation and surveillance of the surety company as to the past history, the habits, and the general conduct of the individual whose honesty and faithfulness they had guaranteed.

The duty of the surety to the employer whose employee he has bonded does not end when he has signed the bond and collected the premium charge. He still owes to his client and patron such further protection as he may be able to furnish him, and all properly managed surety companies recognize their responsibility in this respect. Now, gentlemen, I have endeavored to give you the reason why good banking methods require the use of corporate surety bonds, and I hope that I have proven my case. BANKERS TRUST, NEW YORK, OCCUPIES NEW HOME

The event of last week in trust company circles was the moving of the Bankers Trust Company, New York, into its new building at the corner of Wall and Nassau streets. The building, which was constructed at a cost of about $3,000,000, is now open for public inspection. Among those who have so far availed themselves of this opportunity the opinion is unanimous that the new home of the Bankers Trust Company is the "last word" in bank construction in New York. Probably no finer example of bank architecture nor more perfect arrangements in a banking institution exist anywhere.

The new building, which is of massive construction throughout, and is crowned with a pyramid, is forty-one stories in height, and stands on a lot about 100 feet square. It contains available for renting purposes approximately 180,000 square feet of office space, exclusive of the first, second and third floors, which contain the banking quarters of the Bankers Trust Company. All of the banking rooms are finished with marble work, the walls of the main banking room on the second floor being lined with Tavernelle marble to the ceiling. The board room is on the third floor, and is a remarkable example of elegance devoid of every tendency to gaudiness. The high-paneled wainscoting is of Circassian walnut, the directors' specially designed table and thirty-eight chairs fitted with loose leather cushions being of the same material.

A feature of the new building is the vault, the strongest and heaviest ever built. The inside measurements are 22½ feet in height, 28 feet in width and nearly 30 feet in length. The vault will accommodate nearly 160 safes when filled. It weighs 1,550 tons, and the main door, which is fitted with 20 five-inch bolts, weighs 39 tons.

The new building of the Bankers Trust Company may be regarded as reflective of the tremendous growth of this institution within recent years. The company began business on March 30, 1903, with $1,000,000 capital and $500,000 surplus. According to its latest statement, as of March 21, 1912, the company had $5,000,000 capital, $13,642,000 surplus and undivided profits and total deposits of $154,055,733.

aid and your assistance; and one of the greatest of our assets is the fidelity of its members, which is supreme, and will be so long as the affairs of the association are open to all, and is absolutely kept free from politics; for the affairs of the association are first and are paramount and above the affairs of individuals.

One of the most important things in the life of the association has come up, and has been well settled during the year. At a meeting of your executive council in January, a committee was appointed to take up the matter of fidelity bond insurance, and that committee is to be congratulated upon the results of its efforts. A great amount of time, labor and care was spent. The officers of your association have met with this committee repeatedly, and nothing was left undone to get the best insurance at the lowest possible cost. We realize and know what writing insurance at less than cost means, and it means but one thing, and that is failure. We also know, and about this there is not any doubt, that if our association was out of business we would be paying twice as much as we now pay, and when you are offered insurance at a less rate or you are offered commission or rebate, there is only one course open to you, and that is to stand by your association as that association stands by you. As a result of the efforts of that committee a contract was entered into with one of the strongest and most reliable companies organized under the laws of Missouri. The officers and the committee have finished, and have done their part, and it may not be an easy matter to turn down a lower rate, and it is now simply up to you as members of the association. This convention should take up and consider the advisability of a committee on agriculture. Missouri, being one of the best farming and producing countries, the banker should do all in his power to advance that part of commercial life. Much progress has been made on this line, which is largely due to our school of agriculture located at Columbia. The officers of that department, of which there are about forty-five, are not only willing, but are anxious to give to the farmer the advantages gained by experience on this line, and there is not a doubt about the practical and the profitable results obtained. This information and knowledge should be promulgated, and that committee no doubt can work out the best plan in which to bring to the attention of the farmer these important things that interest him and his work so much. These methods would bring about the desirability and the necessity for habits of thrift and saving and economy. The good roads movement and the rural route are things to be encouraged, for it is the tendency to make a better and a more satisfied people, and this is one of the secrets of life, and is the secret of success—a satisfied life.

The postal savings system seems to be working satisfactorily. Bankers never have been in favor of the government going into the banking business, and it seems clearly out of their line; however, if the people can be taught saving and economy, then much has been done and the department should be congratulated. Up to the present time, our reports are that over twenty millions of dollars have been deposited, and I think that all the bankers agree that this great sum of money or the largest part of it has come out of hiding, and not from the banks, thus putting into circulation this vast sum, and it is estimated that before the end of the year there will be deposited in banks not less than forty millions of dollars. This is a source of pleasure to the banker as well as to the individual that the people are saving money, and are depositing it so that commerce and trade can have the use and benefit of it. The legislative committee on account of no meeting of the legislature has had but little to do, but it comes to my mind that it might be well to consider the passing of laws looking to the laws similarly passed by our neighboring state. The Kansas banking law is far ahead and superior to the Missouri law in some things. It gives to the board of bank commissioners practically all the power or control of state banks. The Missouri bank commissioner with his associates should have the right to refuse a charter to a bank if that board believes that there are too many banks in the town, and it should make no difference if the applicant has complied with all the requirements, the decision of this board should be absolute. This commissioner and his associates should have the right to take charge of a bank, and have control of it before it becomes hopelessly insolvent; to pay dividends to its depositors without waiting until the affairs of the bank are finally closed. The commissioner and his associates should have the right to say, and it should be their duty to pass upon the incapacity or the previous record of applicants, as to their integrity and business ability. This would check unprofitable competition, and which means failure and loss to the banker and the community, both of which are to be avoided and prevented, which in most cases can be done.

Your association is in the most prosperous and satisfactory condition, and much credit should be given to one of the most capable and faithful secretaries, and with his very able associates in the office of the secretary who are entitled to their part of the success, you are to be congratulated. I wish to express my full appreciation to all the members of this association for their uniform courtesy, for the faithful discharge of your duty, and the promptness in which you have responded to every call. During the three years of my official capacity, it has been my good fortune and my great pleasure to visit many of you in your places of business, and some of you in your homes, and I have every right to be proud of you and that I have been your president.

It is said that a new bank will be organized at Eagle River, Wis. John J. Sherman, cashier of the Citizens National at Appleton, and a Mr. Walsh of Antigo are said to be the promoters.

ELLIOTT-FISHER CO., of Harrisburg, Pa., has begun the publication of a strictly up-to-date house organ, known as "Bookkeeping To-day." It will be devoted chiefly to the mechanical arts along bookkeeping and listing lines. Its purpose in the publication field will be to teach the advantages of bookkeeping by machinery as well as machine billing and the mechanical computation of interest and record writing.

SECRETARY W. F. KEYSER has suggested to Missouri bankers, who are members of the American Bankers Association, the advisability of qualifying an additional member of the council before the meeting of the Detroit convention. To take care of that contingency he advises the election of an additional member tentatively. This will give Missouri one man to succeed W. C. Harris, and one man to fill the quota if a sufficient number of new members is obtained.

THIS plan of a tentative election probably will be followed in Iowa also, where one regular vacancy will occur, and where an additional membership probably will be secured before the Detroit convention. Other states probably will follow suit.

DETROIT "News-Tribune" of recent date contains a full-page write-up with many half-tone illustrations describing one of Detroit's great industries. The page is devoted to the manufacturing plant of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company, and shows and tells in detail how that particular piece of mechanical perfection is constructed, and with what care the materials are selected.

SECRETARY McLANE TILTON of the Alabama Bankers Association has recommended the creation of a committee on agriculture and immigration. He shows by comparison that other states are getting the lead on Alabama both in methods of agriculture, and in securing immigrants.

MR. TILTON says that all Alabama needs is the adoption of more modern methods with the addition of a large number of willing laborers from foreign countries, who would appreciate the advantages of soil and climate.

SECRETARY TILTON congratulated the bankers on successfully passing the new banking law, and in securing such a competent man as A. E. Walker to superintend the new banking department. He also advised the bankers to take up the "Blue Sky" plan of regulation, and to pass a full-blooded Kansas law for Alabama. He believes that the legislature should endeavor to protect the public from shameless stock jobbing.

R. L. GURNEY, manager of the savings department of the Commonwealth Trust Company at St. Louis, gave an illustrated talk at the Gulfport, Miss., convention on Wednesday. The talk was entitled "Advertising Lemons," and Mr. Gurney showed on a screen by means of a magic lantern such advertisements as his bank uses, changing copy each day in the year.

CINCINNATI and Cleveland chapters, A. I. B., will have a joint debate at the Ohio state convention to be held at Cedar Point on July 2d. The convention is to last over two days, and this will give the Ohio bankers an opportunity to spend the national holiday amidst pleasant surroundings.

SECRETARY RANKIN has billed J. Adam Bede for one of his famous talks, and W. J. Burns has agreed to be present. Two ad-resses which will attract considerable attention are papers by C. E. Baxter, superintendent of banks and banking in Ohio, and one on investment banking by W. S. Hayden of Hayden, Miller & Co., Cleveland.

S. W. STRAUS & CO., a well-known mortgage and bond banking house, has begun the publication of the "Investor's Magazine." The May number is the first issue.

EDITOR STRAUS has illustrated his first edition with some beautiful engravings showing Chicago of yesterday, to-day, and in the future. A very interesting department is devoted to get-rich-quick swindles.

PINKERTON AGENCY is advertising quite liberally in those papers which are trying to disestablish the Journal-Bulletin and to "put a crimp in Farnsworth." Strange how the "anti's" bunch their hits?

KOILSAAT, Funk, White, Holstlaw et al. are pretty roughly "estimated" by the senate committee which vindicated Hines and found no case against Senator Lorimer.

FUNK'S attempt to besmirch the good name of Edward Tilden only discredited his attempt to ruin Hines, which already was weak from the inconceivable situation, wherein Funk would have us believe that enemies of Mr. Lorimer were asked to contribute for his election expenses.

KANSAS has a "real" secretary in W. W. Bowman. No shortage of income there. Has a balance to the good of $22,055.22, and a membership of only 1,060.

WE like the modest, impersonal way in which Bowman does things. The secretary who uses too many full signature cuts, too many big "I's," and too little modesty and obedience to orders of supervisors deserves to go to the junk heap.

BOWMAN says that in Kansas no bank is reported a member or in any way carried as a member except those who have paid in advance for the current year. There are none merely "considered" members on the strength of their having once been a member. The membership fee has actually been paid by every one of the 1,060 members reported.

FIDELITY TRUST of Kansas City is building an addition to its present building, which has caused the question to be raised as to whether or not the old building does not extend beyond the building line on the Walnut Street side. The city is investigating.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., is about to make a test of branch banking by means of the postal savings bank system. Postmaster Childs has received permission from Washington to open branch postal banks wherever postal substations are being conducted.

BANK COMMISSIONER LANFORD of Oklahoma City made quite a favorable impression at the Tulsa convention. He convinced everyone present that it is his determination to give Oklahoma banks the most impartial examinations possible and that he will countenance no mercy on embezzlers and defaulers.

"EARLY Banking in the Cherokee Strip," by O. J. Fleming of Enid was another of the big hits at the Tulsa meeting. Those who heard Mr. Fleming agreed that the facts presented scarcely could be equaled in fiction.

SECRETARY W. B. HARRISON, who is editor of the "Oklahoma Banker," secured a big hit when he engaged Bank Commissioner Dolley to speak at his convention. He was not able, however, to prevent the other newspapers of the state from printing the name of the distinguished "Blue-Sky" propagandist as "Doolley."

OKLAHOMA'S new president is Asa Ramsey of Muskogee, and W. S. Guthrie of Oklahoma City, formerly secretary of the association, now is its vice-president. J. R. Prentice of Ardmore is the new treasurer.

THEY have a state bankers section in Oklahoma and the new president of that division is G. W. Perisol of Oklahoma City; A. E. Patrick of Chandler is secretary. Tulsa's population has increased in eighteen months fully 50 per cent, and not a little of the increase is accounted for by the beautiful new hotel building which gave so much comfort to the visitors. The entertainment features of the convention never have been surpassed in the history of the state unless it might have been at the convention held in Oklahoma City last year.

E. H. McKEE, who travels out for the Fort Dearborn National of this city, was one of the favorites at the Tulsa ball. It is said that he succeeded in making at least a dozen more dance engagements than were provided for by the program.

IN the three years that the Kansas bank guaranty law has been in operation not a single penny has been taken out of the guaranty fund. For the first eight months after its enactment the law was tied up in the federal courts.

KANSAS now has 444 banks participating in the fund, the banks having deposited $326,000 in Kansas municipal bonds. This fund is a guaranty of good faith on the part of the banks.

COMMISSIONER DOLLEY estimates that the fund now would pay off the failure of any state bank in Kansas even if it were a total loss. The banks which have put up bonds constituting this fund are entitled to the interest, so that the expense thus far to the banks concerned has been absolutely nothing.

ONE of the original objections to the Kansas law was the tying up of so much money. The way the plan has worked out, there has worked no hardship whatever. But one failure has occurred, which was that of Abilene State Bank, wrecked by John A. Flack. Depositors were paid off in this instance by state certificates which eagerly were bought up by the other Abilene banks. It has been estimated that enough property has been found to liquidate all claims without any loss whatever to the state guaranty fund except the use of its certificates for a short time. CASHIER.

W. H. Hurley

W. H. Hurley, assistant cashier of the National Bank of the Republic of Chicago, recently has returned from a business trip to Texas. Mr. Hurley reports conditions in the Lone Star state as very promising. It is expected that this year the grain crops will be quite large and profitable.

GROUP 4, ILLINOIS, AT YORKVILLE

Group 4, Illinois, will hold its meeting at Yorkville on Tuesday, June 11th. Headquarters of the secretary and the registration office will be at the court house, where the meeting will be called to order at 11 A. M. sharp. In view of the approaching political convention the principal address will be of peculiar interest. Charles H. Hamill of Chicago will address the group on constitutional government, the address to be without reference to party lines. In addition to this there will be an address by Peter Klein, president of the German-American National at Aurora, and editor of the German newspaper there. There also will be some short talks on live topics, such as good roads, by W. E. Steward of Plano; "Co-operation Regarding Exchange of Credit Information," by Clarence E. Smith, president of the Peoples Bank at Waukegan, and short talks on politics and business by the delegates. The address of welcome will be delivered by W. R. Newton, president of the Yorkville National, and the response will be made by George Woodruff, president of the First National of Joliet. Dinner will be served at the town hall by the Yorkville chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, and the balance of the meeting will be conducted there. Music will be furnished by the Yorkville orchestra. Those going from Chicago should take the C. B. & Q. train leaving the Union Station at 8 A. M. Special arrangements have been made for the bankers' party. Officers of the group will be elected for the ensuing year and also a member of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association.

Chicago Visitors

D. G. Wing, president of the First National of Boston, and who attended the St. Louis bankers barbecue, reached Chicago on Sunday. Mr. Wing says that those present greatly enjoyed the day spent with the St. Louis bankers, and that reports as to business and crop conditions in the West and Southwest are very encouraging. C. F. Enright, financier and electric road builder, of St. Joseph, Mo., spent Friday and Saturday in Chicago. He reports satisfactory progress in the work of beginning building operations on his electric road extending from St. Joseph to Kansas City and from Kansas City to Excelsior Springs, Mo.

O. M. Blake, president of the Miami National at Hamilton, Ohio; M. O. Williamson, president of the Peoples Trust and Savings at Galesburg, Ill., and chairman of Group 2, whose convention will be held at Pekin this year, and B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, also visited the financial district during the past week. Mr.

Harris left for Knoxville, where he delivered an address before the Tennessee bankers at their convention held in that city on May 28th and 29th.

J. T. Scott, vice-president of the First National at Houston, and R. P. Wofford, cashier of the Commonwealth National at Dallas, are two prominent Texans who visited Chicago during the past week. A. R. Thompson, vice-president of the German National at Hastings, Neb., and formerly of Oklahoma, called on Chicago banking acquaintances this week. Mr. Thompson reports everything as very favorable in his section of the country. R. H. Morse, cashier of the Globe Savings Bank at Los Angeles, visited Chicago on Wednesday in company with his brother, J. D. Morse, cashier of Morse Brothers, bankers, Gifford, Ill. R. H. Morse still retains his interest in the old banking firm at Gifford. He says that the Globe Savings, which recently consolidated with the Bank of Southern California, now has a capital of half a million, and deposits in excess of two millions. This is the bank with which Fred H. Haskell, formerly vice-president of the First National at Mendota, and

A. C. Hupp, formerly cashier of the Arlington (Ill.) State Bank, are the vice-presidents. B. M. Mead, cashier of the State Trust and Savings at Peoria, visited Chicago on Tuesday. Mr. Mead expresses great pleasure at the new location of his bank on Jefferson Street opposite the new Jefferson Hotel. He reports a line of deposits in excess of seven hundred thousand. Peoria bankers are looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to the convention of the Illinois bankers, which will be held in their city, September 25th and 26th. They are preparing an interesting program of entertainment, and are expecting a large attendance.

JOHN W. THOMAS

John W. Thomas, assistant cashier of the Central Trust, left for Rolla, Mo., on Monday night, to attend the graduation exercises of the School of Mines, from which institution his son is to be graduated.

A. UHRLAUB

A. Uhrlaub, vice-president of the Central Trust, sailed on Tuesday of this week for his annual visit to Germany.

Joplin convention conferred official favor upon two of the younger bankers of the state. Mr. Hawes was unanimously elected treasurer, which means that he will in turn fill the chairs of vice-president and president of this famous state association. Each of the ten groups seconded his nomination—a rare compliment of itself. He is a vice-president of the Third National.

Mr. Calfee will go on the Big Council at the Detroit convention. Like Mr. Hawes, he is a St. Louis banker, but has been a strong organization-man, and has an acquaintance which extends into every county in the state. He is cashier of the Mechanics-American National.

Missouri has set another example of how she rewards her workers and keeps bringing young men to the front that they may gain in experience and knowledge and thus keep the Missouri association up to its present high standard.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

A GOOD story is told of how Oliver C. Fuller of Milwaukee, assisted by several willing helpers, the day after the trust company banquet, in New York, undertook to find out the amount of ground Fred Kent would cover in showing out of town bankers over the new building of the Bankers Trust Company. Fred always began with the fourth sub-basement and ended with the big room just under the pyramid at the top. A pedometer, secretly attached is said to have registered 39.8 miles. Since then the splendid new banking rooms have been occupied by the company and members of the staff are kept busy conducting tourists. The shorter building to right of Bankers Trust is the home of the A. B. A., known as "11 Pine St.," new offices being on the 12th floor.

JOHN C. RICHBERG, one of Chicago's best known attorneys, and commissioner for Illinois on uniform state laws, has taken up the subject of universal state banking laws, and will present the subject at the annual conference which will take place in Milwaukee in August.

ON May 6th Mr. Richberg wrote to Chairman Charles G. Dawes of the special committee of bankers charged with the preparation of a new banking act for Illinois, offering to lay before the Milwaukee conference the draft of the banking act which shall be prepared by the committee.

CHAIRMAN DAWES responded promptly, thanking Mr. Richberg for the suggestion and saying that he personally would favor having the proposed Illinois banking act offered for consideration before the uniform law commissioners, and that if the draft is ready by August it will be forwarded.

ONCE the commissioners on uniform state laws have agreed upon a form it is the duty of each state commissioner to have the uniform act introduced in the legislature of his own state and offered for passage. Thus it develops that if Mr. Harris and his friends in Illinois had not taken up the work the next legislature practically was certain of having a banking act presented covering largely the same subjects from another source.

MR. RICHBERG has been a close reader of THE CHICAGO BANKER and was interested deeply in the letters written to it by the state banking commissioners, nearly all of whom favor uniform state banking laws so far as possible. Uniform laws covering a great many topics with which bankers have to deal have been adopted in nearly all of the states. It will be a step in advance of anything previously contemplated if a uniform state banking law can be prepared which will meet the requirements of the various states.

CHAIRMAN DAWES and his committee are willing, so it is understood, to confer with anyone who has a plan or who is deeply interested in the subject. No attempt has been made or will be made to deny the private bankers or any of their friends any of the privileges accorded to any other interest. They can be heard at any of the sessions of the committee by making proper application.

EACH state has a uniform law commission and the general commission is composed of one member of the state commission from each state, appointed by the governor. It becomes their duty when a bill has met with their approval to introduce it at once in the legislature. It is altogether likely that by co-operation the Dawes committee and the uniform law commissioners can produce such a bill as will be favored generally in the states.

THE American Bankers Association has done wonderful work for bankers and business men in its efforts in behalf of uniform bills of lading and uniform negotiable instruments acts. Why can not some aggressive member of the association—preferably a member of the council—originate a strong committee on uniform banking legislation? A large part of the last annual convention was devoted to the new monetary plan for national banking and currency issue. Why not have the next or some other convention devote its time to uniform state banking laws?

IT is not likely that any more interesting topic for discussion could be suggested than this very one. We should like to hear our friend George Rogers of Little Rock read a paper telling the convention why his fine banking institution is incorporated as a saw-mill?

ARKANSAS is not the only state which could create a laugh by preparing and presenting a paper on the local banking situation, for several states seem to have no direct banking laws of any kind. Who will be the new Moses to bring about this revelation in banking circles?

ONE of the returning pilgrims from Joplin has great pleasure, owing to his warm friendship for "Dick" Hawes, in telling how that young gentleman was elected unanimously to be treasurer of the Missouri Bankers Association.

OUR friend, the pilgrim, says that on the nominating committee Mr. Hawes was seconded from every group in the state. This is quite an honor—to say nothing more about it.

IN the previous ten years there have been the warmest kind of contests for that office, owing to the fact that in Missouri it is the first stepping-stone to the presidency of the association. Most states start their presidential heirs-apparent with the chairmanship of the council.

WE understand that being from Missouri, J. Fletcher Farrell, treasurer of the American Bankers Association, thinks the plan a mighty good one. Here is an innocent little lightning rod set up for any stray shaft which may be floating around in the atmosphere at the convention—after—next.

MISSOURI'S program had certain agricultural features which came off swimmingly at Joplin. Mr. Hawes was one of the pioneers in framing the agricultural committee idea in his state and from now on will be in a position to put Missouri in the very front rank of those states trying to place farming on a higher plane and to make it more attractive and more remunerative.

F. T. HODGDON of Hannibal is on the A. B. A. nominating committee from Missouri and J. A. Schreiber of St. Charles is alternate. The states in succeeding years will make more of this position than in former times. In fact, "after Detroit" the nominating committee will look like a business organization.

ST. LOUIS drew nearly two hundred of the choicest spirits in banking circles to her big barbecue on Saturday last. All of the Middle Western cities of ten thousand or over were represented and delegations were present from the centers.

THIS made it very interesting and profitable. One of the main things talked about by the bankers was the current attempt to improve farm-loan conditions. It is said that the western representatives talked about little else.

EDWARD CHAMBERLAIN was up from San Antonio and was one of those chiefly interested. He is on the agricultural committee of the American Bankers Association and intends making a tour of Europe in company with Myron T. Herricks, at present ambassador to France. Mr. Chamberlain intends to study the farm-loan question.

THE Chamberlain-Herrick idea seems to be to make farm mortgages more marketable, and they hope to establish some central au-

California Bankers at Long Beach

California Bankers Association concluded its twenty-first annual convention at Long Beach, one of southern California's famous ocean resorts, on Saturday last. Under the leadership of President Stoddard Jess, Secretary Frederick H. Colburn produced a program which would have answered every requirement for a national meeting of the A. B. A. Everything of the modern character was touched upon, including segregation of savings bank deposits, clearing house examinations, the relationship between promoters and bankers, Panama Canal, postal savings, school savings systems, check endorsement, agricultural and educational development, value of state associations to the banker and other subjects close to the banker's heart and very interesting to those situated on the western coast. It will not be possible to include the entire addresses made by any of these interesting speakers, but in the following summary will be found some of the advanced ideas promulgated at Long Beach which met with ready acceptance and endorsement by bankers present.

The social features which had been arranged by a committee representing all the banks in the county included automobile rides, surf and still-water bathing, a barbecue, privileges of the Virginia Country Club, boat rides in the harbor daily and other attractions of this famous resort, which were all free to those wearing the California delegate badge. Following will be found some of the pertinent remarks made by the distinguished speakers.

President Stoddard Jess Talks

Great interest centered in the annual address by Stoddard Jess, of the First National, Los Angeles. He said in part:

Twenty-one years ago the California Bankers Association was formed—"to promote the general welfare and usefulness of banks and banking institutions, and to secure uniformity of action, together with the practical benefits to be derived from personal acquaintance and from the discussions of subjects of importance to the banking and commercial interests of this state; especially in order to secure the proper consideration of questions regarding the financial usages, customs and laws which affect the banking interests of the whole state, and for protection against loss from crime."

The aims and objects of the association have been, in a large measure, attained; its influence in promoting safe and conservative banking has benefited not only its members, but has had a beneficial effect on the entire business interests of the state; personal acquaintance and close friendships formed among bankers have proven both pleasant and profitable; the influence of the association in securing legislation to insure good banking methods, and proper supervision of banks for the protection of the public as well as in the interests of the banks themselves, will leave a lasting impression on financial conditions in the state; and the protection it has afforded its members against loss from crime has been considerable and is increasing in efficiency every day.

Development of California

The development that has taken place in California since the formation of this association has been phenomenal, and the expansion of the business of banking has kept pace with the development in other lines.

In 1891 there were only 246 banks of all kinds in the state, with total deposits of $238,678,784.73; and to-day we have 732 banks with total deposits of $769,926,108.92—an increase of three hundred per cent in number, and three hundred and twenty-two per cent in amount of deposits.

While the progress shown is great, California has only begun to develop. The influence of our favorable climatic conditions and our varied products, which make for health and happiness, has called the attention of the world to us, and is only beginning to be felt.

Agricultural Development and Education

One of the encouraging signs of the times is the interest being shown in agricultural development and education. In its final analysis, this is an economic question.

We are more and more becoming a nation of consumers rather than producers of agricultural products. The alarm has already been sounded, that with a continuance of present conditions and tendencies, the United States will not be able to raise the food products necessary to support its population much longer. This condition stands as a menace to our future prosperity. With what once seemed our limitless expanse of fertile soil, now nearly all under cultivation, the solution of the problem lies in the development of higher efficiency in agriculture.

Much has already been accomplished in California in this direction by our state university with its experimental work and course schools.

Greater liberality should be shown in appropriations, to the end that agriculture should be taught scientifically and experimentally alongside with manual training and domestic science; not only in our universities, but more particularly in our grammar and high schools, where its benefits will extend to all.

The American Bankers Association at its last meeting and several of the state bankers associations have appointed committees to promote agricultural development work. It might be well for our association to do likewise.

Group System

As instructed at the last convention, I appointed a committee of three to investigate and report to the association at this meeting concerning the advisability of adopting the so-called "Group System" in California. The report of that committee will come before this convention for consideration.

In case it should be determined to adopt the "Group System," I wish to suggest for your consideration the advisability of securing in connection with it the advantages of the plan that miscarried, of forming and maintaining what was to be known as the California State Clearing House Association.

In 1908, when the panic of the previous year was uppermost in the minds of the bankers, the association provided for the appointment of a committee of fifteen to make a report on the subject of the formation of interior clearing house associations; the object being to arrange in some way to give the same mutual protection, through the employment of a special examiner, to all interior banks as was enjoyed by the San Francisco and Los Angeles banks through their respective clearing house organizations.

The following year, 1909, at the annual convention held at Del Monte, the committee appointed reported a plan for the organization of the California State Clearing House Association. By the adoption of a resolution presented by the central board of the proposed association, the whole scheme was abandoned—the reason given being the changed conditions owing to the passage of the new bank act with a provision for a new superintendent of banks, with the feeling that the proper attitude of the association should be to uphold the superintendent of banks in his work, rather than to maintain an organization for the purpose of employing special examiners by the banks themselves.

I have always felt that it was a mistake not to have promoted the activity of the California State Clearing House Association. Our opinions are formed from our experiences. For the past four years our Los Angeles Clearing House Association has maintained a special examiner, and I am sure he has been worth many times the cost of the maintenance of his office.

ready been found desirable to secure many amendments to our new bank act, and it is likely that many more amendments will be found necessary to make it what it should be.

In its provisions, it is a wide departure from the former bank act of California. It must be remembered that it was formulated shortly after the panic of 1907, and for that reason it might be expected to contain some rather drastic provisions that sound better when considered theoretically than they work out in practice.

The provision of the bank act allowing departmental banking, is a distinct innovation in the annals of banking, and its effect not only on the banking business but on the general business of the community and of the state, should be carefully studied and noted, to the end that any needed restrictions or changes found desirable or necessary may be had; for, first of all, the bankers of the state desire laws that will uphold the financial integrity of the state, rather than to perpetuate any preconceived methods that may be discovered to be dangerous in their tendencies. If certain tendencies noted in some sections of the state develop in a too marked degree, it may be found desirable and necessary to determine by legislative enactment what a savings account is.

There is so much good in the new bank act, that some weaknesses can well be put up with until changed. Under the enforcement of its provisions by our state bank superintendent, the condition of California banks was never as satisfactory as at present.

It must be recognized that the position of state superintendent of banks is not a sinecure at this time. The interpretation of the provisions of the new bank act must be beset with vexations and uncertainties. I believe that our present superintendent of banks is conscientiously endeavoring to enforce the provisions of the act in the light of the best interpretations of it he can obtain through his legal advisers. As bankers, we owe it to him to hold up his hands, even if our interpretation of some provisions of the act may differ from his.

In closing, I wish to express my appreciation of the untiring efforts and zeal shown by the secretary, and of the efficient work of the members of the executive council, and of the several committees in promoting and fostering the upbuilding and support of the association.

The Deposit of Public Money in Banks

H. S. McKee, of Long Beach, said in part in presenting his subject:

The business of depositing public money in banks and the circumstances under which it is done in this state appear to merit thoughtful consideration, but beyond the steps which have been promptly taken by most banks to obtain these deposits, very little thought seems to have been given the subject.

Prior to 1907 public funds were withdrawn from circulation and hoarded in vaults by public treasurers, but the loud and persistent public demand for a change in so injurious a practice finally resulted in the passage of acts by our legislature, providing that state, county and municipal treasurers might restore these funds to useful circulation by depositing them in banks.

If the legislature had been wise and courageous enough to stop there and allow the treasurers to make these deposits under the same conditions that obtain as to the deposits of all other moneys, the beneficent purposes of the act would have been served and important public benefits would have resulted, but when money passes into the hands of a public treasurer, our system of political "clap trap" sanctifies it under the title of "The People's Money," as though it differed from any other kind of money and "the bogey man would get it if we didn't watch out."

So, instead of allowing it to be deposited in the ordinary way—subject, of course, to suitable limitations, and used by the public in their regular business of producing and exchanging commodities, and thereby exposing it only to risks of loss so trifling as to be negligible, and especially when compared with the waste and loss which attend the handling of public money in general—our legislature made a departure from sound principles by providing that the banks must secure the repayment of these deposits by depositing with the public treasurer municipal bonds of slightly greater value than the money.

The direct result of this was to bring down upon the banks an army of bond salesmen proposing that the bond house should obtain for the bank a deposits of public money by the following simple process:

Clearing House Examination of Banks

This important subject was well handled by John W. Wilson, examiner for the Los Angeles clearing house. He gave Chicago bankers full credit as follows:

The bankers of Chicago are justly entitled to the credit of this movement which was begun in June, 1906. The fall of 1907 emphasized the demand and demonstrated its efficiency. About twenty clearing houses now have such examiners, the Pacific Coast cities being Los Angeles, San Francisco and Portland, in the order named. The present comptroller of the currency has endorsed the results obtained in the most unqualified terms and has intimated that he may have his own examiners work at greater intervals in cities where the system seems to be working successfully.

Objections have been raised by some that the big bankers would have undue influence over an examiner; that he would be able to ascertain something about the condition of his rival. The objection of many bankers is the expense. The answer to all objections is the fact that no city that has once tried the system would go back to the old way.

It is a community of interest proposition. A city's standing in the financial world is measured not a little by the strength and credit of its banks. Not by the strength of one bank, but by the strength of all of its banks. While there is rivalry and keen competition, the fact stands out that the failure of one bank in a community throws a doubt in the minds of a suspicious public upon all.

Striking Example of Clearing House Supervision

Many instances could be given, but two in particular stand out and emphasize the value of the services of this self-constituted and self-governing body. Some years ago a bank was opened in Los Angeles. There was an air of mystery about it, but it grew. False and misleading advertisements were paraded and innocent people flocked to the bank to deposit their money. The bank was started on a shoe string; of the first one hundred thousand of capital, less than thirty thousand was actual cash. Nearly all the stock was held by the officers who by pooling the stock managed to negotiate a large loan. Thus thirty thousand dollars became one hundred thousand with no shareholders' responsibility because the promoters had no money.

To meet interest on the borrowed capital the officers voted large salaries to themselves. With everything to gain and very little to lose, they spent their borrowed capital freely. The one hundred thousand capital soon dwindled to sixty-five thousand through bad loans and enormous expenses. By constantly keeping themselves in the public eye and working on the sympathies of the ignorant classes their deposits increased rapidly. While the capital of the bank was seriously impaired, these scoundrels were selling stock of the bank worth sixty-five dollars at one hundred and thirty dollars to ignorant people and defenseless women.

Loans that no reputable bank would make found ready lodgment there. The patronage of thieves, gamblers, and confidence men was welcomed. The note pouch showed the names of more than twenty men that had been arrested or had skipped the country. These facts became known when the bank, after creating a fictitious capital of two hundred thousand dollars, applied for admission to the clearing house. On such a showing do you wonder the application was denied?

One of the strongest points about this self-governing body is the fact that without law they are in a position to demand that men who run banks must have reputation and integrity. Admission was denied, for which action the clearing house was roundly condemned, in many cases by people that should have known better.

Think of it! Here was a bank with not more than sixty per cent available cash. The clearing house demands character, not riches. Having no control over the bank, the clearing house could do little, save deny it clearing privileges. Its condemnation, however, was unrelenting, vigorous and ultimately successful. It is to be hoped the time will come when all depositors will be sufficiently keen to their own interests that they will ascertain what banks have the sanction of the clearing house. The bank finally came into honest hands and now enjoys the confidence of the public.

Country Clearing House Districts

Some years ago there was a movement on foot to place the entire state into districts. Each district was to have six trustees. Many of the districts organized, some even chose their examiners, and the matter was dropped. Did you ever consider what bank was the easiest to examine? It is the city bank. You find there loans on stocks and bonds of known value. If the paper of firms and corporations, mercantile agencies can enlighten you. If mortgages, the price per front foot is more easily arrived at than acreage in the country. Much of the paper in the country banks is personal and the banker is an optimist.

Did you ever know of a banker that would admit that any great amount of the paper he was carrying was bad? There may be notes with interest long overdue, notes of which the makers are in financial straits. The banker is sincere, he believes they will ultimately come out all right. Unless the amount is very large, the regular examiner has not the time to look into such matters.

A district examiner would take the time. A careful analysis of credits is the most important part of his work. After compiling the loans, he would consult the district trustees. Brown's loan in one bank seems all right, it is found he is a borrower in several. Brown has borrowed a certain amount in the district, the banks and separate amounts are not mentioned. Is he good for it? Some of the six trustees would know Brown, if not, he would be the subject of a special investigation by the examiner.

Examiners in adjoining territory would exchange lists of the large borrowers. Where borrowers in one district were found in another, each examiner would furnish all the information at his command.

Value of State Associations to Bankers

Wm. H. Dodge, president of the Arizona Bankers Association, presented an effective "shop-talk," giving the plan a big boost. He said in part:

Since the organization of the first bank in Arizona, in 1877, by San Francisco gentlemen with San Francisco capital, the relationship between the banks of California and Arizona has always been close and friendly, and it was this relationship, developed by personal contact, that prompted me to select for the subject of my paper, "The Value of the State Association to the Banker." The advantages of membership are many and I will mention but a few of them, dwelling especially upon those less often receiving proper valuation.

The privilege we enjoy of listening each year to instructive papers by students of economics and finance widens our horizon, stimulates study and research in the larger financial subjects, thereby giving us a better understanding of the warp and woof of this great financial fabric, of which we, as individuals, are but the fringe.

This larger interest naturally begets desire for attendance at the annual session of the American Bankers Association. It brings to us the realization that our state associations must be ably represented upon the executive council of that body if we are to do our share toward making that organization more truly representative of the bankers of America and less likely that its control be restricted to narrow geographical lines.

Arizona and New Mexico comprise an empire of more than 235,000 square miles, with bank deposits of upwards of $40,000,000, and we believe that one of our 107 members could better represent us on the executive council than could a gentleman from Delaware, New Hampshire or Vermont.

When, gentlemen, through your continued industrial and agricultural advancement and with the completion of the Panama Canal, the volume of your wealth will have grown to bounds undreamt of, even by yourselves; and

YOUR CHICAGO BUSINESS RESPECTFULLY INVITED

IF YOU HAVE NO CORRESPONDENT

IN CINCINNATI

We will welcome the opportunity of proving to you the benefits which will accrue from forming a connection with us your bank deposits shall have been trebled and quadrupled; and when Arizona, outgrowing her colicky period of new statehood, shall convert her tremendous potentialities into a golden stream, passing through our financial institutions into the reservoirs of your reserve centers, it is my firm belief that the relations existing between the banks of the two commonwealths will be as close and harmonious as they are to-day.

E. S. Wangenheim on Promoters

Touching upon the relation between the banker and the promoter, Mr. Wangenheim said:

The country banker sits at his desk, wondering if his competitor across the street is running his business in accordance with bank act, or how soon he must go to the wall, as he is losing all his business. Enter, a well-groomed, slick young man, asks for the manager, asks for an appointment, perhaps proffers a cigar—a good one—and leaves after having made a date for later in the day. Returns on time, explains his mission, which is to make your bank the largest in the county, as his company is the biggest, the cleanest and most worthy. As a favor, he will allow you to invest. If you hold back, he will offer you a directorship in the company. All the money collected in your county is to remain in your bank, or loaned out to your clients, or on your advice, and he plays generally on your credulity, for as Lamb says, "Credulity is man's greatest weakness." Your subscription for stock taken, the rest is easy, perhaps.

D. E. McKinlay on Panama Canal

Mr. McKinlay is surveyor of customs at San Francisco and believes in the canal. He reviewed the history of the undertaking and learnedly referred to other great public works and in conclusion predicted that:

When the Panama Canal is completed the commerce and trade of the world will be revolutionized. San Francisco will be brought nearly 9,000 miles closer to New York than it is to-day and European ports nearly 6,000 miles closer. It is estimated by statisticians skilled in transportation and in carrier service that the cost of transporting the great mass of bulky products from the Pacific Coast to eastern seaboard of the United States and to European points will be reduced nearly two-thirds. In other words, freights that now cost approximately $1 per 100 pounds over the transcontinental railroads from Pacific Coast ports to eastern markets may be carried through the canal for about 33 1-3 cents. It is estimated that this saving of freight on timber alone which is still standing in California would pay the cost of the canal, great as it is, three times over. We can hardly estimate the effect that this shortening of water rates will be on all the countries fronting the Pacific Ocean.

Other Subjects Presented

W. E. Benz spoke on the postal savings system. M. D. Wood reported for the delegates to New Orleans A. B. A. convention and Frank C. Mortimer read a paper on the school saving system. As a "field" it has not grown much in ten years.

R. M. Welch, former secretary of the California association, and with the Union Bank and Trust Company, San Francisco, read a valuable technical paper on "crossed" checks as they call it in England. In reality he proposed a comprehensive plan for general use of checks made payable to bearer.

Prof. E. J. Wickson, of the college of agriculture, University of California, Berkeley, discussed the question of agricultural and educational education in a broad sense and entertained the delegates in a profitable way. Most of the addresses were too long for reproduction in a periodical, especially with four other conventions going on in the same week.

Neither can many of them be extracted or summarized so as to preserve their best effects.

MAINE BANKERS AT RANGLEY LAKES

Secretary R. S. Hall of the Maine Bankers Association has sent out notices to the effect that the state convention will be held at Rangley Lakes on June 15th and 16th. The railroad schedules in Maine are quite complicated, a large part of the advance circular being a special time-table showing the starting time and connections for Rangley. Secretary Hall is doing his very best to secure special trains starting at Bangor and touching at Waterville, Bath, Brunswick, Augusta and other points. A part of the trip necessarily will be by boat from South Rangley to Rangley and return. Those desiring to attend the Maine convention should address Secretary Hall at Waterville.

GROUP 1, JUNE 27, AT MOLINE

Chairman G. F. Anderson of Group 1, Illinois, has sent out invitations to attend its meeting at Moline, June 27th, on board the Steamer W. W. The boat will leave the foot of 16th Street promptly at 9 A. M. (rain or shine). The business session of the group will be held on the boat en route down the river as far as Muscatine. "Dutch" lunch will be served on board on the return trip to Moline, arriving at 5:30 P. M. This will be strictly a "stag" affair and the fun and the attendance both promise to be large. A good program has been provided.

Banking Conditions in Tennessee—Knoxville Convention

In making this address, if I may dignify my remarks by such a title, I shall not make any review or résumé of the past year's work of our association, because this will be brought to your view and consideration by the reports of the secretary and of the committees which are to be heard during our deliberations. I shall choose rather to depart from this custom by making some observations on matters pertaining to the general welfare of our state, looking to future development instead of reflecting upon our past record.

The Tennessee Bankers Association is composed of representatives from every portion of the state, and while its object is primarily to develop plans for the improvement of the banking business, the affairs of its members are so interwoven with all other commercial interests, it is entirely within the purview of its work to consider questions of vital importance to the advancement of our state.

I shall not take up the discussion of the national financial policies, because these are now in the hands of a commission of experts who have for some time been at work developing plans for changes in our currency laws so as to give a sound system suitable to the demands of the business world.

The burden of my remarks will be to urge the bankers of this state to work as a unit, in an endeavor to place the affairs of our government in the hands of capable and honest business men and to co-operate with such men to make it desirable for capital to invest in our state, and to encourage immigration, so that the present decade will show marked gains in population and wealth.

We hear so much about the wonderful opportunities of other countries that we overlook our own natural resources. I shall not attempt to enumerate our many advantages, as they are well known to those listening to me, but I

President Wesley Drane speaks on general welfare of the state and the part bankers have in building it up. Tells them home opportunities are as abundant as may be found anywhere else will say, however, that I have traveled in many states in our Union and have almost daily business dealings with parties in other lands,

WESLEY DRANE
Clarksville, Tennessee
President Tennessee Bankers Association

and I believe one can come nearer finding everything he could possibly desire within the confines of the Old Volunteer State than anywhere else in the world.

It is unfortunate for the people of Tennessee to be persuaded by foreign land agents to seek homes or investments outside of our own state. It is a mistake on the part of the citizens of this state to invest their surplus elsewhere, which should be used in developing properties at home. The facilities for all to trade in the stock exchange have been so extended that anyone with a few dollars to invest is tempted to try his luck in a share of stock in some large or small corporation concerning which he knows practically nothing, rather than invest his money in some local enterprise, or use it in improving his own business in which the risk would not be so great, and over which he would have more control, and at the same time improve his own ability, and to that extent make a citizen more interested in the development of his own community.

We are not satisfied with the moderate growth of our population, and need a greater number of citizens to make use of our fertile soils and enjoy our salubrious climate, and this cannot be secured unless we present these advantages; but before doing this, we must first get our house in order by changing some of the evil conditions which have become engrafted, as it were, in our body politic.

It is not the spirit of this organization to engage in politics, and, as its president, I shall not break one of its written or unwritten rules, but it is certainly within the functions of our association to encourage and even advocate, policies which will benefit the business building of our commonwealth.

I have referred to the disposition of our citizens

GROUP 5, ILLINOIS, JUNE 5-6

Secretary Stuart Duncan of La Salle has sent out an advanced program for Group 5, Illinois, meeting to be held in La Salle on June 5th and 6th. The bankers of that city have arranged a program and accompanying entertainment which will keep the delegates and visitors well employed and in a happy state of mind over the two days covered by the sessions. Mayor Thomas F. Doyle will make the address of welcome and E. D. Durham will make the response. There will be a formal address by President L. E. Rockwood of Gibson, after which various committees will make reports. Among the distinguished speakers will be Frank W. Aldrich of McLean, on county bankers' federations; Robert W. Bonyng, on national reserve plans; W. H. Mills, editor of the Ottawa "Free Trader," on the banker and the farmer, and S. E. Bradt, chairman of the state committee on roads, will tell what has been done by his division of the state organization. There will be a smoker on Wednesday evening with an open discussion on bank taxation led by Charles E. Hook of the First National at Ottawa. Further discussion will be had upon interest rates as paid to depositors, led by John W. Dougherty of the First National at Dwight. Other topics for discussion may be offered by visiting members. As a part of the convention program on Thursday it is planned to show the visiting bankers Starved Rock, which is the new Illinois state park, and Deer Park, where dinner will be served at 2.

St. Louis Barbecue

The Bankers Club of St. Louis entertained bankers from all over the country at a barbecue held at the Log Cabin Club on Saturday, May 25th. Many prominent bankers attended this most enjoyable function, Chicago being well represented in the gathering by George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial; J. B. Forgan, president of the First National; W. T. Fenton, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic; L. A. Goddard, president of the State Bank; J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn; James B. McDougal, examiner of clearing house banks, and Ralph Van Vechten, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial. Each visiting banker upon arriving in the city was met by a representative of the St. Louis bankers. On Friday evening an informal reception was held at the St. Louis Club in order to give the guests an opportunity to meet St. Louis bank officers and directors, the affair being greatly enjoyed by all present. On Saturday morning about seventy-five automobiles were lined up in front of the hotel, each of the visitors being given a slip on which was printed the number of his car, from which he was to see the park and boulevard system of St. Louis on the way out to the Log Cabin Club. This enabled those participating to get a good view of the beautiful residences of some of St. Louis' most prominent citizens. On the way out the bankers were greatly pleased to see Charles H. Huttig, president of the Third National, standing on his front porch, who, however, was not feeling well enough to join the jolly throng. The Log Cabin Club is situated about fifteen miles from the city. After arriving at the club, fishing, shooting, golf and other amusements were indulged in by the pleasure-seekers, prizes being awarded to those who displayed the greatest prowess in their respective lines. Some of those who succeeded in capturing the honors are George M. Reynolds, Ralph Van Vechten, James B. Forgan, E. F. Swinney, president of the First National of Kansas City; L. A. Goddard, of the State Bank of Chicago; John McHugh, president of the First National of Sioux City, Ia.; J. A. Thatcher, president of the Denver National; Gordon N. Peay, president W. B. Worthen & Co., Little Rock, and Joseph T. Talbert. Luncheon was served around the clubhouse in the shade, after which the amusement features were continued. In the evening the visitors went across a little lake situated near the clubhouse to attend the barbecue, which was announced as having been prepared by an Indian chief. A most delightful time was had by all present.

The affair was very unique in its nature. It brought a great many prominent bankers together, and gave them an opportunity to get better acquainted with each other in an easy and informal way. It was an occasion which will be remembered for a long time by those who attended on account of the hospitality and good fellowship displayed by the St. Louis hosts. Among the other prominent bankers who attended are E. E. Crabtree of Jacksonville, Ill., J. H. Ingwersen of Clinton, Iowa, Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines, Luther Drake of Omaha, and Edward Chamberlain of San Antonio.

The Log Cabin Club is a very unique organization. It has about twenty-one members. The only rules in force are that nothing said within the sanctum of the club shall be repeated, and members are forbidden to discuss business matters while availing themselves of the benefits and privileges afforded by the institution. All expenses are met by special assessments of the members.

REALTY OPPORTUNITIES AT MOBILE BAY

A prominent banker and manufacturer of Mobile, Ala., speaking of the 13,000 acre Cameron tract, now on the market, stated: "I firmly believe there is no better spot or tract of land so well adapted to factory sites, railway terminals, and docking facilities, as this one—having 12 miles of water front on the bay and rivers which pass through this tract, together with approximately 50,000,000 feet of merchantable hardwood timber, not taking into consideration the great amount of piling for making docks, also hardwood railway ties."

Editor R. E. Edmonds, of the Manufacturers Record, of Baltimore, in an interview, stated that "Mobile in its relation to Birmingham, has the nearest water connection port to a mineral district in the world, and will participate in the tremendous development of the Birmingham district. The fact that water transportation is available and, when the government locks are completed on the Tombigbee and Warrior rivers, will give a low freight rate to this port.

should be a big advantage for Mobile, as an outlet for the mineral products of the state. I notice that the foreign commerce of Mobile has shown a large increase within the past few years, but you may look for a much larger increase when the Panama Canal is open for traffic. Mobile is particularly well situated for prospective tide water transportation from the great mineral districts of Alabama."

The Alabama River together with the Tennessee, runs through the Cameron tract. The Warrior empties into the Tombigbee and the Tombigbee into the Alabama. The United States government is now spending large sums of money putting locks into the Tombigbee and Warrior rivers which will bring all of the deep water transportation through the Alabama into the bay, and thence to outside ports. Ore and minerals at large will be floated by barges down to the Port of Mobile, where they will be reloaded into ocean going vessels.

It can be readily seen that this tract of land holds the strategic position so far as shipping by water is concerned.

The L. & N. R. R., which is triple tracking from Nashville to Mobile, touching this tract on the north, is a very valuable asset and it will be an easy matter to make extensions and railway freight terminals on this tract. Ocean going vessels can be run into Grand Bay and the freight loaded for export as soon as the docks are built.

Col. N. F. Thompson states as follows: "I deem it vital to the expansion of the export business of Mobile, to let the world know that Mobile will have a depth of channel equal to that of the Panama Canal."

At the present rate of increase in property values that border on Mobile Bay the value of this tract within the next five years should be approximately $50 to $60 per acre, or if used for the purposes above enumerated it would be impossible to place a valuation on it. In February, 1912, 2,000 feet on Mobile Bay, joining this tract, sold for $4 per front foot.

No wise investor with sufficient funds to buy this property should let the chance of increasing his earnings, and getting a foothold in such valuable territory slip by. H. H. Hardinger, representing H. O. Stone & Co. of this city, spent some time investigating the Cameron tract and upon his advice the firm undertook to find a market for the splendid opportunities found in the Cameron tract, one of the most promising of all the properties examined. H. O. Stone & Co. will give particulars and plans.

WISCONSIN

Nearly every banker in Milwaukee will be represented on the annual week's junketing tour of the jobbers' division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, leaving Milwaukee on Monday, June 3d. City bankers included in the delegation of 100 Milwaukee business men, which will travel through the central portion of the state in a special train over the Milwaukee road, are: E. J. Hughes, First National; E. H. Williams, Marine National; Albert C. Elser, Second Ward Savings; Walter Kasten, Wisconsin National; E. A. Farmer, German-American; E. A. Reddeman, Germania National; William M. Post, National Exchange; and John F. Strohmeyer, Milwaukee National. Mr. Strohmeyer stipulates that he be assigned a berth in the "quiet car," discovered by previous experience to be the third from the buffet car. The balance of the banker contingent is divided equally between the "noisy," "live wire," and "quiet" cars, respectively first, second, and third from the source of all good things at the front end of the train. The deputation will leave Milwaukee early Monday morning returning the following Sunday. Thirty-four stops, of which six will be overnight, will be made at the principal cities and towns through the central portion of the state between Milwaukee and Superior.

An assessment of 200 per cent will be levied on the stock of the German Bank of Sheboygan, which closed its doors last week following the sudden death of its president, Frederick Karste. The institution, according to Banking Commissioner Kuolt, will reopen in thirty days. It is said, although not authoritatively, that a large portion of the stock may be acquired by the First National Bank of Milwaukee in the course of the reorganization process.

Cannon of the Citizens Business League of Milwaukee spoke on good roads as affecting the banker. "Co-operation between the Farmer and the Banker," by R. B. Johns, Antigo, "Effect of Alteration and Modification of Bank Paper," by Attorney M. E. Rosenberry, Wausau, and informal discussion of overdue papers, advertising, and other matters of interest to bankers occupied the afternoon session. The convention closed with a banquet at the Hotel Butterfield in the evening.

Death of Wisconsin Bankers

W. E. Kellogg, cashier of the Kellogg National Bank of Green Bay, one of the oldest financial institutions in the state, died suddenly on Monday of apoplexy, following his return from a visit to his son and daughter at the state university at Madison. Mr. Kellogg was sixty years old, and had been engaged in the banking business since boyhood. He had nearly completed his twentieth year as cashier of the Kellogg National.

Another pioneer Wisconsin banker, Major Joseph Stannard Baker, died this week at his home in St. Croix Falls, at the age of seventy-four years. At the opening of the Civil War, Mr. Baker received an appointment to the United States secret service, and engaged in work which brought him often into close personal relations with President Lincoln. When the First District of Columbia Cavalry was organized he was appointed captain. He soon became major, and during the last two years of the war was in active command of the regiment. Major Baker came to Wisconsin and located at St. Croix Falls in 1874, representing the land interests in northern Wisconsin of Caleb Cushing and General Benjamin F. Butler. He retired from active business interests several years ago.

GUARANTY CLUB'S SECOND ANNUAL OUTING

The second annual outing of the Guaranty Club, composed of the officers and employees of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, was held Saturday, last, at Terra Marine Inn, Staten Island. A baseball game between the main office and the Fifth Avenue branch of the company resulted in a victory for the latter by a score of 6 to 4. A tennis tournament, running matches, relay races, and concluding with an elaborate dinner at the Inn, constituted the day's program. Charles H. Sabin, vice-president of the company, before presenting the prizes to the successful contestants in the various athletic events, took occasion in a brief speech to emphasize the fact of the remarkable growth in deposits of over $40,000,000 during the past year.

GROUP 6, INDIANA, MEETS AT RISING SUN

The annual meeting of Group 6 was held at Rising Sun, Indiana, Wednesday, May 22d. A reception committee of Rising Sun bankers met the delegates and visitors to the meeting at Aurora with automobiles and fast river boats, and conveyed the party to Rising Sun.

After a delightful ride of eight miles the meeting was called to order in Clark's Opera House, Rising Sun. An interesting session was held, after which dinner was served to a company in excess of two hundred. Fresh fish predominated. The meal was served by twenty charming young ladies of Rising Sun and was very much enjoyed by those present. An orchestra furnished music during the dinner.

At two o'clock the business of the group was resumed, consisting of a very interesting and well received address by Prof. J. H. Skinner of Purdue University. Dick Miller of Indianapolis also made a most pleasing address, and upon this occasion became quite serious in regard to the matter of some salesmen going over Indiana "hoodwinking" widows and innocent persons into buying "Blue Sky" instead of investing their money in well established and fully protected bonds of good organizations.

The following were chosen for group officers for the ensuing year: Chairman, Frank Griffith of Columbus; secretary, J. W. Johnson of Patriot; member of nominating committee, Lucian Harris of Rising Sun.

St. Louis

—Special correspondence concerning also

St. Louis, May 29.—Continued quietness marked the St. Louis monetary situation during the past week. In certain quarters disappointment is expressed at the failure of mercantile demands to pick up, for it had been anticipated that ere this general business would be well on its way back to normal. Elsewhere, however, there is not a single note of pessimism though all agree that things are ultra quiet. The more hopeful say that things are not really bad, and that, all considered, business is quite as good as could be expected. Then the optimistic ones point out the strong position of western banks, and the solidity of the country at large. Just now the chief factor is the crop prospect, and it can be said that during the last two weeks things in that direction have looked up considerably. Outside of the "crop killer" reports of threatened drought in Nebraska and Kansas, wheat indications are immensely better than on May 1st, when the government report was published. Reports at hand from a widely scattered area of the winter belt indicate that the June 1st conditions will show at least 3 points over that of May 1st. Under favorable weather conditions the planting of corn has been pushed night and day, and there is little doubt that an enormous increase in acreage over 1911 will be shown. It is true that a portion of the increase will be at the expense of wheat, but it is fortunate that the wheat damage came early, so the abandoned land can be used for other crops. In this region, and far to the south, prospects for fruits and the small crops are smiling and delightful. The yield will be enormously under that of the preceding year, and even commission dealers predict a reduction in the high cost of living, in so far as fruits and vegetables are concerned. Merchants, however, are continuing to follow the hand to mouth policy of the past weary months. The spurt of expansion of some weeks ago was checked by the political uncertainty. This, it is believed, will be a detrimental factor until after the conventions at least, and the most distant future is in a large measure contingent upon the results of the great national gatherings. Meanwhile, the banks are doing a fair routine business, and clearings continue to run way out over those of a year ago. Deposits are seasonably heavy, with country balances showing curtailment.

Bankers Day in Country

The laity has been wondering what great secret or plot was hatching financially when bankers from all sections of the country gathered at the picnic of the St. Louis Bankers Club. It was hard for the ordinary man to understand such a thing as leading financiers getting together simply to have a day's sport and fresh air. However, on the very best authority there was nothing to the meeting other than to have a holiday and get acquainted, and in that object the affair was certainly a grand success. Men acted like boys, and did about everything except play leap frog. The visitors were to a man delighted with their entertainment, and many of the Easterners, who had never been to St. Louis before, were surprised at the looks of the city and the extent and beauty of its residence district. The feature of the day was the barbecue, which was under the able direction of Lon C. Hill, an Indian chief, and one of the richest bankers of southern Texas. There were two yearling steers, eight sheep, three calves and eight hogs roasted, and roasted to a turn. After the golf, fishing, boating, shooting, tennis, rambling and talking of the morning appetites were abnormal, and the bankers fell upon this meat and devoured it with more zest than they would accept new accounts for their several banks.

Among Those Present

Excepting conventions of the American Bankers Association, there has never been a more notable gathering of financiers in St. Louis. Representatives of some of the most powerful banking institutions in the East were guests, including J. S. Alexander, president of the National Bank of Commerce, New York; George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National, Chicago; J. B. Forgan, president First National, Chicago, and F. O. Watts, president of the First National, Nashville. Other bankers who were enthusiastic about the picnic were: New York—F. W. Allen, vice-president Mechanics and Metal National; J. B. Martindale, president Chemical National; D. E. Pomeroy, vice-president Bankers Trust; Charles H. Sabin, vice-president Guaranty Trust; Joseph T. Talbert, vice-president National City Bank; Clark Williams, president Windsor Trust, and William Woodward, president Hanover National, Boston—Albert A. Jackson, vice-president Girard Trust; William A. Law, vice-president First National; J. R. McAllister, president Franklin National; L. L. Rue, president Philadelphia National; E. F. Shanbaker, president Fourth Street National. Chicago—Ralph Van Vechten, vice-president Continental and Commercial National; W. T. Fenton, vice-president National Bank of the Republic; L. A. Goddard, president State Bank of Chicago; J. F. Farrell, vice-president Dearborn National; James B. McDougal, examiner for Chicago clearing house banks. Besides there was a strong representation from Philadelphia, Baltimore and smaller cities in the West and Southwest. All told, about 150 guests were entertained.

Bank Clerks Name Board

The board of management of the Bank Clerks Association of Missouri, which will serve during the ensuing year, was elected at the meeting this week as follows: J. F. Ash-off, Hugo Boehl, W. H. Bramman, H. J. Brenner, F. Falkenheiner, H. Haill, H. S. Rein, J. H. Ruenheck, P. D. C. Walsh, George M. Willing, F. W. Wrieden. The meeting was held at the State National.

Kelton White Promoted.

Kelton E. White has been elected treasurer of the Little & Hays Investment Company, to succeed Birney Dysart, who has formed a connection with a Poplar Bluff, Missouri, commercial concern. Mr. White has been connected with the investment company for about twelve years.

Abner Davis on Trial

Some interesting points are being developed in the trial of Abner Davis, now being conducted in Oklahoma City. Davis is being prosecuted in the federal court for alleged misuse of funds. Clarence Owen, an employee of the banking department, testified that the Oklahoma State Banking Board held approximately $800,000 of promissory notes indorsed by I. M. Putnam, Oklahoma's wizard real estate promoter, when Putnam qualified as bondsman for Davis, former president of the Night and Day Bank. Owen declared that he was unable to realize anything on the Putnam paper, which became the property of the state when the guaranty law was invoked to liquidate the Columbia Bank and Trust Company, the Planters and Merchants Bank and the Night and Day Bank.

The Fairfield State Bank of Fairfield, Free-stone County, Texas, has been organized with a capital stock of $150,000. The incorporators are F. E. Hill, W. N. Sneed, T. J. Hall and others.

ACTUAL value received from their connection with us has increased our accounts from other banks 50% in two years. We therefore invite the business of others with the assurance of mutual satisfaction.

GROUP 7, INDIANA

Group 7 of the Indiana Bankers Association held a very successful meeting at New Albany, Thursday, May 16th. About 75 bankers of southern Indiana were in attendance. Luncheon was served to the visiting bankers at the "Tavern" Hotel, after which the company adjourned to the handsome directors' room of the second National, where the meeting was called to order by J. C. Zulauf, chairman of the group. An address of welcome was delivered by the Hon. Chas. D. Kelso. Dick Miller of Indianapolis gave a very interesting talk on "The Banker and the Business Community," which was greatly enjoyed. Mr. Miller is quite an orator, and, having the comic side of his disposition largely developed, he kept the meeting convulsed with laughter at his funny stories. Prof. John H. Skinner of Purdue University gave a most instructive talk on "Co-operation Between the Banker and the Farmer," and "What Purdue University is Doing that will Help the Farmer." Senator Stotsenburg spoke on the subject of "Legislative Needs of the Banks for Increased Efficiency from the Standpoint of the Public." Several interesting questions were then discussed informally, closing a meeting that was very interesting and instructive.

ADOPT GROUP SYSTEM

At the nineteenth annual convention of the Saving Banks Association of the State of New York, held last week, the principal business transacted was the adoption of amendments to the constitution and by-laws dividing the association into five groups, each group representing a particular geographical section of the state.

TENNESSEE BANKERS AT KNOXVILLE

Knoxville, Tenn., May 29, 1912.—The twenty-second annual convention of the Tennessee Bankers Association was called to order yesterday morning in this city by President Wesley Drane. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Samuel E. Hill, representing the mayor of Knoxville, and by H. T. Ault, president of the Knoxville Clearing House. The response was made by Frank K. Houston of the First National at Nashville. President Drane then delivered his annual address, which was very interesting and which will be found printed elsewhere in this edition of THE CHICAGO BANKER. Hon. L. P. Padgett, member of Congress, and a member of the national monetary commission, addressed the convention on Tuesday. Secretary F. M. Mayfield made his report and the session closed with reports of committees. The afternoon session on Tuesday was devoted to a meeting of the state banks section of which L. T. Ward of Collierville was president and J. P. Wood of Woodbury was secretary. This section had J. N. Dolley of Kansas speak on his famous "Blue-Sky" law and W. A. Sadd of Chattanooga on legislative conditions in the state. The Wednesday morning session was called to order at 9 o'clock and heard the report of J. N. Fisher of the executive council and president of the City National at Morristown. V. I. Witherspoon reported for the protective committee. Mr. Witherspoon is vice-president of the Union Trust Company at Nashville. The principal address at this session was "The Banker and his Relation to the Public Welfare" by B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association. A general discussion closed the speaking part of the program, and was devoted to the general subject of whether or not banks other than savings should pay interest on deposits. Following the usual committee reports the new officers were inaugurated.

Secretary S. B. Raskin of the Ohio Bankers Association announces that Group 6 will hold their annual meeting at Ashland on June 11th. Group 7 will meet at Bellaire on June 13th.

Editorial Comment

WHAT IS A BANK?

President William Livingstone of the American Bankers Association in his splendid address before the Topeka convention called attention to the many advantages of becoming members of the association, and urged them to increase their membership, which would inure largely to their own benefit. He told them that they were the fourth state in number of members, which was highly appreciated, but that there still were large numbers who were not members and whom the association would be glad to welcome as such. He spoke eloquently to the younger bankers at the close of his address. He called their attention to the fact that there is no royal road to success; that persistent hard work is what insured success; that the motto of their state, one of the best in the Union, they should always keep in mind, "Through difficulties to the stars."

Perhaps the most interesting part of President Livingstone's talk was his definition of a bank. He defined it as "the most important factor in any community. Without it, development is practically an impossibility. It is a strong argument of even the private banker that without his aid, the new and struggling town would simply remain 'four corners.' A bank, say of the early seventies, the individualistic period, might be likened to a cistern, in the public square, which gathers in the waters of the neighboring roofs, and pays them out again for the common need—generally sufficient, but often running dry.

"A better bank, say at the close of the century, when the co-operative clearing house idea had come to our aid, might be likened to a bountiful well, storing up the waters of the surrounding hills for the collective use, and rarely failing to fulfill its function.

"The best bank—the bank of say next year—the bank under the beneficent operation of a monetary reform bill, could be likened to the artesian well, driven deep into the underlying reservoirs fed from the mountains and valleys of an empire, which never fails to pour forth its life-giving stream.

"It is the agency by which the resources of the community are husbanded and used for the benefit of that community. It is likewise the agency by which the resources of the richer sections are conveyed to the community where they can use them to its advantage as well as with profit to the owner.

"It is the natural hub around which all industries must revolve, the source of lubrication, the vital power—not the crushing, destroying one that some people would have you believe."

It isn't likely that a better allegory of the really strong, serviceable bank will be given out this year. The illustrations are new, and the ideas of high standard.

PREPARING A BANKING LAW

It has been customary in preparing a banking law to put the final draft off until almost the very last moment. Difficulty in reaching a final agreement by committees and by representatives of state associations may be said to be the chief contributing cause. This was the situation when California went about her preparation for a new statute, which in many respects is a model upon which other states might fashion their new banking legislation. Unfortunately, however, while the intentions were the very best, the phraseology in some respects has been too drastic for enforcement. There are provisions in the present law which are too restrictive, and which the Long Beach convention took steps to have corrected before the matter shall pass through any of the courts or be subjected to a decision of the present admirable superintendent of banking. The legislative committee of the California association has many distinguished members, including J. F. Sartori, James K. Lynch, I. W. Hellman, Jr., J. H. Henderson, and John S. Drum. This committee reported to the convention that under Section 33 of the banking act a stockholder of a borrowing corporation is, from his stockholder's liability, an obligor to the bank, and that therefore no stockholder of a borrowing corporation can act as a director of the bank. It was understood generally at Long Beach that the superintendent of banks intends to enforce this interpretation, wherever it becomes apparent that such stockholder's liability exists. Unless the matter is "called to his attention" probably it will rest until the next California legislature can amend the act. Under the banking act a director of a bank, who is a stockholder of a corporation, is subject to a jail sentence in case the managing officers of the corporation borrow from the bank in which he is a director, even though it be without his knowledge. If enforced, this provision practically will put every commercial state bank out of existence or force it to become a national bank. There is no desire to have a test case, for the phraseology of Section 33 seems to be capable of only one interpretation, and that is the one put upon it by the superintendent of banking. Superintendent Williams has indicated that it is his desire to co-operate with the committee, and to bring about a modification of several provisions in the act.

This California situation will serve as a reminder to committees engaged in the preparation of banking legislation in other states. All such drafts should be subjected to the closest scrutiny by competent bankers and bank attorneys before being placed upon the statute books.

WISCONSIN AN AMERICAN STATE

Political thinkers have been more pessimistic about the state than they have about the nation or even the city. There seemed to be no place for the American commonwealth. It was a kind of political vermiform appendix. Men hear the annual sessions of the legislature as they do the plague. They are biennial scenes of inefficiency, if not corruption. Some students have even suggested there was no place for the American state in our political system.

"Wisconsin, an Experiment in Democracy," by Frederic C. Howe, is a discovery of an American state that is justifying itself. Here he finds a commonwealth consciously building for efficiency and service, much as Denmark, Switzerland and Germany are being built for the service of the people. The foundations of this movement were laid by Senator La Follette in his eight years' war with privilege. Through the primary the people secured political freedom. Then they began to build. They adopted the second choice for nominees, the senatorial and presidential primary. Once politically free, the state began to build in an intelligent way. Its railway regulation laws have been the model of other states. Local franchise corporations have been controlled in a scientific manner. They no longer rule the state or the cities. There is no more corruption. A comprehensive program of labor legislation, fairly comparable to that which Germany has spent twenty-five years in developing, has been perfected. A legislative reference bureau is a bill-drafting agency. A state board of public works has supervision over all the resources, agencies and activities of the state. It is a permanent survey department to make the state and cities more efficient. The university is closely linked with the state house. Thirty-five professors serve in various state departments. They bring to politics accurate scientific methods of thinking. They import into Wisconsin the best that could be found in Denmark, in Germany. They study legislation preparatory to its introduction. Wisconsin is honest, efficient and dedicated to a program of service as is no other state in The American Union. It is a model to which men are going not only from America but from other countries as well. Here is an example which negatives the despair of those who have felt there was no place for the American state. Here a commonwealth is being built by men with definite ideals of what a state can be made. And these achievements is justly proud of the record it has made in forty years of service to the public. A steady but conservative growth during this time has placed it in the first position in its territory with a capital and surplus of $5,000,000.00. of Wisconsin are based on democracy, on political freedom, first secured through the reforms inaugurated when Senator La Follette was governor.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION

If the proposition to amend the constitution by extending the presidential term to six years and making a second term illegal were to be adopted it would obviate in the future such a disgraceful campaign of villification as the public now is witnessing in the ranks of the grand old party. The contest for the republican nomination reminds one somewhat of a campaign which might be carried on between contestants for some minor position such as a precinct committeeman instead of one being waged for the highest office in the land. One extenuating circumstance about the situation, however, is the fact that practically all of the uncomplimentary remarks which have been passed have come from Mr. Roosevelt, President Taft being obliged occasionally in vindication of his self-respect to expose to the public the real truth of the matter. When Mr. Roosevelt recently was asked by one of his auditors at Lima, Ohio, to express his views concerning a third term, he was so disturbed at the suggestion that he replied: "You can't ask me any question, you foolish creature, that I can't answer." He then quoted a letter written by the father of President Taft in which were expressed his views concerning a third term for General Grant. The Colonel in his rage forgot that he once said: "The wise custom which limits the president to two terms regards the substance and not the form, and under no circumstances will I be a candidate for or accept another nomination." Mr. Roosevelt certainly is an ingenious man, for he interprets this plain language to mean "never again to seek a third successive term," notwithstanding the fact that he said "under no circumstances." He refers to his Lima friend as "foolish." Disregarding the injustice which he has done to Mr. Taft—his own choice for the presidency—the Colonel certainly has exhibited a lack of discretion and judgment in coming out at this particular time, for had he been content to wait four years more and to have given his old friend the square deal he always is talking about, no doubt he would have had easy sailing in 1916. Mr. Roosevelt has stated that he is able to answer any question which may be propounded. No doubt he can, but he does not always deem it expedient to do so. The people still are waiting for an intelligent answer to the third-term question, and are curious to know the sources from which the fabulous sums of money already expended in his behalf have been derived. They also would like to be apprised of how much the beef trust, the sugar trust, the steel trust and other great combinations contributed to his campaign fund in 1904. One cannot help thinking that the ex-president must have some ulterior motive in mind in again seeking the presidency. It is difficult to believe that any sane man, in the face of oft-repeated declarations to the contrary, would endeavor to secure a renomination under similar circumstances without being prompted by some consideration of which the people as a whole know nothing. It might be interesting to know whether or not such a motive really exists, or whether Mr. Roosevelt conscientiously believes himself to be such a great man that the country is unable to get along without him, and that therefore just to please the people he is sacrificing his own personal convenience and is making one of the most strenuous campaigns ever waged for an office—high or low. Will he, if elected this fall, again be a candidate in 1916? It only would be "two consecutive terms," as he could maintain, taken in two doses.

CHICAGO BANKERS RETURN FROM JOPLIN AND TOPEKA

Bankers from Chicago who attended the conventions of the Missouri and Kansas bankers are unanimous in the opinion that both conventions were a great success. J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn, states that the Kansas convention was particularly well attended, being the largest meeting held in the history of the state organization. Both meetings were unqualified successes.

R. F. Newhall, assistant cashier of the First National, stated: "Although the Missouri convention was very well attended, it is not believed that the attendance was quite as large as in former years, the registration being a little less. The sessions were very interesting. Chicago, St. Louis and other banks were well represented by the visitors present. The Kansas convention was the largest in the history of the organization, something more than 1,300 being present. There was a large attendance of bankers from Chicago, New York, Kansas City and St. Joe. William J. Burns, head of the Burns National Detective Agency, spoke at both conventions and excited a great deal of interest by his talks."

Wilber Hattery, assistant cashier of the Continental and Commercial National, says that chiefly local matters were taken up at the conventions. Mr. Hattery is enthusiastic in his description of the outlook for business and good crops. He states that the country is looking fine. He says that the banks are pretty well loaned up.

W. G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company, returned home on Saturday in company with President B. F. Harris of the Illinois association. Both greatly enjoyed the conventions. Mr. Edens stated both the Missouri and Kansas conventions were well attended. "The program of each was well prepared. The delegates both in Kansas and Missouri were substantial, prosperous-looking bankers, and seemed to derive much pleasure from the addresses which were delivered by the gentlemen appearing on the programs. Detective Burns, who addressed the delegates at both conventions, made a very favorable impression, and President Livingstone of the American Bankers Association acquitted himself most creditably."

President J. M. Barker on Arkansas Banking Conditions

Both as your president, and as a fellow-worker, it gives me pleasure to greet you. While the past year has brought to some of us its perplexing problems, it has also brought its pleasures; and it is now with cheerful hearts that we meet together to reflect upon the work of the past year, and to discuss methods of procedure for the future. It is not necessary for me to say that I wish for the association at this time a most pleasant and profitable convention, in this our beautiful and hospitable capital city. I trust that during this the first year of our majority as the Arkansas Bankers Association we have proved ourselves to be good business men, alive not simply to our own personal interests, but to those of our state and nation.

There was a time when many of our people did not understand the nature and purpose of the banking business, but we are glad to note that the time has come when our business is better understood, and more and more appreciated. However, the relation of a bank and banker to the people in general can not be too well understood, since the better this understanding, the better will be the condition of the people and of the banking business also. Every man who contributes to this end deserves to be regarded as a patriotic citizen. For this reason we cannot be too courteous in our dealings with our customers. While the banking business is known to be one of the greatest of modern conveniences, yet there is room for improvement along some lines.

The past year has been in the main a prosperous one, our farms and fields have yielded abundantly, our industrial establishments have been well occupied. There has been a ready market for all of our products at profitable figures.

It is true that there has been some slowing down in the general business of the country, but it must not be forgotten that such "breathing spell" periods are to be expected and have their beneficial effects. If in the advocacy of equitable legislation the members of this association could be depended upon for united action, it would mean that included in that support would be their officers, directors and many of the stockholders and employees, and you can readily see that through such support they would be a power that would be bound to succeed in accomplishing any reasonable thing which they set out to attain.

Your president is strongly in favor of bank supervision in our state, and believes it to be the duty of this association to do what it can to bring it about.

Our immediate and serious attention is demanded by the matter of bills of lading. Perhaps not every man who does an unsound business along this line is intentionally dishonest; but in this get-rich-quick age not only does the public need protection from this kind of business, but a man sometimes needs protection from himself. It is therefore incumbent upon us as financiers of the state and nation to do our utmost to have enacted suitable laws controlling this matter.

Puts in a good word for his state at the Little Rock convention. Refers to rise in price of lands and improved banking conditions. Favors bank supervision for all classes of banking

The postal savings bank is attracting considerable attention in financial circles; but it is my opinion that our common banking interests will, to say the least, not be injured by this matter. Furthermore, it seems probable that a friendly attitude on our part toward this matter might further our own interests.

Your president recommends that, as far as practicable, we lend a hand toward the reclamation of the public lands of our state, the building of better roads, the further development of our agricultural and other interests, and especially the education of our people along practical business lines. We are urged

J. M. BARKER
Atkins, Arkansas
President Arkansas Bankers Association

by the American Bankers Association "to appoint a standing committee on agricultural development and education, and see to it that they attend a conference to be held in Minneapolis and St. Paul the second week in August."

A number of other things might well be mentioned before bringing this paper to a close, but I will not take your time longer than to say a word for Arkansas. According to figures (based on the report of the census bureau) sent out by Clarence J. Owens, commissioner of agriculture of the Southern Commercial Congress, the farm lands in the South have more than doubled in value in the last ten years. "According to these figures the average value of land in Arkansas in 1900 was $6.32 an acre, and in 1910 it was $14.11." Our state is attracting increasing attention abroad. She is naturally one of the greatest states in our great nation. Let us see to it that we spare no effort to place her in the very front rank where she rightfully belongs.

I see among us a number of prominent bankers from other states. I bid you a hearty welcome; the latch-string of this body hangs on the outside, and we bid you to come in, be our guests, sup with us, and share in the proceedings to your hearts' content. I wish to thank each and every banker who has been instrumental in helping to make the association work a success during the past year. You have been faithful workers, and I have had the hearty co-operation of all our members. I regret, my brother bankers, that your choice fell not upon a more worthy person to fill this honorable position, yet I trust I have done nothing to incur your unfavorable comment. I assure you my heart is full of sincere thanks for the honor you have done me.

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Local bankers have been attending so many gatherings in the surrounding country during the past week or ten days that they have returned to their desks for a pre-vacation interim filled with optimism. Everywhere they have gone they have been regaled with stories of abounding prosperity and the stories have been verified by ocular demonstration. The general sentiment is thus expressed by Wilson S. Webb of the Missouri Savings Bank, a prominent member of the Kansas Clearing House Association and a Missouri banker all his life.

"There are always a few croakers wherever you go," he remarked the other day. "But the truth is that there has never been a time in the history of the state and the whole Southwest when conditions were more encouraging than they are at this minute. It is really surprising how little the presidential campaign has disturbed business. Probably it has disturbed it more than we realize but there is so much business being done that the effect is only normal, and hardly even that. If times were really hard, we might imagine that the campaign was upsetting things. But as it is, the business world does not appear to know that the politicians are belaboring each other all about the 'ring.'"

"I have been all over the state and into other portions of the Southwest and I know of my own personal knowledge that the crop prospects were never brighter. Missouri, Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma and Nebraska business men unite in declaring that the outlook is for the most prosperous crop year those states have had for years. Wheat, cotton and corn are the great staples which the bankers of the Southwest watch most closely and there will be immense yields in these three pivotal crops.

"In the great alfalfa growing states the first crop has already been harvested and it is a 'bumper.' Three or four more crops will be harvested before the snow flies. There will be a curtailment of cotton production but prices will be higher, the production being purposely lessened in order to affect prices. Secretary Coburn of Kansas figures 93,000,000 bushels of wheat and Oklahoma is figuring on 25,000,000. These states and Nebraska will come along with huge yields of corn and other grains, besides live stock that is bringing higher and higher prices. The bankers of this part of the country have every reason for optimism."

Kansas State Bankers at Topeka

The feature of the Kansas Bankers Association convention at Topeka, May 23d and 24th, was an admirable address delivered by B. F. Harris of Champaign, Ill., president of the Illinois Bankers Association. Mr. Harris spoke on the topic: "The Banker and his Relation to the Public Welfare." His chief suggestion to the Sunflower financiers was that they should extend, in every possible manner consistent with sound banking, assistance to the farmers of their respective communities, contending that upon the prosperity of the farmer depended that of not only the banker but of all other business interests. He urged the farmers to support movements designed to instruct farmers in methods of increasing the productivity of the soil and did not indulge in the usual platitudes and encomiums upon the farmers themselves.

"The wheat crop of the whole United States is raised on 50,000,000 acres," said Mr. Harris, "and the average yield is only 13.7 bushels per acre, while in Europe on land tilled for a thousand years the yield ranges from 25 to 40 bushels. We have been capitalizing our soil fertility and not adding to its assets. One bushel per acre increase on all improved agricultural land in the United States would require a train of 12,500 cars to transport."

W. H. Miller of Ottawa, Ill., in addition to being a first class banker is a thirty-second degree good road advocate and he delivered a stirring address to the bankers on his favorite topic. At first glance one might think it was a rather far cry from bankers to country roads, but Mr. Miller easily showed how it was to the immense accruing benefit of the bankers to encourage the farmers to co-operate in good road building, thus benefiting the farmers primarily and therefore the bankers and all other classes of business.

Detective Burns was an honored guest at the convention and delivered the address which he has been giving at various bankers' conventions throughout the country. Among the leading bankers of the state in attendance were the following: Judge C. E. Lobdell, E. R. Mosers, Frank A. Moses and C. R. Aldrich of Great Bend; J. T. Irish of Sterling, J. E. Wagner of Larned, J. W. Berryman and W. C. Smith of Ashland and L. W. Fullerton of Medicine Lodge.

The following officers were elected: President, M. H. Malott of Abilene; vice-president, Willis J. Bailey of Atchison; secretary, W. W. Bowman of Topeka; treasurer, A. D. Jellison of Wilson. The following were elected vice-presidents of the various groups: First, W. J. Burr of Blue Rapids; Second, L. J. Buck of Emporia; Third, H. D. Tucker of Eureka; Fourth, M. J. Coolbaugh of Stockton; Fifth, Willis Westbrook of Peabody; Sixth, F. W. Denton of Haven.

Attend St. Louis Bankers Club

A party of leading Kansas City bankers went to St. Louis last week at the invitation of the St. Louis Bankers Club, where on Saturday, May 25th, they participated in a unique entertainment given just outside St. Louis in honor of a number of distinguished bankers from Boston, Philadelphia, and New York. They were: W. T. Kemper, Commerce Trust Company; E. F. Swinney, First National; George P. Hovey, Inter-State National; J. W. Perry, National Bank of Commerce; Wm. Huttig, National Bank of the Republic; J. T. M. Johnston, National Reserve; J. F. Downing, New England National; J. R. Dominick, Traders National; F. P. Neal, Southwest National; C. S. Jobs, Security National.

Nebraska Commercial Clubs Association

The eighth annual meeting of the Nebraska Association of Commercial Clubs was held at Hastings recently and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, V. E. Wilson, Stromsberg; secretary-treasurer, R. D. McFadden, Hastings; vice-presidents, E. H. Westcott of Plattsmouth, Penn. P. Fodrea of Omaha, James Henderson of Central City, Ed. Lemkuhl of Wahoo, Max Uhlig of Holdredge, and Willard F. Dailey of Kearney.

Early Banking History of Kansas by G. W. Martin

PART II

On January 29, 1857, the territorial legislature passed an act providing that every company or association of persons formed for banking purposes within this territory, and without an act of legislature authorizing the name, should be deemed unlawful. The first bank authorized by legislative act was that of the Kansas Valley Bank of Leavenworth, capital stock $800,000, with five branches, at Atchison, Leocompton, Doniphan, Fort Scott and Shawnee, Johnson county. Capital stock of branches, $300,000 each. The act made the branches independent of the Leavenworth bank. For the Leavenworth bank, the following men were named to take subscription to capital stock: Wm. F. Russell, A. J. Isaacs, Wm. H. Rogers, Wm. F. Dyer, F. J. Marshall and James M. Lyle. The Leavenworth bank never was formed and the Atchison branch was the first to start out under act of legislature.

Isett, Brewster & Company of Des Moines, 1857, conducted the first legitimate banking business at Leavenworth in a building erected for that purpose only, still standing in 1906. John Kerr was the company and manager. In three years Isett & Brewster sold out their interest to Lyman Scott, Sr., and the bank became Scott, Kerr & Company. Mr. Kerr sold out to the Scotts (1865-6) and moved to Texas, where he continued in banking business. Scott & Company continued until 1874, when the bank was absorbed by the First National Bank. The Scotts held the controlling interest in these banks for many years. They were Lyman, Sr., Lyman, Jr., and Lucian, who was president or cashier for over twenty-five years.

The First National Bank of Leavenworth, organized in 1863, or 1864, was also the first national bank in the state. Its history is peculiar in the personnel of its officers and directorate, and their connection with affairs of state. Thomas Carney, governor, 1863-4, was the first president and one of the organizers and directors. At a most critical time in the state's history, he advanced his private means and saved the credit of the state. He gave $1,000 for relief of the Quantrill raid victims, and made the first subscription of $5,000 to the state university. Politics, in the end got him. Robert Crozier, cashier in 1871, was district attorney, 1861, chief justice, 1864, United States senator, 1873-4, and judge of the first judicial district, 1877-93. It was May 24, 1871, while he was cashier of the bank, that he, on behalf of the bankers of Leavenworth, requested Governor Harvey to issue a proclamation declaring May 30th a day for public fast and thanksgiving, thus calling out the first proclamation for the observance of Decoration Day in this state. This letter is filed in the archives department of the State Historical Society, with a copy of the proclamation. Edmund N. Morrill, who succeeded Lucian Scott as president of the First National, was congressman from 1883-91, and governor, 1895-7, a member of the Free-State Legislature of 1858, major in the Civil War, state senator two terms, organizer of the first bank in Hiawatha, 1871 (Barnett, Morrill & Company), and was also a director of the Interstate National Bank, Kansas City, Missouri. Alexander Caldwell succeeded Governor Morrill as president in 1897. He had been a banker in Pennsylvania, came to Leavenworth in 1861, where he organized the firm of A. Caldwell & Company, United States transportation contractors. This firm did an immense business freighting government supplies to the frontier forts, requiring the use of 5,000 wagons, 50,000 animals and the employment of from 5,000 to 10,000 men. Mr. Caldwell was president or vice-president of two railroads, a builder of railroads and bridges, head of the Kansas Manufacturing Company and of the Idaho and Oregon Improvement Company for location of towns, canals and irrigating ditches.

The First National Bank absorbed the bank of Insley, Shire & Company. This was a private bank, organized in 1872 by M. H. Insley, Daniel Shire and E. F. Kellogg. In 1875 Mr. Kellogg retired and W. H. Carson became cashier. After the death of Mr. Insley the bank merged into the First National. The First National absorbed the German Bank also.

It is interesting to note that one of the early business men of Leavenworth, John F. Richards, an officer and stockholder in the German Bank, was quoted a few weeks ago in the Kansas City papers as the owner of $525,000 in stock in a Kansas City bank, and that his stock is to-day worth six times its face value, and twenty-four times its original cost twenty-five years ago. Mr. Richards established in Leavenworth the largest wholesale hardware house west of St. Louis in 1856 and at a later date the great wholesale house in Kansas City of Richards, Conover & Company.

The bank of Clark, Gruber & Company maintained a branch in Denver, and at one time M. E. Clark, who was in charge from 1860 to 1863, established a private mint for coining gold, which was the nucleus of the present mint in that city.

There is much of interesting detail that must be passed over. Burke's History of Leavenworth made the following summing up to the year 1880: "As a money center and a base of supplies for the West and Southwest, the financial importance of Leavenworth during the war and for years after excelled that of most cities five times its population." Between the close of the Civil War and the panic of 1873 there were eight banks, representing a total capital of about $800,000. In 1880 only three banks had survived that panic, the drouth and failure of crops and the grasshopper scourge. They were the First National, the German Bank, and Insley, Shire & Company (now all absorbed in the First National), and the total capital was $350,000.

The banking interests at Atchison had a commencement under equally interesting circumstances as had those of Leavenworth, because of the character of those engaged, and the great enterprises associated with banking. The Atchison Branch of the Kansas Valley Bank was the first one in the state to form under legislative act, being authorized February 19, 1857, with a capital stock of $300,000, securities $100,000. In the act, John H. Stringfellow, Joseph Plean and Samuel Dickson were named to open subscription books. An organization was effected early in the spring of 1858 and the capital stock fixed at $52,000. The board of directors included S. C. Pomeroy, president; W. H. Russell, L. R. Smoot, W. B. Waddell, F. G. Adams, S. Dickson and W. E. Gaylord. In denial of the statement made by rival towns, Sumner and Doniphan, that the bank was about to suspend, the directors published a statement of its condition soon after starting, showing that the assets were $36,638, liabilities $20,118. The archives department of the historical society possesses three documents dated July 14th and August 3, 1857, concerning the appointment of L. S. Boling of Leocompton to examine and report on the affairs of the Atchison branch of the Kansas Valley Bank, the first proceeding of the kind in Kansas.

S. C. Pomeroy resigned as president before the year 1858 was ended. He was United States senator from 1861 to 1873 and worked for and secured the passage of every land grant made to a Kansas railroad during his

"Everything that we saw or heard relative to the crops is favorable," says P. G. Leeman, assistant cashier of the Minneapolis First National, returning from the meetings of the first and third district bankers. "There is no question," he said, "that if there is reasonably good weather there will be bountiful harvests this fall."

Overhauling of the banking room in the Lumber Exchange, formerly the home of the Minnesota National, has begun in expectation of leasing the place to a proposed new national bank. The plan is made for extending the bank room out to the street. It is now in the center of the building, with no outside exit except through the office building lobby.

Group 1 Elects Officers

First district bankers at Rochester, Minn., elected officers as follows: President, A. E. Johnson, Blooming Prairie; vice-president, R. D. Sprague, Caledonia; secretary, E. F. Cook, Rochester; executive committee, Arthur Kennedy, Plainview, and Lyle Hamlin, Spring Valley.

Group 2 Holds Meeting at Worthington

One hundred and thirty bankers attended the tenth annual meeting of the second group of Minnesota bankers at Worthington. They elected as officers: President, W. A. Streator, Winnebago; vice-president, E. C. Hauge, New Ulm; secretary, J. B. Ludlow, Rushmore; executive committee, Judge Lorin Gray, Mankato, and M. S. Dorsett, Madelia. W. D. Willard, Mankato, chairman of the committee on registered commercial paper, reported time was not ripe for putting the move into effect. W. A. Streator showed the great gain in district development and the need for more. T. G. Bonnellie, Tracy, president of the Southern Minnesota Better Development League, told what the league's needs and hopes to accomplish. Professor H. C. Solberg, Brookings College, discussed "Practical Road Construction." W. D. Willard spoke on "Present Status of Monetary Reform Measures." Colonel J. A. Towne conducted the legal question box. The resolutions endorsed the Southern Minnesota Development League and the state-wide roads movement. Other endorsements were the "Reserve Association of America," "Uniform Negotiable Instrument" law, registration of commercial paper.

Northwestern Trust, St. Paul

The Northwestern Trust Company, St. Paul, is constructing a steel and concrete ceiling to its big vault, to prevent anything heavy dropping through. The change was suggested by D. C. Shepard after the Equitable fire in New York, when valuable records were lost in that manner. Steel I-beams are being placed twenty inches apart and the interstices filled with concrete, then four inches of concrete is placed on top.

Outlook Encouraging

The agricultural outlook as a whole is fine in Minneapolis territory and should be encouraging to business men, says C. L. Grandin, vice-president of the Scandinavian-American National Bank. He says southern Minnesota is blooming like a garden and has the finest crop prospect for years. Indications from the Grandin farm in North Dakota is that the state will have a big crop of all grains.

Banking Notes

C. T. Jaffray, vice-president of the First National, Minneapolis, and Mrs. Jaffray leave next week for New Haven to see their son graduate from Yale, and will sail June 22d to be abroad until fall.

Bonds of Minneapolis amounting to $365,586 were sold to Minneapolis institutions. The Minnesota Loan and Trust Company took $200,000 for $193,858 and $155,000 more at par. C. B. Eenkema bought $10,588 special 4½ bonds at $10 premium. The Wells & Dickey Company protested the sale of hospital bonds and it is to be settled by the city council.

SPEAKERS AT MICHIGAN CONVENTION

At the annual convention of the Michigan Bankers Association, to be held June 11th to 13th at Kalamazoo, addresses will be made by the following: President J. L. Snyder, Agricultural College, Lansing, Mich.; President D. B. Waldo, Normal College, Kalamazoo; Geo. E. Allen, New York; L. L. Wright, Superintendent Public Instruction for Michigan; Prof. Edward D. LITTLE ROCK CONVENTION

Little Rock, Ark., May 29.—The twenty-second annual convention of the Arkansas Bankers Association has just concluded a two-days session in this city. President J. N. Barker delivered his annual address after calling the convention to order at the Hotel Marion. There was a large registration of delegates and many ladies and guests of the association were present. The railroads centering at Little Rock granted a round-trip for a fare and one-third, which helped to increase the attendance beyond the usual. George W. Rogers, member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association, was chairman of the program committee, and chief among the speakers present was Sol. Wexler, vice-president of the Whitney-Central National Bank of New Orleans, who talked on "The Bill of Lading as Bankable Security"; and J. Howard Avery of the City National at Dallas, who spoke on the subject of "Is the Trouble with our Currency or with our Credits?" Judge E. L. Boyce of Newport discussed the subject of married women's rights in the matter of making contracts and John F. Sims of Texarkana advocated the amendment of the state depository law. Hon. Clay E. Sloan, state commissioner of agriculture, told the bankers how they can help the farmers. The visitors were welcomed on Tuesday morning by John W. Blackwood of Little Rock and the response was made by H. D. Palmer of Star City.

The annual banquet of the association was the main feature of the entertainment provided by the Little Rock Clearing House Association. This was held on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the banquet hall of the Marion.

Especial preparations were made for the entertainment of the lady guests. Earlier in the afternoon the ladies were tendered an automobile ride to the country club, and on the second afternoon they were taken for a drive through the city of Little Rock. On Wednesday evening a smoker was given at the Hotel Marion, at which there were informal addresses upon banking and other subjects conducive to a general good time.

INDIANA GROUP MEETINGS

Group 3, Indiana, will hold its meeting on Friday, June 14th, on the farm of A. G. Lupton, near Hartford City, Ind. Mr. Lupton formerly was president of the Indiana Bankers Association, and conducts successfully large farming operations, including the care of several hundred head of Shetland ponies. His exhibits at the Indiana county fairs always secure blue ribbons. It is understood that a good program will be furnished. W. G. Edens of Chicago is billed to give an address touching upon agricultural subjects. Group 5 met at Rockville on May 28th. The subject of co-operation between the banker and the farmer was treated by G. T. Christy of Purdue University. The subject of good roads also was discussed. Group 8 will meet at Princeton on June 7th.

Twenty-sixth in size, St. Paul is fourth in the list of postal bank deposits, with net deposits of $426,092.90 on hand and a gross deposit since establishment of $546,941. W. L. Clark of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company and secretary of Northeast Group No. 2 reports that one hundred bankers of Spokane and nearby towns will attend the annual convention of the Washington State Bankers Association at Tacoma and Olympia June 27th to 29th, the party leaving Spokane the night of June 26th in special cars. Local banks also will be represented at the annual convention of the Idaho State Association at Coeur d'Alene, 134 miles east of Spokane, June 17th, 18th and 19th. All the Spokane banks will send delegations and will entertain the southern Idaho bankers as they pass through Spokane on the way to the convention.

Union Securities Company of Spokane has acquired the controlling interest in the Colfax State Bank at Colfax, Wash. The company now controls 34 banks in the Inland Empire. D. W. Twohy, president of the Union Securities Company and the Old National Bank of Spokane, says there will be no changes in the management. J. A. Perkins, who organized the bank, retains 45 shares of the stock.

J. P. M. Richards, president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, who was painfully injured by his riding horse falling upon him, recently, is much improved and may be out in a few weeks. H. M. Richards, brother of the injured man, is also confined to his home by serious illness.

Complimentary to bankers of Seattle who are coming to Spokane to play baseball, a dancing party is being arranged by the local bankers. The affair will be given the night of June 22d, in the Hall of the Doges. Invitations will be issued to the officers and employees of the local banks.

Spokane Clearing House Association, of which Samuel Galland of the Northwest Loan and Trust Company is president, will entertain its members and their families at a picnic late in June or early in July. The features will be baseball, races and aquatic and field sports.

Sixty-five postal savings depositories in the state of Washington report total deposits of $640,000. There are 6,000 depositors. Since the opening of postal savings banks in Washington 7,800 accounts have been opened and more than 18,000 deposits made, or an average of over two deposits to each depositor, and 5,500 withdrawals, or an average of less than one to each depositor. Compared with other states, Washington ranks ninth in number of accounts remaining open January 31st, and sixth in total amount remaining on deposit.

Four banks at Colfax, Wash., report total deposits of $1,778,666, with $715,703 in cash on hand and loans and discounts amounting to $1,712,484. Farmers State Bank heads the list in deposits, with $712,959, of which $350,000 is in Whitman county funds. The bank is also the depository of the city government.

WASHINGTON AT TACOMA AND OLYMPIA

Invitations for the Tacoma-Olympia convention of the Washington bankers, June 27-8-9, have been sent out by Secretary P. C. Kauffman. Charles A. McLean of Spokane is the president.

NEW NATIONAL BANK IN PASADENA, CALIFORNIA

A new financial institution, the Security National Bank, capital $100,000, undivided profits $10,000, has recently been opened for business in Pasadena Cal.

This very attractive city has continued to show a marked increase in population, having now about 35,000 inhabitants, and during the past year the local banking institutions show an increase of about $2,000,000 in deposits, showing a total under the call of April 18th of $13,000,000.

There is every reason for this new bank to have a successful career, as the board is composed of substantial business men, and the officers have all had banking experience of from six to twenty years.

The officers and directors are as follows: Ernest H. May, president; Harrison I. Drummond, vice-president; N. E. Macbeth, cashier; Ernest C. May, assistant cashier; E. B. Blinn, James N. Burnes, Elmer I. Moody, Henry Sherry and Peter Orban.

The bank will transact a regular commercial banking business and in addition will operate a large safe deposit and storage department for the benefit of its patrons.

The Kingston Exchange Bank of Kingston, Mo., opened for business recently. The new institution has $10,000 capital and its officers are: President, B. F. Brown; vice-president, W. C. Paul; cashier, Q. T. Jones.

Seattle

George Gund, who has been connected with the Seattle National for the past three years, becomes vice-president on June 1st of Henry Broderick, Inc., one of the largest realty, rentals, mortgage loans, bonds and insurance companies in the Pacific Northwest.

Mr. Gund graduated from Harvard University in 1909, where his journalistic work and his efforts in organizing the Western Club which each year aids hundreds of western men upon their entrance to the university, brought him much merited prominence. He has earned his way into the wider field of Seattle business circles by a magnetic personality and marked executive ability. Mr. Gund is secretary and treasurer of the Seattle Harvard Club and is a member of the University and Seattle Golf and Country clubs.

of high class crooks descended upon the Oklahoma bankers convention at Tulsa last week and relieved several distinguished visitors of their wallets. The local police with the assistance of Manager Tobie of the K. C. branch of the Burns agency arrested three of the light-fingered gentry, one of whom is alleged to be the notorious "Red" Hines, one of the most celebrated pickpockets in the country. Just why they singled out the Oklahoma financiers as "easy" is not quite clear and the victims are being quite generally "jollied" as a consequence.

Join Anti-Horse Thief Association

The Kansas bankers have affiliated themselves with the Anti-Horse Thief Association in nearly every county in the state and are co-operating with the enemies of horse thieves in every way possible. Invitations were sent to all the members of the A. H. T. A. to attend the recent state convention at Topeka and hear the address of William J. Burns.

Missouri Bank Deposits

Considerable comment was made recently when the people of France subscribed $3,280,000 to an issue of French bonds. It was regarded as something phenomenal that the people of the French nation should thus demonstrate their ability to produce instantly this huge sum in "spot cash." It must be remembered that this great sum was subscribed by people whose incomes did not exceed $2,500 a year, in the very great majority of instances.

At the recent meeting of the Missouri State Bankers Association Secretary Keyser showed that there was on deposit in the banks of this state almost twice the amount subscribed to the French loan—to be exact, $6,154,334.987.91.

Withdraws Offer

W. A. Wilson of Kansas City, president of the defunct Citizens and Farmers State Bank of Arkansas City, has grown tired of waiting for the Kansas bank commissioners to accept his offer of $14,800 in settlement of the claims of depositors and has withdrawn the offer. This amount, while it would not have covered the entire loss, yet with the amount the other members of the directory have announced they were willing to pay would have caused the depositors to lose nothing. The depositors have already received 92 per cent of their claims.

first term. In 1860-1 he was agent of the Kansas relief committee for the receiving and distributing of funds and supplies furnished by eastern states. G. H. Fairchild was the treasurer of the committee and the cash receipts from October 1, 1860, to March 15, 1861, were $83,869.52. Mr. Pomeroy was succeeded as president of the Atchison branch of the Kansas Valley Bank by William H. Russell of the contracting firms of A. Majors & Company and Smoot, Russell & Company. In 1861 this bank, then called the Kansas Valley Bank, had its name changed by the legislature to the Bank of the State of Kansas. William H. Russell resided at Leavenworth and was in 1856 the treasurer of the executive committee to raise funds to make Kansas a slave state. The Bank of the State of Kansas continued until 1866, when the stockholders wound up their affairs. Mr. Russell lost heavily in his Overland Pony Express Company and the California Pike's Peak Stage Company. Ben Holliday of Missouri and New York securing control of the latter. It was said that he received $500,000 a year for carrying U. S. mail between Atchison and Salt Lake and sold the stage line to Wells-Fargo for $1,800,000. Atchison had an enormous business in those days, derived from the trade of the West, being the starting point of the stage line, the Butterfield Overland Dispatch and the Parallel road to the "Kansas" gold mines near Pike's Peak.

I have always believed that Samuel C. Pomeroy was a greatly wronged man. George W. Glick, a democrat, was a very warm friend to Pomeroy, and he always expressed great indignation when he heard "Old Pom." as we all called him, abused about the aid business. He witnessed Pomeroy several times divide out aid as it came, and made mention of the abuse heaped on him by the beggars when he could not meet their demands for a wagon load each, when he had but a wagon load to divide. Pomeroy's fall was the result of a conspiracy, and not because of general bribery. Dave Butterfield was a saw mill hand at Junction City. He left his wife there to hustle for herself, which she did by sewing. She made some shirts for me. After a year or so, Butterfield turned up on Wall Street, where he raised $6,000,000 to stock the Butterfield Overland Dispatch, to the amazement of all his old associates. The coaches, mules and equipment were the most extravagant. He was killed at Fort Smith by a street car employee with whom he quarreled.

The Exchange National Bank of Atchison, the oldest banking institution in Atchison, was established in 1859 as Hetherington's Exchange Bank. Its founder was William Hetherington. Save for one year during the war, its doors have been open daily. Repeated attempts to plunder it then induced Mr. Hetherington to close out his business and wait for better times. In 1869 it was removed to the fine building on the corner of Fourth and Commercial, erected by Mr. Hetherington for the express uses of banking business. In 1876 Mr. Hetherington admitted his son, Webster W. Hetherington, who had been for a long time a clerk in the bank, to a partnership, and in 1881 another son, Clifford S. Hetherington, became associated in the business. "The Exchange Bank of William Hetherington & Co." was changed to the "Exchange National Bank of Atchison," August 1, 1882. The formal change was made July 21; the incorporators deposited with the comptroller of the currency $100,000 in government bonds, and completed the steps required by law; but the bank did not commence business until August 1st. The directors were William Hetherington, Webster W. Hetherington, B. P. Waggener, Frank Bier and J. S. Galbraith. Ex-Governor W. J. Bailey is now a vice-president of this bank.

Luther Challis appears as banker in directories of 1859-1861, corner of Second and Commercial streets. In 1855 he had a big trade with Mormon emigrants and various Indian tribes. He was a member of the territorial council, 1858, of the free state council, 1859-60, and later state senator. He framed the bill that authorized the construction of the central branch of the Missouri Pacific, being a president of that road, and also a director and stockholder of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe. In 1862 he began to operate in Wail Street and in 1864 had removed there, where it is said he had on deposit $960,000. He returned to Atchison in 1878 to save the remnants of his fortune. He fought more than the bulls and bears in New York, where he successfully defeated a blackmailing scheme of the notorious Woodhull and Claflin, Train and others. He died a poor man.

Of the banks of Topeka, Guilford Dudley in 1857 advertised a brokerage business, and again in 1859 he made a showing as a broker. In May, 1864, F. W. Gilels obtained a government license to do a banking business. In 1872 the Topeka National was organized. August 23, 1866, the Kansas Valley National Bank was organized; this bank failed in 1873; it was known as Dan Adam's bank. The Leavenworth Commercial once said: "The state funds are in Dan Adam's keeping and are now invested in cattle." It was the same kind of a cattle story that forced the impeachment and resignation of State Treasurer Hayes. January 1, 1869, John R. Mulvane began his wonderful career as a banker in Topeka as cashier of the Topeka Bank and Savings Institution. To follow these details down to date for the entire state would make a book; the only purpose of this paper must be to save the beginnings.

In the spring of 1859 there was a bank organized at Lawrence, under the territorial laws, after the free state party had control, and was called the Lawrence Bank. Its circulation was redeemed in coin. S. W. Eldridge, James Blood, Governor Robinson and Robert Morrow were directors. After we became a state, the bank was reorganized under the state laws

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

Des Moines, May 29.—If reports which reach Secretary P. W. Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association are any criterion, the convention at Cedar Rapids next week will be the most largely attended in many years. Rooms at the Cedar Rapids hotels have long been engaged and arrangements have been made to take care of the overflow at the residences of the city. At the recent republican state convention in Cedar Rapids the homes of the people were thrown open and hundreds of visitors were entertained, in many instances free of charge. The program this year will be of especial merit and the plans for entertainment aside from the routine of the convention are attractive and promise many good things. The contest for location of the next convention will be one of the interesting features. Des Moines bankers are going in a special car to Cedar Rapids determined to bring the convention to this city next year if it is possible. The contest for treasurer will also be a good lively one. In short there is every reason to expect a record breaking session of the I. B. A. June 5th and 6th.

Abandon Fight Against Loan Sharks

The movement to organize a public loan bureau in Des Moines with which to fight the loan sharks has been abandoned temporarily. Lee Stevens, president of the Century Savings, was chairman of the committee which had the work in charge. Mr. Stevens says that he met with great encouragement but that investors hesitated to put their money into a concern that would be forced to do business on an illegal basis. The scheme contemplated asking 2 per cent a month interest. This is in violation of the Iowa law, and while it was thought that the bureau could evade the law as do loan sharks by asking commissions, etc., still there was much hesitation and a constant likelihood that loan sharks would stir up litigation through those who were borrowing from the public loan bureau at the usurious rate. Chairman Stevens in announcing the abandonment of the project urged that the Commercial Club take steps to secure a law at the forthcoming legislative assembly permitting the organization of loan bureaus in cities of a certain size. The law as sought will authorize the asking of two per cent a month interest. If such a law is passed, Mr. Stevens says there will be no difficulty in securing the required $50,000 capital and much more. He also says there is no doubt that the investment will pay 12 to 14 per cent.

Bank Litigation Case

One of the best known cases in bank litigation in the courts for many years came to an end, for the time being at least, in the courts at Des Moines when a jury found that the Des Moines National must pay the American Express Company $2,568.10. This is the outcome of the shipment of a package supposed to contain $2,000 from the Des Moines National to the Bank at Irwin in 1905. When the package was opened at Irwin it was found to contain brown paper instead of money. The Irwin bank sued the express company for $2,000 and costs and won the suit. Thereupon the express company sued the Des Moines National. The express company was able to show that the seal on the package had not been broken when it reached the Irwin bank and that the transfer of the money and substitution of brown paper must have taken place before the package was accepted by the plaintiff. Although the case has been in the court for seven years it is probable that an appeal will be taken by the Des Moines National from the recent finding of the district court jury.

P. W. Hall Will Advocate Campaign of Education

A campaign of education which will aid the people to understand the intricacies of banking, of currency and of needed legislation in Iowa will be advocated by Secretary P. W. Hall of the I. B. A. in his annual report at the state convention next week. Mr. Hall believes there are many Iowa laws bearing upon banking and taxation that should be revised. He believes that the bankers alone will not be able to secure action as needed at the hands of the coming legislature but he believes that if they will begin to talk to their friends and neighbors and gradually point out what is needed, it will not be difficult to get some very favorable action on the part of the Solons next winter.

Frank Roberts

Frank Roberts, who has been chief examiner in the Iowa banking department for the past eight years, has purchased a block of stock in the Citizens State at Newton and became active manager for that institution June first. A. O. Wolver, a banker of experience and an examiner under Mr. Roberts for the past three years, has been appointed by Auditor Bleakly to succeed to the position of chief examiner. This change will be the subject of considerable discussion over Iowa, for Mr. Roberts is known to every banker in the state and particularly to the state and savings bank owners. His work has been of high order, and while many times bankers were disposed to regard Mr. Roberts as too insistent upon the observance of details, Auditor Bleakly has always upheld him. The last state or savings bank failure in Iowa was in 1907. This good showing since is ascribed by Auditor Bleakly to Mr. Roberts' vigilance and to the watchfulness of the men under him.

Death of John B. Mowery

John B. Mowery, president of the First National at Ottumwa and one of the best known bankers in Iowa, died Tuesday at his home in that city at the age of 71. He had been ill several months. Mr. Mowery was actively interested in several of the smaller banks in southeastern Iowa. The funeral services were held Thursday.

Henry Malaas, assistant cashier in the First National at Waterloo, has resigned that position to become cashier in the First National at New England, N. D. Malass was formerly with the Security at Waterloo and prior to that time with an Oelwein bank.

"There's no one can take my place," he said. Then he added with a blush, "I have been married less than a week." "In that case I guess you are right, there is no one can take your place. You are excused," said the court.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

A big bundle of cashier's checks of the Merchants National, now out of existence, on the Sioux City Clearing House, issued at the time of the 1907 "unpleasantness," came to light out of a load of old paper sold by the First National to a junk dealer and last Saturday occasioned not a little embarrassment to banks about the city. Many of them had not been properly canceled, and the first two offered were cashed. Upon discovery that there were many of the odd pieces of currency in circulation, payment was stopped, and an investigation brought the facts to light. Meanwhile, the junk dealer had been giving away money to his friends with prodigal liberality, and children were using them to play they were millionaires.

The presence of the cashier's checks in the waste paper has not been accounted for. A large amount of such paper was destroyed by the old Merchants National, and when the First National took over the business all that remained about the bank was burned under the supervision of the officers; it was supposed that all had been destroyed. The first checks were presented to the American Savings Bank and the Woodbury County Savings Bank, which gave cash in exchange for these

$5 bills of indebtedness. When an attempt was made to do likewise at the First National a stop was put to the proceedings. Those who received money gave it up, being convinced of the worthlessness of the "currency."

George S. Parker

George S. Parker, president of the Live Stock National Bank, spent the latter days of this week at Dallas, S. D., attending the Group 2 meeting of the South Dakota Bankers Association. Thursday afternoon he gave an address on "Securities," and Thursday evening he presided as toastmaster at a banquet. Speakers were J. R. Cash, of Bonesteel; Mrs. E. A. Jackson, Dallas; C. E. Burnham, Norfolk, Neb., and Rev. G. E. Ferguson, Gregory. Louis Visha, cashier of the Bank of Dallas, was chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Boosts Sioux City

Frank J. Parsons, vice-president of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company of New York, tickled the pride of Sioux City people while in the city this week by giving out an interview in which he grouped Sioux City with Kansas City and Portland, Ore., as the three western cities that show the liveliest signs at the present time of progress and prosperity. He was particularly impressed with the season's building activities. He has been making a tour of the western coast.

FAVORS CLEARING HOUSE BANKS

Mayor Blankenburg of Philadelphia last week sent a message to councils accompanied by an ordinance designed to furnish better safeguards for city funds deposited with local institutions. The ordinance provides that all institutions shall pay 2 per cent interest on city deposits, the same as at present, and also directs that all city depositories must be members of the Philadelphia clearing house or furnish a sufficient bond containing a warrant of attorney to confess judgment in favor of the city in the amount of 25 per cent of the capital stock and surplus of each depository institution.

The First State Bank of Milano, Texas, with a capital stock of $10,000 has opened for business with the following incorporators: Gus Newton, L. Bedell, Oxsheer Smith and others.

Roll Paper for Adding Machines

The very best quality adding machine paper is available at any Burroughs office at the lowest prices.

Good paper is required, if the best results are expected from your machine.

The paper must be of such strength that it will not tear under the tension required for feeding in the carriage.

It must have a surface that will take a clear impression and give good carbon copies.

Above all it must be free from "paper lint." After each operation the paper is torn off, and ordinary paper will deposit minute particles (lint) which fly into the mechanism of the machine and ultimately cause mechanical trouble.

Our paper is made to our special order and made right.

All of the Burroughs offices carry the two standard widths of paper, 2 5-16 and 3 15-32 inches, ruled between dollar and cents and between hundreds and thousands of dollars, if desired. We can furnish paper, on special order, in other widths up to 12 inches.

This paper can be used on any kind of Adding and Listing Machine.

We print a price list of paper and ribbons, with a list of the Burroughs offices in the United States and Canada.

May we mail you a copy.

BANKERS AND AGRICULTURE IN ARKANSAS

Clay Sloan, commissioner of the bureau of mines, manufactures and agriculture of Arkansas, delivered a very interesting address at the convention of the Arkansas Bankers Association at Little Rock on May 29th. Among the remarks made by Mr. Sloan are the following, the subject of his address being, "How Can the Banker Best Help the Farmer?"

"We have in Arkansas the U. S. government agricultural state agent with his corps of district agents, a farm demonstrator for each county, the teacher, with many co-operators in every township, the pupils, the agricultural experiment station at Fayetteville University and its branches in other sections of the state, four minor agricultural schools filled with instructors who by practice and precept are teaching fundamental agriculture to the youth of the land. In our more than 600 school houses throughout the state we have 10,000 instructors teaching our 400,000 children some of the simple and wholesome truths of elementary agriculture required by law to be taught in our common schools. Each of our four railway systems has for our state a commissioner of agriculture, who is traversing the state with exhibition trains filled with expert lecturers and object lessons in agricultural products and domestic animal specimens, each and all laboring arduously and intelligently along the prevention of crop failure by dissemination of knowledge of better methods of cultivation, and not without good results."

Mr. Sloan, after stating that the farmer is the poorest paid of all laborers, suggested that the bankers, without loss to themselves, probably could furnish to the farmers cash at a reasonable rate of interest with which to buy their needed supplies, thereby enabling them to cut down expenses and consequently to increase their profits. Speaking along the same lines, the commissioner also said in part:

"In Ireland they now are working out what is known as an agricultural banking movement, based on co-operative credit. A number of farmers organize in a community. They take in only such men as they deem honest and trustworthy. A committee of their best business men is chosen, a secretary named; they arrange with bankers for cash to supply their needs in making the crop, nothing else to be bought by any member. All or part of the members sign the note to the banker, if they and the banker agree that the article desired should be purchased by the borrower and the money asked for actually is needed. All members and their banker look out for the best markets when crops are ready for sale. This is said to be a success in Ireland. The great stock banks are furnishing the money gladly to the smaller institutions for this purpose, as they look on them as reliable and trustworthy feeders. In Ireland the government has some connection with the plan, but could not our bankers do it without government intervention?"

"There is pending in congress now the Gronna Resolution looking to the appointment of a commission to make inquiry into co-operative rural finance preparatory to federal legislation establishing a system of co-operative rural credit unions, on some such plan as used in Ireland, I suppose. You need not wait for this. In the panic of 1907 the bankers took matters into their own hands, issued John Doe money and refused to let a man draw his own cash out for his own needs. I don't see that they need any statute to start anything if they want to. While you are evolving a more comprehensive plan could you not furnish the farmer cash, with a lien upon his chattels and his land as security for its repayment? This is safe and conservative banking if care is exercised in selecting the chattels and the man. It may be objected that such indebtedness could not be realized on easily in case prompt collection had to be made, but where the amount to be collected is not too near the actual value of the lands or chattels, I feel sure speedy sale could be made, where such unfortunate necessity would exist, for a sum equal to the indebtedness secured. Horses, mules, crops and lands find ready purchasers at fair prices everywhere and at all times in our state. Debts secured by them would be paid as promptly without foreclosure proceedings, I think, as notes secured by personal endorsements now are paid without suit, and foreclosure would bring as prompt collection as suit against individuals, especially where execution is ordered and a stay bond given. Cash with which to buy supplies will reduce the farmer's expenses because he can buy much cheaper and the merchant can sell to him much cheaper than where the merchant has to put on an additional per cent to cover the hazard of his business and to buy himself on time in order that he may give time to the farmer. Whether the security be a lien on property or personal security, the time of payment would have to be for more than the ninety days now usually allowed; for at least six, and often eight, months from the time the money was needed in the spring to the time of gathering crops should be given. The average farmer is a man of small capital, and all his capital usually goes into his crop each year and he gets it out again only once a year at the end of the season. The financing of farm ventures, giving non-usurious financial help to trustworthy, capable men, is one of the most imperative needs of our times. Somebody ought to do it. I hope and sincerely believe the bankers of Arkansas will do their share of this important work.

"To assist the farmer to lower expenses by furnishing cash for purchases, will cause profits to come to his business in a degree, but if you will enable him to get a price for his commodities that the cost of production and reasonable profit in business demand, you will have rendered him another most valuable service. There is not an economic problem before the farmer to-day of larger proportions than the advantageous disposition of his crop, to those who will consume it at a figure remunerative to the farmer and just to him who buys. The prosperity of the agricultural sections hinges greatly upon crop marketing. It is just as much a part of farming, I verily believe more important than cultivation, when we consider that great desideratum of all business—'profit.'

"Imperial county, California, is including co-operative marketing in her regular public school course. Education may solve it in time to benefit some future generation, but can't the Arkansas bankers help now? There are waste and error and wrong, even tyranny, in the sale of crops. Every waste eliminated, error corrected, wrong righted, tyranny abolished from the distribution of the crops will be a blessing to not only every farmer, but to all in his community as well. Farm values of the farm products of 1910 were nine billions of dollars. One-third of the product was used on the farm itself and the two-thirds that were sold were retailed at twelve billion dollars. Who got the six billion dollars? The farmer should understand marketing, but he does not. He is suffering from lack of this knowledge. Had he understood it the six billion dollars less reasonable commissions and transportation charges would have remained in his pocket."

Mr. Sloan concluded his remarks by saying that in the fight for agricultural supremacy the South must to a large extent rely upon the bankers.

zens to seek investments outside of our state, as well as lack of growth in wealth and population, and naturally the question arises, "Why this apparent stagnation?" The answer is found, in part at least, upon examination of our assessment and taxation laws, which operate to intimidate investors and drive capital and citizens away from our state. I do not offer a specific remedy for these evil conditions, but suggest that they can be overcome by entrusting our law making, as well as administrative offices, to business men of tried and proven ability.

The laws needing revision or repeal are those affecting our commercial welfare, and consequently should be changed in accordance with the best judgment available, and the experience of those most interested should be used in making the necessary changes.

The affairs of state are those of a business organization, differing only in size, and call for business principles, rather than arguments on legal technicalities. To secure laws suitable for the commercial development we must get business men to make them and apply them.

Now the members of this association are all business men and quite large taxpayers; they are also the custodians of large funds of many business institutions throughout the state, and as owners and trustees of such property, they should be most available to take a hand in seeing that competent business men are placed in position to handle the problems of our government. In making this demand we are doing what any business organization would require to secure officials to determine and carry out policies for its successful operation, and we cannot get away from the idea that our government is nothing more in its business functions than a means to raise revenue and spend it judiciously for the benefit of all of our citizens.

The officials of our national government recognize the incompetency of the statesmen to handle its affairs, unaided by the business men of the country. There was recently held in Washington a commercial congress, called by President Taft, the purpose of which was to effect a permanent organization composed of the able business men of the country, to assist the federal government in solving the economic problems of the day. The President told this tentative organization that he was thoroughly imbued with the importance and necessity of a national chamber of commerce to co-operate with the government in handling questions which affect the business welfare of the country. At this meeting, Mr. Nagel, secretary of commerce, said that so pressing were the problems confronting them, if the governmental agencies did not find the solution, the commercial and industrial forces would compel that solution in one form or another. He also stated that the confusion which now exists, evidenced by the disposition to discourage and embarrass, is to be attributed to the circumstance that important and comprehensive advice had not been afforded by those who are primarily interested, and whose experience is most essential to a correct understanding of matters in dispute.

Instead of depending upon the advice or the demands of a specialized interest, we must have a common judgment of commerce and industry, and to get that judgment we must have a common or more general representation of the business interests of the country. You will observe from this, that there is an imperative demand for the business man's voice in directing proposed measures and in administering existing laws.

What is true of the nation is essentially true of the state, and the demand upon us is as urgent as it is upon the citizen at large of the federal government, so I would urge all of you to take a lively interest in the endeavor to satisfy that demand. As bankers you represent every form of capital and industry in the state, and consequently your judgment would come nearer than that of any other body of men to being what Secretary Nagel calls "the common judgment of commerce and industry."

The conditions in our state have been rather uncertain for some time, and men not accustomed to the vortex of the political whirlpool are disposed to hesitate to enter. But there is no greater danger than fear, while the greatest security will come from the courage of capable and honest leaders, who are bound to command the support of all honest citizens, and the rank and file are sincere in their honesty.

The very fact that there is so much discord in the political machinery of our state is evidence that there is a lack of common understanding and effort on the part of those in control, to subordinate their selfish interests to give the people an honest and intelligent service. If it were not so much a contest between the office holders and the office seekers, we would not have this talk about would-be harmony. If business men were in charge of our government with the real interests of the taxpayers at heart, we would not be annoyed by so many "factions." These conditions are the result of our turning our affairs over to time-servers, who are more interested in perpetuating themselves in office than in giving the people of Tennessee an efficient administration of its public affairs.

In making a plea for the business man, I am not advancing an original idea, for it has been brought to the attention of all by the demand from all quarters, for a change in the class of men holding high places in the state and in the nation. I recently read a very able address of E. C. Simmons, who is a captain of industry of world-wide fame, and as his opinion is of much value, I quote the following from his article:

"We sadly need for our next president a business man, and I firmly believe if we had such a man in the White House as the result of the next election, within six months from the time he took the oath of office, there would be such a changed condition in the affairs of this country, that all the idle men who wanted work would find plenty of it and at good wages—that the wheels of commerce would revolve in a more wholesome way, and at a greater speed than has ever been known in the history of the United States.

"There is not a shadow of a doubt in my mind that a business man would, at the present time, be elected by a larger majority than has been shown for any president in recent years."

In making this statement Mr. Simmons has voiced the opinion of every business man in the country, and his reflections on national conditions would well be applied to the situation in almost all the states of our Union.

Now, gentlemen, I have indulged somewhat in generalities, and I fear some may think I have forgotten the object of our meeting; such is not the case, but recognizing what a potent factor for good our organization can be, I make use of this opportunity to draw your attention to the needs of the hour in our state.

The work of the association will be carried on with greatest benefit to all, as the details are in the hands of able committees, and as I know that every member here to-day is prepared to use his best efforts and give his best ideas to make this convention the most successful in the history of our association, I have not dwelt on subjects peculiar to the meeting itself, preferring to elicit your individual and united aid to prevent the grandeur of our state's past greatness becoming overshadowed by the gloom of political strife which is hindering our progress and prosperity.

and Kansas state bonds were deposited with the auditor for the security of the circulation. Governor Robinson, Robert S. Stevens and Robert Morrow were the owners and directors. After a time Mr. Stevens bought Governor Robinson's and Robert Morrow's interests and became the sole owner. Morrow remained nominally the president and S. C. Smith was the cashier. Mr. Stevens became extensively engaged in government contracts, building Indian houses and other matters and concluded to close the bank. He took up money and deposited it with the auditor to redeem the circulation and withdrew the bonds. Mr. Smith remained in the bank, doing an exchange business, and this was the condition when Quantrill burned Lawrence and robbed the safe. In it there was a small package of the bills that had been redeemed by Mr. Smith and not taken to Topeka, and these were carried by Quantrill's men to Missouri. We have a two dollar bill of this bank presented by Mr. G. Grovenor, which passed through the Quantrill raid, being in Mr. Grovenor's safe. Morrow had several thousand dollars in coin of his own money in the safe that was also taken during the raid. It was when silver and gold dollars were worth two dollars and a half in greenbacks. There were three other banks in Lawrence opened about this time, viz.: Babcock & Lykins, Simpson Brothers, and E. D. Thompson. These were not banks of issue.

Back in the 60's an attempt was made to start a bank at Lecompton. E. W. Wynkoop, later very prominent in the founding of the city of Denver and as Indian agent, was interested in the attempt, but the sight of much gold and its security, I suppose, greatly discouraged them. Ely Moore in his delightful story of Lecompton tells how western people at that time disliked paper money, and he gives a dialogue he heard between a Missouri river steamboat captain and a woodyard man. The boat pulled up to the bank and the captain called out, "Is your wood dry?" "Yep" was the answer. "What is your wood worth?" shouted the captain. "What kind of money do yer tote, Cap?" asked the wood merchant. "The best on earth, the new Platte Valley Bank," replied the captain. "If that be so, Cap," was the rejoinder, "I'll trade cord for cord." How would we do business to-day with the old fashioned director always in hand?

Under the act of 1857, creating the Kansas Valley Bank with branches, Fort Scott organized a branch in May, 1857. Governor Robert J. Walker refused to approve. The parties interested sued the governor, but there is no record of what became of the suit. The law provided that stockholders had to put up one-half their subscription in gold or silver and give to the bank a bond for the other half. Two Lecompton men were quite prominent in the Fort Scott move, James G. Bailey and David Bailey, brothers.

Kansas in those days had her Wall Street and it is a singular circumstance that the antipathy which later prevailed did not happen then. The first United States land office was opened for business at Lecompton in May, 1856. It was located on Elmore Street. The remainder of the same block, both sides of the street, was lined by a pretty fair assortment of wood shanties, used by land lawyers and land sharks. The only currency then recognized by the United States in the payment for land was gold and land warrants. Settlers had to have gold with which to pay government, but they could make some saving by purchasing a land warrant. There are no very damaging stories of the rapacity of those doing business on the Wall Street of Lecompton, but as lofty as five per cent a month was common talk for the fellow who had neither land warrant nor gold, and who desired a quarter section of the public land. The land office was moved to Topeka in September, 1861, and the greater portion of the time it was at Lecompton there was a heavy business. Besides the ordinary entries there was much contesting, making business for attorneys and bringing many witnesses. There was a bright lot of young men at Lecompton in those days other than the financial skimmers. The first settlers in Kansas were not chumps by any means. Some came here with the conceit that they were sharper than others and they sometimes found in the end that there were those who were still sharper. I remember an instance of a gentleman from Ohio who came to Lecompton with a few thousand dollars and who intimated that he was going to cut something of a swath. One morning about 1858, I was standing in front of the old National Hotel as the stage was loading for the East. The gentleman from Ohio had concluded to return with every feather plucked. As he stood with one foot on the step of the coach, holding to the post and swinging the other foot, he remarked, "When I get back to Ohio I will tell them there is nothing but a sheet of brown paper between this place and hell!"

The Hamilton National of Chattanooga is justly proud of its new home. The building is fifteen stories and contains over two hundred and fifty offices. The bank's equipment is as substantial and elegant as that of any bank in the United States, and every effort has been made to make it convenient and serviceable to patrons.

The surplus of the bank is represented approximately in the bank's investment in the building, leaving the $1,000,000 capital free for banking purposes. The building has no encumbrance.

CALIFORNIA BANKERS CLOSE CONVENTION

Long Beach, Cal.—At the closing business meeting of the annual convention of the California Bankers Association, A. E. Edwards, vice-president of the First National of Pasadena, was elected president; L. P. Behrens, Redwood City, vice-president; George N. O'Brien, San Francisco, treasurer; P. E. Hatch, Long Beach, J. E. Fishburn, Los Angeles, George McNear, Petaluma and Elliott McAllister, Marysville, members of the executive committee. At the executive council meeting R. M. Welch of San Francisco was named chairman and Frederick H. Colburn of San Francisco, re-elected secretary. The council will meet soon to arrange for the creation of the group system of banks in the state. An invitation, signed by all of the bankers of San Diego to have the 1913 convention held there, was referred to the executive council. The past president's button, and a silver loving-cup were presented Stoddard Jess of Los Angeles, the retiring president. In resolutions, the association favored having the economic value of thrift taught in all public schools; asked the legislative committee to suggest legislation leading to such instruction in schools, and favored encouraging the extension of the school savings system. The bankers also declared the development of agricultural resources to be the surest foundation of prosperity, and requested the executive council to further the movement in this state toward placing agricultural pursuits on a more scientific plane.

LAKE COUNTY BANKERS TO ORGANIZE

As chairman of Group 4, J. M. Hurst, assistant cashier of the National Bank of the Republic, has called a meeting for the purpose of organizing a Lake county federation. The meeting will be held on June 4th at 1 p. m. at the Deerpath Inn in Lake Forest. The plan is to have luncheon served at the inn and to have the Lake county bankers become better acquainted. The luncheon will be followed by the meeting, the purpose of which will be the organization and election of officers of the federation, reporting at the meeting of the group, which will be held at Yorkville a few days later. George Woodruff, Joliet, has been invited to speak.

DRY FARMING CONGRESS

Bankers interested in farming subjects will find the annual "Handbook of Dry Farming," containing records of the sixth international dry farming congress held at Colorado Springs on October 16th to 20th, 1911, full of information relating to agricultural development. It is issued under the supervision of John T. Burns, executive secretary-treasurer, Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada, where the seventh annual session will be held during the week of October 21, 1912.

thority for making them standard. The various systems of helping the farmer in Europe will be studied and reported upon by Mr. Chamberlain.

WE understand that the "crooks" whose pictures were published in the protective department of the Journal for May were particularly delighted to "welcome to their midst" those who dined with the trust company section at the Waldorf.

PRESIDENT B. F. HARRIS has sent out a statement for publication of what United States ambassadors and President Taft are doing toward promoting a better state of finance for the farmer. It appears that this work originated largely with the Illinois committee.

"HE'LL be me" said the Colonel. Wrong again, at least from the standpoint of good English. It is believed the "He'll be me" line would have caused T. R. trouble in the Massachusetts primary.

WE hear that F. A. Crandall, special ambassador to the Californians at Long Beach from the National City Bank, Chicago, enjoyed every good thing that came his way, and put in some good licks for his aggressive institution.

NOW that the baseball season is in full swing in Chicago one of the big banking institutions has adopted the following rule: "All requests for leave of absence owing to funerals, weddings, lame back, house cleaning, moving, sore throat, headache, indigestion, etc., must be handed in not later than 10 A. M. ON THE DAY OF THE GAME."

NEWEST bank in Chicago is the "Commercial Exchange National." It was represented at San Antonio by J. G. Wakefield, for, so we can prove by the Texas Bankers Record.

BY the way, the convention issue of the T. B. R. is one of the finest, best edited, best printed special numbers it has been our pleasure to see. Look around in this issue for the picture of "M. L. Riddle, managing editor," and you will catch on. Herewith a little poem by Editor Riddle dedicated to those who went down to San Antonio.

LITTLE bank roll, ere we part,
Let me hug you to my heart;
All the year I've clung to you.
I've been faithful, you've been true.

LITTLE bank roll, in a day,
To you and I will go away;
To some gay and festive spot
(Santone)

I'll come home, but you will NOT.

WHY not pass a by-law in Illinois fixing a time for the annual conventions, also for the groups? Several times Illinois has trailed along clear in the wake of even the national convention, which ought to close the season.

NEARLY half the time we either have no A. B. A. vice-president, or, we have two at once. Same with nominating committee.

FURTHERMORE, about half of our presidents get going to two A. B. A. conventions as "President of the Illinois Bankers," and the other half get shut out.

CRABTREE did not get that honor, while Harris draws both New Orleans and Detroit. You bet, it isn't right. Group meetings should not come in the busy state convention season. It robs them of speakers, attendance and publicity.

ILLINOIS needs outside help in getting her back in line, and back to stay. It's a disadvantage in many ways.

THIS year George and Lampert go off the Big Council at Detroit and their successors will not have been elected unless a special meeting is held. Nelson H. Greene was elected almost a whole year before his vacancy came along.

IN the olden days when your Uncle John L. "picked the winners," Illinois always had men (s)elected to fill the places. Another chance for another Moses to lead Illinois out of the wilderness.

JOHN McHUGH, Sioux City, drew a golf medal at the barbecue, and G. M. Reynolds got one "for complimentary things said to and about St. Louis bankers."

VERDICT is that "the barbecue" was the best thing pulled off by bankers of late and about evens the score with Kansas City for allowing her Bankers Club to seize and use up the "Houn' Dawg" song.

MR. REYNOLDS, on his return from St. Louis, said: "There were bankers there from different parts of the country, and all were optimistic. They would like to see better interest rates, but their banks were fairly well loaned up and the crop outlook from the different sections was reported favorable. Bankers from the corn belt thought that 80 per cent of the crop had been planted."

THEY tell a good one on J. Fletcher Farrell down at St. Louis. It occurred at the entertainment of the Bankers Club on Saturday last. A bunch of guests were walking on the lawn, and had been talking politics. Various bankers had told where Roosevelt's strength was; namely, all the barbers, waiters, common people, etc., etc. Farrell saw a couple of waiters walking in front. He said, "I'll bet that those two fellows are going to vote for Roosevelt." Mr. Goebel from Kansas City, just for fun, said, "I'll take the bet." So Farrell called the waiters, asking them if they were not going to vote for Roosevelt, to which they replied in broken English, "We are not going to vote for anybody, we are not naturalized citizens."

QUITE a number of good fellows have concluded that W. T. Fenton should be coupled up with Crabtree for the two Illinois places on the A. B. A. executive council. He's an ex-president of the Illinois Bankers Association, and has quite a distinguished association record.

MR. FENTON in reality started the clearing house section, but by an oversight was not given full credit for it. He also is the inventor, pure and simple, of the clearing house examination system, now in use by the twenty leading cities. It would be a fine recognition of Mr. Fenton for the place, and Group 4 couldn't do a wiser thing than to enter him formally in the race at Yorkville.

WE hear that Chairman Arthur Reynolds has been obliged to refuse a lot of requests to speak at State conventions. There is a limit to how much of such work one can do if he has anything else on hand. Mr. Reynolds is a very busy banker.

ANDREW J. SMITH, secretary of the Indiana Bankers Association, has sent out to the various banks in his state a little book setting forth the reasons why every bank in Indiana should become a member of the association.

PLANS FOR THE DETROIT CONVENTION

At a meeting of the executive committee, having in charge the American Bankers Association convention to be held in Detroit, September 9th to 14th, arrangements for the annual convention were discussed in detail.

While no definite program of entertainment has as yet been decided upon, it is evident that the visitors will be given an opportunity of enjoying the pleasures of the Detroit River. Detroit possesses the finest steamers plying upon fresh water, and it is contemplated to charter these boats to take visiting bankers to points of interest.

John W. Staley, as chairman of the hotel committee, in his report to the executive committee, stated that the hotel situation is well in hand. Between eleven hundred and twelve hundred people already have made reservations at the hotels and requests for accommodations are being taken care of as fast as received at the convention committee rooms.

Detroit is an unusually attractive city during the summer months, and it is expected that a great number of representative bankers will take advantage of the opportunity of visiting the city the second week in September.

ASSOCIATION OF COMMERCE MEETING

On Wednesday, June 26th, at the regular luncheon of the members of the ways and means committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce in the main dining-room of the LaSalle Hotel, there will be held an important good roads meeting. It is understood that the Hon. Homer J. Tyce, chairman of the Illinois good roads commission appointed by Governor Deneen, will make the principal address. The members of the various committees representing the different organizations interested in this important subject will be invited to attend. This will include representatives of the Illinois Bankers Association, Illinois Manufacturers Association, Chicago Motor Club, Chicago Automobile Association, Chicago Automobile Manufacturers Association, the Hamilton Club, and like organizations which maintain good roads committees.

Iowa Convention

Cedar Rapids, Ia., June 6.—The two days bankers convention held in this state has proven to be a record-breaker in point of attendance and in general interest shown in the proceedings. The annual address by President E. J. Curtin aroused more enthusiasm and discussion than naturally was expected from a formal part of the program. His strong endorsement of the policies of his predecessor—John McHugh—was well received. His request for an endorsement by the Iowa bankers of a bill putting all forms of banking under supervision was the talk of the hotel corridors for the remainder of the day.

The Wednesday morning session convened promptly at ten o'clock in the opera house and proceeded rapidly to business, the usual addresses of welcome and responses having been relegated to companionship with things of the past. Secretary Hall belongs to the modern school. Treasurer W. G. C. Bagley of Mason City reported the financial condition of the association, and Secretary P. W. Hall gave notice that his report had been printed for distribution and could be found in the seats. This abbreviated matters very much. There was a very interesting report on taxation by C. D. Ellis of Charles City, and C. A. Larson of New Hampton reported for the agricultural committee. Time locks always are a favorite topic for consideration at Iowa conventions. Charles Shade of Rock Rapids reported on this subject. Another item on the Iowa program each year is the Sundblad fund. No one except the chairman of the committee ever knows anything about it, and this year that part of the program was presented by J. V. McCord of Spencer.

Prof. C. F. Curtis, dean of the agricultural college at Ames, delivered a short address on vocational education, which will be found printed in full elsewhere in this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER. As an entertainment feature, Elbert Hubbard of East Aurora, N. Y., spoke on a subject given in the program as "Modern Business." What he talked upon and what he really said must remain a secret. At the adjournment of the morning session on Wednesday, George S. Parker, A. B. A. vice-president for Iowa, presided at a meeting of that membership.

In the afternoon there was an address by William J. Burns, head of the protective system of the A. B. A., and also head of the protective system of the Iowa association. Following Mr. Burns came Charles R. McKay of Chicago, advocating the numerical system adopted by the American Bankers Association, and George E. Allen, educational director of the American Institute of Banking, on "Banking Education." (The addresses by Mr. McKay and Mr. Allen will be found elsewhere in this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER.) A very interesting and instructive talk was that by Hugh L. Cooper, chief engineer in charge of constructing the big dam at Keokuk. The second day brought out a talk by William B. Joyce, president of the National Surety Company, on surety bonds, and an address by B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, on "The Banker and His Rela-

the association with agricultural and educational matters and has started a state-wide movement for bank supervision and inspection. The bankers of Iowa, in honoring these two men, have greatly strengthened Iowa's position as a leader among the states.

Iowa has been fortunate in the big, manly men she has chosen to head her state association. To the left is the portrait of E. J. Curtin, who presided this week at Cedar Rapids, and below is that of John McHugh, who wielded the gavel last year at Mason City. McHugh made the association a truly representative body in which the group units decided its policy through the Council of Administration, composed of the group chairmen, and which under President McHugh met four times per year. President Curtin kept up this advanced policy and the increased influence of the association in legislative and other matters has been marked. President Curtin has identified

Joseph E. Otis

Joseph E. Otis, vice-president of the Central Trust, who recently returned to the city after a three days visit in New York and a day in Boston, says: "There is little demand for money except in strictly commercial banks, which report better conditions than for some weeks past. Wall Street banks are not disposed to put their money out in time loans at going rates, but prefer demand loans, awaiting improved conditions in the money market. There is considerable anxiety in certain directions over politics. I found some Boston bankers quite disturbed through fear of a democratic victory at the coming presidential election and more tariff legislation as a result. The disposition all around is to go slowly."

FINANCIAL OUTLOOK

Business at the present time is somewhat quieter than it has been during the past few months. Commercial paper and bonds are not in very great demand. Western banks report that the prospects for good crops this year are very good. A general spirit of optimism prevails throughout the country.

CHICAGO BANKERS ENTHUSIASTIC ABOUT IOWA CONVENTION

Chicago bankers who attended the sessions of the Iowa bankers convention held in Cedar Rapids on Wednesday and Thursday of this week are unanimous in the opinion that the convention was a great success. It was very largely attended and enthusiastically conducted. J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National, states that a very fine program was given and that the speakers are men of excellent caliber. He says that the country is looking fine and that a general spirit of optimism prevails throughout the state. James G. Wakefield, assistant cashier of the Corn Exchange National, was very much impressed with the able and dignified manner in which E. J. Curtin, the retiring president of the association, presided at the sessions. G. M. Reynolds said the crops are the best ever. Attendance was over 1,500.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

LOOK up the picture of "M. L. Riddle, editor of the Texas Bankers Record," on page 13 (not intentional) of last week's issue, and then send in your subscription.

IOWA drew heavily on Chicago banks for her convention this week. Hardly a big Chicago bank without a few of the pure Hawkeye brand on the staff. To them an Iowa convention is a home-coming event.

IF you didn't hear E. J. Curtin's address at Cedar Rapids, turn to page 5 and read it. On the matter of association ethics and policies it's the best thing of the year by far.

HOUSTON JONES, formerly cashier of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company, is the president of the new First National at Pharr, Texas. Mr. Jones was born in the South and longed, always, to get back there. The new building of the First looks (as it should) like a copy of the Alamo with a few frills added.

EVERYBODY "up-North" will wish "Houston Jones, president," the very highest measure of success. President Lucius Teter, of the Chicago Savings, is in the front rank of those who believe he will succeed in a handsome way.

PHARR is a brand new town, but has a number of fine buildings already. The population, Jones says, consists of "one knocker, two kickers and 500 boosters," which are about the right proportions for a win.

IT is the unwritten law of the sea that a captain must go down with his ship. Men dare not write it into the contract, and nations dare not incorporate it in their navy or marine regulations, yet the tyrants of the sea know the law, and believe that to obey it betters their service, and there are few instances of its being disregarded.

IT is the unwritten law of the army and navy that an officer shall not seek cover, or at least shall not show apprehension of danger to his person, in time of battle and in the presence of enlisted men or common sailors.

IN obedience to this law Farragut bound himself to the mast. Lee rode to the head of his charging column at the bloody angle and Lawton walked coolly in front of the line and was shot in the presence of his men.

IT is the law of banking, too, in the higher sense, that the officers of a bank shall prevent all loss to depositors even to the entire cost of their own private fortunes. Responsibility doesn't end with the legal double liability, and this should apply to directors as well. It ought to be impossible in America for a depositor to lose a cent in any bank.

WHEN banks become absolutely safe against loss to depositors, then banking will be a science. It ought to be impossible for an unsafe bank to continue. Can't last long in Chicago Clearing House district, and we do not expect to see any depositor in that district ever lose a dollar after Illinois adopts her new banking law.

ABSOLUTE safety is possible in banking and at the low cost of perfect supervision and inspection with fullest publicity. You will live to see it if you go actively to work and help to bring it about.

"HANDS across" the Mississippi to E. J. Curtin, president of the Iowa Bankers, who asked that association, the largest by far, to go on record as favoring bank supervision and inspection.

IOWA in ye olden days gave her presidents two years in the chair in succession. Now she doesn't stand for two consecutive years, even of the rotation kind. Cedar Rapids has been the convention city four times and Des Moines six.

KENT C. FERMAN was the chairman of the reception committee at Cedar Rapids this week, and the visitors were well cared for. But when it came to a chairman for the ladies' committee there wasn't even a second choice. J. M. Dinwiddie got the job—with Burianek barred.

ER. MOORE was the "busy signal" on the entertainment committee.

CA. LUHNOW, editor of the Trust Companies Magazine, New New York, was in Chicago this week en route to the Colorado heights for a few weeks' visit. His is a clean, able paper, highly valued by the department of banking which it serves with undivided attention.

LUHNOW travels about a great deal. Among bankers, doesn't tell much but listens much of the time. Association politics isn't even a side-line with him, but he did loosen up enough to say that everywhere he went he was told that Ledyard Cogswell of Albany likely would be elected chairman of the Big Council at Detroit. New York and New England are back of him.

HE heard, too, many favorable mentions of Joseph Wayne, Jr., of Philadelphia, but of no "pernicious activity" on the part of either gentleman. This is all very fine. Just the kind of men to choose from.

IT will be many years before anybody will again "run by petition." In the case where it was tried it was a case of bump-the-bumps.

CR. McKAY'S talk on the numerical system of the A. B. A. at Cedar Rapids is one of the most concise descriptions of its working in existence. Then, too, he told the Iowa bankers right to their very faces that Illinois has 1,684 banks, whereas they have only 1,667. We just like to rub this in on Hall and Dinwiddie, who think differently.

INVESTORS MAGAZINE, issued by S. W. Straus & Co., investment bankers, continues to hammer the sellers of worthless stocks. The department head, showing by an engraving a bloated get-rich-quick artist selling fake shares to a widow-in-mourning, with her two dependent children holding to her skirts, is a very strong argument for a "Blue Sky" law in Illinois. Another case of where "the loss is total."

H. N. TINKER, well known in St. Louis and southern banking circles, is organizing a new bank at Portland, to be known as The First Trust Company.

DON'T forget Group 4 meeting at Yorkville on Tuesday next. Chairman Hurst has produced a fine program. The train is Burlington, at 8 A. M., Union Station.

B. J. STUMM, Yorkville National, will be glad to get a card from you, if going, so the good church ladies who will do the catering will have time to put an extra clam in the bouillon.

WR. NEWTON will welcome the guests and George Woodruff will read an original poem by way of response. It's such a good chance. W. D. Stewart of Plano, Peter Klein and Clarence E. Smith will orate on good roads, the Fox river and credit information.

WG. EDENS is down on the list of after-dinner speakers to present "The Interest of the Banker in Agricultural and Educational Development."

MRS. BELLAMY STORER, whose controversy with Mr. Roosevelt still is fresh in the public mind, contributes a remarkable article to the issue of Harper's Weekly for June 1st, describing how she obtained for the ex-President his appointment as assistant secretary of the navy, and prints the text of Mr. Roosevelt's acknowledgment for the first time.

"I AM deeply grateful to you," wrote Mr. Roosevelt, "and I am so very fond of you that I don't mind being under obligations to you." Mr. Roosevelt had become despondent as to his future. At that time he was, in Mrs. Storer's opinion, "an irresponsible father." "I have no future," he said to her. "I shall be the melancholy spectacle of an idle father writing books that won't sell."

CARSON HILDRETH, for years located at Franklin, Neb., will remove to Lincoln about the first of the year. He has long been Franklin's leading banker, school trustee and all around good citizen. Before retiring he wishes to help erect the new ten-thousand-dollar building for the Franklin Academy, to which he, in years past, has given freely of both time and money.

CHICAGO, JUNE 8, 1912

President E. J. Curtin to the Iowa Bankers

Another year has passed, and at this, the twenty-sixth annual convention, it is my pleasure to tell you, that in all the years of its existence, the Iowa Bankers Association was never in as strong a position, as it is at the present time. We are an organization that is respected by the people of this commonwealth, because they know that what it stands for is the result of deliberation and not of impetuosity, and individual gain never has been considered when the interests of the people were at stake.

We have the respect of pulpit, press and political party alike, and our advice has been asked for, and freely given. During the past year in matters entirely foreign to our profession, but of material interest to our citizenship at large. As time goes on, and our organization keeps its place in helping to solve the problems that all states have to solve, I am sure that we, as bankers, will continue to take advanced ground and keep Iowa to the forefront. We lead all states in the number of banks, and while we have been glad and willing to co-operate with other organizations for the common good, in no sense have we neglected our duties to our member banks. At present we have about 1,535 members out of a possible 1,700, and to show that they are officered by able men, I have only to point to the graduates, who now occupy the very highest positions in the money centers of our country.

Protective Work

Your officers have believed that the first duty that the association owed to its members was to protect them against the attacks of burglars. Ably seconded by your executive council, we have waged an unrelenting war against them, during the past year, with the result that five of them have been found guilty, and sentenced to long terms in the penitentiary. This has not been accomplished without the expenditure of a large amount of money, but it was the judgment of both the executive council and your officers that, no matter what the expense, the banks must be protected. I am glad to be able to tell you that among the five men whom we have succeeded in capturing are two of the leaders in their particular line of work, so that from now on we believe that burglaries will be more infrequent. Bank burglars work in gangs, and with two leaders gone, it will be more difficult to organize. We have worked, in some of the cases, in conjunction with some of the Nebraska Bankers Association. In others, with our own detective, W. J. Patek, and about four months ago we secured the services of the W. J. Burns National Detective Agency, thinking that the best was none too good for the Iowa Bankers Association.

The Burns people are patrolling the state constantly, and working as we do in connection with the Bankers Association, whom the Burns agency also represents, we think we are in position to mete out quick justice to anyone attempting to burglarize one of our members.

Time Locks

Last fall, our time lock expert handed in his resignation, and we were obliged to look for a man to take his place. Although no fault was found with his work, he had been criticised quite freely by members for his dilatory methods, and it was the opinion of the Time Lock committee and the Executive Council, as well as your officers, that a change would be for the best interests of the Association. After considerable investigation, we decided that F. E. Davenport & Company of Omaha were thoroughly competent and reliable, and accordingly entered into contract with them to take care of the locks of our members for the next five years.

Executive Council

My predecessor, John McHugh of Sioux City, conceived the idea that the executive council stands in the same relationship to the association that the directors of a bank do to a bank. With this in mind, he thought it wise to hold quarterly meetings of the executive council, where all matters affecting the policy of the association were discussed, and a full report of the doings of the officers made. In this I have agreed with him fully, and during my administration, the meetings have been held regularly. There is no question but what these meetings have been of great value, and to make them more effective, we are suggesting to the convention to change the by-laws so that group chairmen will be elected for two years, instead of one, the chairmen from the odd number Groups to be elected in the odd-numbered years, and the chairmen from the even-numbered groups to be elected in the even-numbered years. The purpose of this is to have an executive council in which half of the members at least will be old members, and familiar with the work the association has in hand. As the council is now constituted, an entire new council is elected each year. The retiring president is the only holdover, and at the first council meeting, which is called immediately after the adjournment of the convention, he is the only one, in addition to the secretary, that has any knowledge of what has been done in the past year.

The practical working of this is, that at the first council meeting, the retiring president usually has to make all the suggestions, whereas, if half of the council were old members and familiar with the workings of the association, it would greatly expedite matters.

Another matter on which you will be asked to vote is the proposition to do away with the appropriation of $1.00 per member to each group, to pay the expenses of the annual group meeting. During the past year, this has cost the Iowa Bankers Association in the neighborhood of $1500 and it is the thought of the executive council and your officers that it should be discontinued. We think that the money can be more profitably spent in the protective and educational work which the association is now undertaking. We also think that, even if the groups did need an appropriation when they were first organized, they are now so well established as to make it unnecessary. It has also been customary to contribute $500.00 to the clearing house of the city in which the annual convention is held, to help pay for the entertainment of the convention. This was started at a time when both banks and cities were smaller, and at one time $500 did pay for this entertainment. With the great number of delegates that now attend, it is obvious that $500 can be of very little help in this direction, and it is thought that this appropriation also should be discontinued.

Group Meetings

Every group in the state held a meeting the past year and more interest was shown than ever before. Each meeting was a decided success, and it seems to me that two meetings a year could well be held, with great profit to the attending banker.

The group meeting, as we all know, is the place where experiences are told. Friend meets friend, and the problems of one are simplified by the successes of the other. Competitor meets competitor, and conflict gives way to co-operation. In short, it is the backbone of the association. Inasmuch as our state legislature meets next winter, it would seem advisable for the different group officers to call group meetings to be held next October or November, previous to the convening of the legislature. In this way, matters of legislation, that would be of benefit to bankers, could be discussed, and when the group chairman came to the December meeting of the executive council, he would be in position to outline what sort of legislation his group members would favor. Then by a united effort, with all the groups behind them, the legislative committee could accomplish much more than if it were left to make the fight alone.

Probable legislation

The tax commission, appointed by the last legislature, has given the matter of the revision of tax laws of Iowa serious consideration. The commissioners are able men, and have taken up this matter of taxation with open minds. Their thought is to do justice to every interest. Our taxation committee has been before them, and showed them the unfairness of the present laws with regard to the taxing of banks. They were given a very respectful hearing and I have no doubt that the harshness of the present law will be greatly modified, in the recommendation that the tax commission will present to the legislature.

Another statute that the legislature will be asked to rescind is the one prohibiting state and savings banks from loaning on real estate outside the state of Iowa. There is nothing in the law at the present time to prevent them from loaning on either personal or chattel security outside the state, and why the prohibition should be on real estate security, alone, no one seems to be able to discover. This works a great hardship on banks located in counties on the borders of the state, as it restricts their loaning territory very greatly. A concerted effort is to be made to have this changed.

Favors Bank Supervision

The recent suspension of three private banks in our state, together with the agitation for their control, that is now being made in our sister state of Illinois, has brought to the minds of the people of Iowa the thought that sooner or later this question must be faced. Iowa bankers have conflicting opinions on this subject, but deep down in the heart of most of them is the settled conviction that no institution should be trusted with the care of the funds of a community without its being organized and conducted under the banking laws either of the United States, or of the state in which it operates. This subject is not a popular one in bankers associations, as many private banks are members, and the argument used, when state control is suggested, is that the association is not treating them fairly, in taking their money for dues and then using it to fight them. This, of course, is a very weak argument, but it finds some supporters. Another argument of the private banker is that all he asks is to be let alone. That his business is his own, and that he can do with it as he wills. That a transaction between himself and his customer concerns only the two interested parties, and that the state or nation has no business in saying in any particular how it shall be consummated. Public opinion, however, is gradually settling to the fact, that banking is not a private business. That the use of the name bank has through the course of time come to mean something, and that if the assets of a bank are good, inspection and investigation will not hurt them; whereas, if they are not good, they most certainly need both, very badly. Many private banks are as good as incorporated ones, and as well conducted, but it is a well established fact, that when a private bank does close it does not do so until nothing is left, of any value. In many cases, if it had the benefits of inspection, the same as the organized bank, it would not be allowed to get into that condition and the results to depositors would not be anywhere near so severe.

Wants the Iowa Association on Record

I am in sympathy with the thought that the Iowa Bankers Association should go on record as approving the idea of bank supervision for all institutions doing a banking business in Iowa. I believe that it would be to the best interests of the private banker, and I sincerely hope that the next executive council will arrange to draft a bill, modeled on conservative, but up-to-date lines, and see to it that it is presented to the next legislature. I would not have it a drastic measure, in the sense of trying to see how tightly the banks could be bound down, but I would have a committee appointed, consisting of national, state, savings and private bankers to draft such a bill, and when introduced in the legislature under such auspices, I am sure it would have no trouble in passing both houses and becoming a law.

My thought is that if the Iowa Bankers Association, or some other organization of like caliber, does not interest itself in this question, outside interests, not over friendly to banking, will, and the results will not be for the best interests of the profession. I believe we should all unite on some measure that will be fair to all, and work for its passage.

Agricultural Development

As Iowa has a larger percentage of tillable land within its borders than any other state in the Union, and as the business of Iowa banks is almost wholly dependent on agriculture, it goes without saying that anything that tends to increase the productiveness of the land is of direct and personal interest to bankers. During the past year or two bankers associations all over the country have been interesting themselves along this line, with the result that so much sentiment has been created, that, this year, almost every state association is giving space to it, on its convention program. It is not the thought of the banker that he can advise the farmer how to run his farm. It is his thought that he can advise with him on matters of organization, and help him to get more closely in touch with the agricultural colleges and receive the benefit of their knowledge, through demonstration work, brought to him, on his own or a neighboring farm. Our association has been fortunate in securing three of the most able advocates of agricultural development in this country to address this convention. They will tell you what improved agricultural conditions would mean for Iowa, and why every banker in the state should be interested, and lend his aid to the movement.

Secretary's Office

Two years ago when we elected P. W. Hall, secretary, to give his whole time to the affairs of the association, we builded wiser than we knew. Much of our success has been due to his untiring efforts, and I congratulate the Iowa Bankers Association on their choice. He has been particularly effective in the protective work, and has saved the bankers of Iowa thousands of dollars, in the fearless and persistent way in which he has pursued and prosecuted the bank burglar. His office is kept in a model manner, and after a year of association with him, and seeing him

Executive Council

The executive council has done its work well. The members have attended the meetings regularly, and have interested themselves thoroughly in the work of the association. All matters of policy have been carefully discussed with them, and their advice and suggestions always taken. They have given your officers loyal support and encouragement. To me the friendships formed, and the associations made, during my year as president will ever remain, the bright spots in my banking life.

I am deeply grateful to the bankers of Iowa for having elected me to this high position, and trust that for many years to come, I may have the privilege of meeting them each year, as a "private in the ranks," and doing what I can to aid in the work of the Association.

PUSHING A. B. A. MEMBERSHIP IN IOWA

During the year that President George S. Parker of the Live Stock Exchange National at Sioux City has been A. B. A. vice-president there has been kept up a continual movement for an enlarged membership list. At last reports Iowa had but a few members to secure to qualify an additional man on the A. B. A. executive council. Mr. Parker in addition to being a successful banker has personal qualities which have enabled him to accomplish this acceptable work for the big association. But one vacancy will occur this year from that state, which comes from the certain elevation of Chairman Arthur Reynolds to the vice-presidency, but an additional member is expected to be qualified by the time the national convention will meet in Detroit. Mr. Parker has had assistance from several ambitious gentlemen patriotic enough to be willing to serve their state on the Big Council.

JAMES E. HAMILTON

IF YOU HAVE NO CORRESPONDENT

IN CINCINNATI

We will welcome the opportunity of proving to you the benefits which will accrue from forming a connection with us

Director George E. Allen at Cedar Rapids

Banking in Iowa is superlatively sound and comparatively simple. Agriculture is the foundation of your wealth and you have no overshadowing metropolis to complicate the social and economic conditions of the commonwealth. Iowa bankers as represented in this convention certainly know their business as their business is now conducted, and if the theory is assumed that banking methods and banking men in Iowa will never change, there is no apparent need for any such education as the American Institute of Banking provides. But Iowa bankers will change and so will Iowa banking. There is no better way to learn banking than by years of personal experience such as the leading bankers of this state have undergone, but there is a shorter and more accessible way. Education is mostly acquired through experience, but experience need not necessarily be personal. Students may learn through the experience of others. Indeed other people's experience is the basis of most education. In realization of such conditions, the American Institute of Banking conducts a course of study covering the theory and practice of banking and such principles of law and economics as pertain to the banking business. The aim is to furnish elementary knowledge to thousands rather than advanced knowledge to hundreds or less. The study course contains nothing except what every banker, from president to messenger, must know to achieve or deserve and degree of success. Such knowledge may be obtained in various ways, but the Institute way is the most direct and the least expensive in time and energy and money.

The constitutional object of the Institute is the education of bankers in banking and the establishment and maintenance of a recognized standard of education by means of official examinations and the issuance of certificates of graduation. To qualify students for official examinations for Institute certificates, which are termed final examinations, the Institute provides a standard course of study in the form of serial lesson pamphlets and collateral exercises. No additional text-literature is required. Such course of study requires at least one hundred hours of class or correspondence work under approved instructors. The first part of the course considers the subjects of "Wealth and Money," "Banks and Banking," "Bank Accounting," "Loans and Discounts," "Stocks and Bonds," "Clearing Houses," "Saving Banks," "Trust Companies" and a final examination reviewing the foregoing lessons in banking. The second part of the course considers commercial law in general and banking law in particular, with special reference to negotiable instruments. The lesson pamphlets pertaining to Law cover the "Laws of Contracts," "Agency and Trusteeship," "Sales and Bailments," "Partnerships and Corporations," "Negotiable Instruments and Their Execution," "Transfer of Negotiable Instruments," "Parties to Negotiable Instruments," "Insolvency and the Bankruptcy Law" and a final examination reviewing the foregoing lessons in Law.

Instruction in the course of study provided by the Institute is conducted in accordance with local and individual circumstances. In suitable cities educational societies known as Chapters are organized and conducted. Elsewhere the correspondence method of instruction is employed. The success of city chapters has conveyed the idea that the Institute is a city proposition and correspondence study is therefore not yet appreciated. City chapters possess the charm of personal association, but correspondence instruction invariably delivers the "goods." In such work each student is supplied with the serial lesson pamphlets and collateral exercises. The exercises in connection with each lesson are submitted to instructors whenever done. The work of students thus produced is corrected and returned with such criticisms and suggestions as may be helpful in each case. Average students get little benefit from books alone. What most of them need is a teacher to direct and encourage them. The usefulness of a teacher is not so much to impart specific information as to stimulate the ambition and interest of students and to systematize and verify their work. Institute text-literature thus provides educational food. Examinations are the process of digestion. The mind as well as the body requires exercise and the student who ducks or dodges examination is like the dyspeptic who bolts his food or the athlete who side-steps his training. To shirkers of work and bluffers unwilling to have their work tested the Institute offers nothing but the satisfaction of being in good society. To young bankers of ambition, persistence and system, however, it paves the way to success otherwise unattainable.

PART III

The first bank in Junction City was opened by Hale & Kirkendall about May 1, 1866. The name soon changed to Hale & Rice. It came to an end in a very peculiar way. In March, 1868, a contractor named Rawalle at work on the construction of the Kansas Pacific came in on the train after banking hours with $15,000 on his person. He desired to leave it with the bank. The time lock on the inside of the safe had been closed for the night and it was concluded to put the money inside the outer door. In the morning the outer door of the safe was open and the $15,000 gone. The banker's residence, it was alleged, was entered in the night and the key taken from the banker's pantaloons. It spread suspicion and ruin and was a mystery which worried the community for years and is still unsettled.

The firm of Streeter & Strickler at Junction City were very heavy contractors with the government for freighting and such supplies as hay and corn. Hundreds of men living on the plains were in the employ of this firm. It was on the eve of the winter of 1863 or the winter of 1864 that Streeter & Strickler had accumulated about $200,000 of government vouchers. Strickler went to Leavenworth to get the money (government greenbacks now). A combine had been formed to squeeze him out of a very respectable shave. After several days resistance he returned to Junction City without the money. This spread consternation along the border, as all had some interest in the matter and badly needed their pay. About seventy-five gathered one day in front of the Streeter & Strickler store. Strickler appeared on the steps to make them a talk. He told them the story of the combine at Leavenworth and begged them to give him time to beat it, assuring them that in addition to the squeeze at Leavenworth, a squeeze at home would ruin them all. He invited them all in to examine the paper he held against the government. After being satisfied that the firm had the stuff the crowd proposed that if they could have some winter clothing they would wait. The next morning Strickler was on the stage for Leavenworth. He shipped $10,000 worth of clothing to Junction City and handed it over the counter as fast as it could be carried away. In a few weeks the trouble at Leavenworth was over and everybody got their pay. The firm of Streeter & Strickler was a great one, covering about all the plains. They were not very prudent, but quite useful, exhibiting the general utility demanded of all successful business men at that time. They are supposed to be the first to use the word, "Everything." The Democrats made three failures in establishing a newspaper in the town. This firm asked the Democrats to stand aside and let the Republicans try it. The Democrats did so, and were always afterwards fair and loyal to the enterprise, and I was carried on the payroll as a clerk in the sore while setting type and making a newspaper. Another republican merchant in the town likewise furnished a second printer. This lasted two years, when the paper was placed on its own feet. A joker from the East settled near Solomon and, struck with their advertisement "everything," in a very formal manner ordered a $1,000 bull. The firm very seriously reported that they were out of that line of bulls but expected to have one any day. They telegraphed to Illinois for such a bull and in a few days it was delivered at Solomon. The man who attempted the joke was equal to the occasion, took the bull and paid for it. The firm occasionally differed on local matters, and in one city election both took money from the same till drawer to spend against each other. The man who settled their business told me that their books showed over $3,000 a year charged to charity. Streeter & Strickler in the early days of the war issued a great quantity of scrip, which the soldiers would use for lighting their pipes; which I suppose entitles them to this mention in a banking paper. They served their time well.

The present Kansas banking law was passed by the legislature of 1891. The first bank commissioner was Charles F. Johnson of Osaloosa, 1891-1893; then followed John W. Briedenthal of Chetopa, 1893-1900; Morton Albaugh of Kingman, 1901-1904; William S. Albright, Leavenworth, 1904-1905; John Q. Royce, Phillipsburg, 1905-1908; William S. Albright, 1908-1909; Joseph N. Dolley, Maple Hill, 1909. The first call for a statement from the banks under the supervision of the banking department was made October 13, 1891. At that time there were four hundred and fourteen state and private banks reporting. According to the first statement there were in the banks deposits to the amount of $15,773,438.82. The last call, April 2, 1912, shows that there are 896 state banks in Kansas, holding deposits amounting to $102,128,200.44. February 20, 1912, there were 210 national banks in Kansas, holding deposits on that date of $83,632,548.48. January 31, 1912, there were 238 postal savings banks in Kansas with nearly 5,000 depositors and holding $310,000. This makes a total of cash on hand of $186,070,748.92. On April 18, 1912, twenty-five banks in Kansas City, Missouri, held deposits amounting to $125,833,980.41. Inasmuch as Kansas City was fifty years ago a portion of the same unbroken prairie as Kansas, and a large per cent of her deposits are undoubtedly Kansas money, this makes a grand total of $311,904,729.33. Wonder what the early day friends whose banking seemed to be interminably mixed with freighting and contracts, mules and oxen would think of this showing.

But in this latter day flow of money made possible by the right conclusion of the contest carried on in Kansas, we seem to be out wholly and absolutely. I have always had a great interest in the denominational schools of Kansas, and at one time was quite familiar with the difficulties of the managers in keeping them going. A few years ago I called attention to the fact that for a period of four years I watched the benefactions usually published at the end of the year. Beginning with the year 1899 there was given to schools, colleges, churches and charities in the United States a sum each year ranging from $79,749,956 to $123,888,732, and not a dollar to Kansas. I protested vigorously against this condition but was very shortly squelched by the newspapers with the statement that Kansas was able to take care of her own. This is not begging but a thoroughly established system by which rich men contribute of their surplus to the public good. Kansas has made a great showing, not only in prevailing over war and pestilence, but in liberally providing for her own. But there is room for much more than we can do. I advanced the idea that we are not in this latter day distribution because we are such a lot of braggarts and blowhards that we give a real millionaire the blues, and for this I was charged with treason. These great gifts in the country throughout the year continue to go where there already are millions and to be quite neglectful of Kansas. Our constant and extravagant boasting has closed this door against us.

The money question in Kansas was in remote years reckless and somewhat discreditable. Most everybody will recall the sign "Money to Loan" decorating the shop of some fellow who was not trusted at home with a beefsteak, and who let the money out because of the extent of commission, and not from any honest business judgment. Many homesteaders and pre-emptors, as soon as they completed their title, would place a mortgage on the land for all some conscienceless agent would give, and then skip, and thus Kansas' credit was greatly injured.

But the question: "What is the matter with Kansas?" is still with us and with no satisfying solution. This is an important gathering representing a great interest, and may understand this condition. We are not growing in population. Thousands and thousands of people have passed us for worse locations. The year 1909 gave us a gain of 50,692 over 1908. But 1910 shows a loss of 16,844 from 1909, and 1911 a loss of 4,332 from 1910. Counting the birth rate on the side of gain, this shows a very serious loss. And it is unfortunate that Commissioner Dolley's anti Blue Sky scheme could not be extended to protect our own people who have invested and those who are leaving, against the swamps of Florida, and the mesquite, cactus, sage-brush, alkali and orange ranches of the southwest. History is said to repeat itself, and the sucker of to-day is easier than the sucker of territorial days who bought town shares. But, Mr. Dolley is not omnipresent nor is he the personal guardian of each individual, and so gossip about a month ago had much to say about $28,000 leaving Topeka and going into a hole as certain as the descent of the Titanic. Untold thousands have gone out of Kansas in this way—how can we stop this waste? It was Theodore Parker who said Kansas would have two million population in 1900. The greatest need of the hour is to get Kansas out of the fool column. I spent seven weeks in July and August, 1911, on the Pacific coast from Seattle to San Francisco. What do you suppose was the style of news found in the associate press reports from Kansas? Two and three times a week there would be mention of the Mayoress of Hunnewell, with whom the city council would not meet, and the woman in Iola who could not work on the rock pile because there were no bloomers in town to fit her. The only legitimate news I found in seven weeks was a three line item announcing the death of Congressman Mitchell. I remember the statement of Bank Commissioner Dolley that, during the American Bankers Association convention in New Orleans, the principal topic in the variety shows was the Kansas tar party. State Auditor Davis was in various parts of the East for a week at that time and all the news he saw from Kansas was about the tar party. Last fall there was a half-baked tramp called the "Kansas poet" down in New York, said to be representing the literati of Kansas, acting as affinity to another man's wife. This loafer averaged half a column two or three times a week in the associated press, even telling us how they went out in the brush to live over in Jersey, to commune with nature. And when the woman shook him for another affinity the world was given a formal announcement by telegraph. Now, please watch this and I think you will come to my conclusion. A rag picker was driving along Minnesota avenue in Kansas City, Kansas, and some one on the sidewalk made a remark which offended him. He replied: "I am not as big a fool as I look; I have $200 in the bank." So Kansas is not as big a fool as she looks; she has $186,070,748.92 in the bank and $2,777,073,762 of taxable property.

Some people are so enthusiastic that they can see only their own side of a controversy. It has been my practice all my life before engaging in any scheme or fight to figure on what the other fellow could do. We have always indulged in some very remarkable agricultural advertising, all of which has been correct, and the best we could do; but what is the other fellow doing? I had an eye-opener recently from the very modest state of Nebraska, whose officials recognize the superiority of Kansas over Nebraska only in the art of advertising. According to the comparisons made by the friends in Nebraska we may have found the answer to the conundrum, "What is the matter with Kansas?" in the condition of the advertiser who put up a great talk and failed to show the goods, and was caught, as is shown in our stand-still or loss of population. The State Board of Agriculture of Nebraska issues the following:

"Kansas raised more wheat than did Nebraska last year (1911), but Nebraska raised more bushels per acre. Kansas raised more barley than Nebraska, but Nebraska over twice as much per acre." The above are the only products of consequence in which Kansas raised a larger quantity than did Nebraska, and it shows that with the same acreage, Nebraska is far ahead of the Sunflower state from every standpoint. Nebraska raised about seven bushels of corn per acre more than Kansas. Nebraska raised more oats per acre than did Kansas. Nebraska raised more rye per acre than did Kansas. Nebraska raised nearly twice as many bushels of potatoes to the acre as did Kansas. Nebraska raised eleven more bushels of flax to the acre than did Kansas. Nebraska raised five more tons of sugar beets to the acre than did Kansas.

"Kansas produced an average per capita value of her agricultural products of $167.32 last year. Nebraska produced a per capita value in agricultural products of $277.75. Kansas produced from her agricultural acres wealth to the amount of $11.28 per cultivated acre. Nebraska went her better by producing $25.47 per cultivated acre. Kansas produced from her total agricultural and live stock industry $316.00 per capita. Nebraska produced from her total agricultural and live stock business $451.00."

The Nebraska friends claim that with less than two-thirds the population of Kansas and about one half the cultivated acreage of Kansas, Nebraska in 1911 obtained $64,668,790 more from crops and live stock than did Kansas. Now if these figures are true what is the matter with our acres? Our people work as hard as any other people. If the Nebraska (Continued on page 21)

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

WISCONSIN

Many a familiar face is missing in the different Milwaukee banks this week, the owners being engaged in migrating through the state on the Merchants and Manufacturers Association special over the Milwaukee road. The behavior of the banker contingent among the hundred Milwaukee business men who make up the party will remain a matter of conjecture until the delegation returns on Sunday night to give the stay-at-homes a detailed account of the trip.

Socialist Savings Bank

A brand new enterprise, a socialist savings bank, will take its place among Milwaukee financial institutions during the month of July. While the institution is not a party enterprise, in the strictest sense of the word, as for instance, the Milwaukee Leader, the socialist daily, the incorporators are almost without exception leaders in the socialist movement in Milwaukee. The bank will be known as the Commonwealth Mutual Savings Bank of Milwaukee and will be housed in the center of the present financial district on East Water Street adjoining the new home of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank on the north. C. B. Whitnall, former city treasurer, will be in active management. It is announced that a meeting of stockholders will be held within ten days, when officers will be elected and final preparations made for an opening. The new institution will handle no checking accounts, transacting all business on a savings basis. The incorporators, of which there are fifty all told, include: Henry Campbell, William J. Alldridge, Joseph Mesiroff, J. J. Handley, J. H. Vint, Frederic Heath, F. W. Rehfeld, Richard Elsner, Paul Smith, Martin Plehn, W. R. Gaylord, Edmund T. Melms, L. A. Arnold, William A. Arnold, Daniel W. Hoan, Harry E. Briggs, Harvey Dee Brown, Carl D. Thompson, J. C. Kleist, and C. B. Whitnall. Three-fourths of the incorporators are or were socialist city or county officials.

Milwaukee Notes

A recent newspaper report credits Milwaukee banks with thousands of dollars in dormant savings accounts whose original owners have long since disappeared, leaving amounts which have assumed considerable proportions over a long period of years.

The Northern Trust Company of Chicago, which has been operating in Milwaukee, filed notice of withdrawal from this city on Friday.

The special sleeper idea appealed so strongly to the Milwaukee delegates to the meeting of Group 6, W. B. A., at Antigo last week that arrangements have been made for another special to the meeting of Group 3 at Shawano, leaving Milwaukee on the night of June 11th.

The Wisconsin Trust Company offers for deferred delivery the unsold balance of $365,000 City of Milwaukee 4½ per cent bonds, due January 1, 1913, to 1932, the entire issue of which was taken over by the institution. The company also is boosting in the Milwaukee market the Pacific Power and Light Company first mortgage 5 per cent gold bonds.

To acquaint the public with its methods of encouraging crop improvement, the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce has issued a general invitation to a meeting on the pit floor next Monday, at which Prof. R. A. Moore, head of the agronomy department, University of Wisconsin, and J. C. Murray, chairman of the grain improvement committee of the Council of North American Grain Exchanges, will be the principal speakers. The meeting will be the first of its kind ever held in Milwaukee.

Sheboygan Bank Will Reopen

The German Bank of Sheboygan which was closed and placed in the hands of the state bank examiner two weeks ago will reopen on June 25th, according to State Bank Commissioner A. E. Kuolt, who said that half a million dollars in stock will be placed. Pending the investigation of the affairs of the Sheboygan institution, the Bank of Ironwood, Ironwood, Mich., has closed its doors. The two institutions were closely allied and, following a run of $30,000 on the Michigan bank, business was suspended indefinitely, tying up municipal and public school funds. The institution carries deposits of $367,640 and it is said that its closing may seriously hamper local financial affairs.

State News of Interest

The meeting of Group 6, W. B. A., at Antigo last week resulted in the election of the following officers for the ensuing year: President, W. N. Raymond, Merchants State Bank of Rhinelander; vice-president, F. P. Werner, Bradley Bank, Tomahawk; secretary-treasurer, Edward Krembe, Citizens National Bank, Merrill.

LAKE COUNTY BANKERS ORGANIZE

The banks of Lake County held a meeting on June 4th at the Deer Path Inn, Lake Forest, for the purpose of effecting a county federation. Out of the eighteen banks of the county fourteen were represented in the attendance. The bankers were tendered a luncheon, and after the meeting they were given an automobile ride through the residence district of Lake Forest. C. F. Wright, of Libertyville, was elected president of the organization; Frank W. Read of Lake Forest and Clarence E. Smith of Waukegan respectively were elected vice-president and treasurer, and Duncan G. Bellows of Zion City was chosen treasurer. Various matters of interest to bankers, such as the handling of collections, overdrafts, and other subjects which need uniform action and co-operation were discussed. A resolution was passed providing for the annual meeting of the federation on the third Tuesday of May. Another meeting is to be held within a few weeks, and in the meantime the secretary is to communicate with the four banks not represented at the meeting, so that all of the banking institutions of Lake County will be represented at the next meeting. F. W. Woodruff, vice-president of the First National at Joliet, spoke on the advantages of county federations and assisted in the work of organization.

GROUP 8 AT JACKSONVILLE

The Hon. Andrew Russel, nominee of the republican party for state treasurer, welcomed the bankers to the Jacksonville meeting of Group 8, and the Hon. T. S. Chapman of Jerseyville made the response. These two talks and the routine proceedings of the meeting lasted until 12:30, when dinner was announced at the Country Club, at which place the afternoon session was held. There was, besides the address of R. W. Bonyngue of Colorado, an address on the "Improvement of Rivers and Harbors" by Thomas Wilkinson, president of the Upper Mississippi River Improvement Association, Burlington, Iowa, and another on "Good Roads, their Cost and Value," by Homer J. Tyce of Greenview, chairman of the joint committee on county and township organizations in Illinois. After the adjournment of the afternoon session there was a buffet luncheon served at the Country Club. There also was an evening session at which local questions were discussed by those present. Among the distinguished visitors from out of the group district, in addition to those from Chicago already mentioned as having departed on a special train, were George Woodruff, president of the First National Bank of Joliet, and S. E. Bradt, head of the good roads committee.

GROUP 8, INDIANA

At Princeton, Indiana, on June 7th a special train on the Southern Railway carried the delegates to the group meeting held in that city around the Southern Belt Road on an inspection trip through the shops of the Southern Railway. G. M. Howser, master mechanic of the road, conducted the tour. Arriving at the fair grounds at 2:30, the speaking program was opened by Prof. William B. Scott of the University of Wisconsin, who was followed by William G. Edens of Chicago and "Dick" Miller of Indianapolis. Dinner was served at the Elks Club.

SUES ON BANK BOND AT MACON

Suit has been entered by the Citizens Bank of Macon, Mo., against the United States Fidelity Guaranty Company of Baltimore to recover $10,000 on the bond of Lon Hayner, cashier of the bank at the time of its suspension and to whose incompetency and irregularities are attributed the embarrassment of the bank. It is charged that the bond was given as a guaranty for the faithful performance of his duties as cashier during the term of his office, and that, through his injudicious loans, manipulation of books and papers and irregularities in various transactions, the bank was forced to suffer a loss of more than $18,000.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, June 5.—Absolutely nothing new, according to St. Louis bankers, occurred to mark the past week in the local monetary situation. With some of the banks a fair amount of borrowing activity was reported, while elsewhere there were complaints of much quietness. However, there has been no campaign to stimulate borrowing, as at this particular season St. Louis financial institutions begin to make ready for the fall crop movement, and already a decided preference is being shown for commitments of ninety days and under. It is observed that only the choicest names or inducements in the way of higher rates will coax out funds for long time. The competition for loans maturing on and before September 1st has had a tendency to soften the market somewhat, while firmness exists on everything beyond that date. The more pessimistic gentlemen hold the political situation up as the chief dark cloud in the horizon. They hold that things can not pick up until after the election, and even then they may not revive if the result is a certain way. In fact, they seem to think that it is bound to be a "certain way" no matter which party is victorious. Merchants and big corporations, it is argued, are unwilling in the present uncertainty to do much, and the hand to mouth policy of the past weary months must continue for an indefinite time. On the other hand, the hopeful say that the election, regardless of how it goes, is sure to have a tranquilizing effect. No one man can work damage to the country, especially with the present mixed layout of congress. A decided revival is looked for when politics are out of the way. Meantime, however, in spite of the pessimistic talk there are numerous signs of activity, principal among which is the bank clearings. For last month total clearings for St. Louis were $350,325,543, a gain of approximately $35,000,000 over the corresponding period a year ago. Another hopeful factor is the crop outlook. The past ten days have increased the improvement in all crops, weather having been ideal, despite reports of the hired crop killers to the contrary. The Missouri state report for May was ultra optimistic. It showed an improvement in the condition of wheat, and excellent progress for corn, with an increased acreage in the latter cereal. Other crops of all kinds, especially fruit, will in instances show record yields.

B. F. Yoakum Optimistic

B. F. Yoakum, chairman of the board of the Frisco, who passed through St. Louis after an extended trip through the Southwest, is extremely hopeful both of the crop and business outlook in that region. "For those who have seen," said Mr. Yoakum, "there is little doubt as to the promising condition of the crops. I found people of the Southwest too busy looking after their own interests this year to be much interested in politics, despite the unusual developments and issues in that line. The population seems satisfied to devote their attention to matters nearer home. Not in years have I found as few dark spots in the Southwest as on this trip. The crops are fine, and business is going to pick up in a short while. The railroads are making big preparations to handle the crops, and Texas farmers are feeling mighty gratified over the prospects. I believe that after the elections we will not only see a return to normal or better in regular business, but the beginning of much new enterprise."

Believed in St. Louis Banks

Joseph Campbell, president of the State Bank of Rolla, Mo., who died last week, was a firm believer in the future of St. Louis financial institutions. He was a heavy holder of St. Louis bank stocks, most of which were purchased way below their present market values. Mr. Campbell was a native of Ireland, but came to this country as a boy, settling in Rolla. He took a prominent part in early railroad building in Missouri, and was founder of the Rolla Bank. He retired from active business several years ago, and spent his time traveling, maintaining headquarters at the Mississippi Valley Trust Company in this city. His large estate is left to his sons and daughters, and his will provides that it shall be held in trust for the men until they are forty years old.

Living Cost Advancing

According to a digest of trade conditions issued by the National Bank of Commerce, the cost of living has increased nearly 4 per cent during the past four months. The average price of all commodities continues to advance, and this region is experiencing the highest commodity prices for more than a generation. On the other hand, the report states, the wage increase in the same period has almost offset the price of articles. An important feature in the situation is the quickening of the building industry, especially in the smaller cities. In general, it is pointed out, the best business conditions are to be found in the extreme East, the Southwest and the far West, while throughout the Central West the quietest zone is to be found.

Cotton-Seed Men Gather

The Interstate Cotton-Seed Crushers Association, comprising all the cotton-seed oil mills of the United States, refiners of cotton-seed oil, soap makers and firms that supply the oil-mill trade with machinery and supplies, held its sixteenth annual convention here this week. The meeting was attended by about 700 delegates, and was the most successful in the history of the association. All told, concerns representing an investment of something like $200,000,000 were represented. Delegates were as a rule rather optimistic relative to their industry and business generally. They have little to fear from politics or the tariff, but say that the political unrest has a depressing effect on their industry, along with its harmful effect on general business. The consensus of opinion was that present indications are for a large cotton crop this season, though it is a bit early to prognosticate at this time.

Big Treasury Balance

There were $4,505,120 in the Missouri state treasury at the close of business on May 31st, which is the record sum ever controlled by the state, although this total was nearly reached back in the '80's, when the old Hannibal & St. Joseph Railroad paid in $3,000,000 at one time, that being credit the state had loaned when the railway was being started. Of the balance now, $728,998 belongs to the revenue fund; $1,796,839 to public schools and $213,598 to good roads funds. Automobile license receipts total $105,927. Incidentally the state treasurer's books show that Missouri received $12,375 in interest on the state's deposits in banks in May. This is the greatest amount ever received in a single month.

Five Years for Bank Clerk

Andrew C. Taylor, formerly teller of the Third National, pleaded guilty to the theft of $9,594, as charged in federal indictment, and was on Monday sentenced by Judge Dyer to five years in the penitentiary. Taylor is little more than 21 years old, and has been married five months. On account of these considerations the minimum punishment was imposed.

Bank and trust company stocks have been firm for the most part, with good advances in spots. Mississippi Valley Trust has had a rise, selling at $320, the highest figure touched since 1907. There has been quiet buying of financial issues, that list offering numerous bargains at present levels.

CHICAGO AND PUJO COMMITTEE

The Chicago Clearing House Association has received from the Pujo committee, which is conducting an investigation into the New York "money trust" and the banks of the country, a series of questions to be answered and returned to Washington. The object of the inquiry appears to be to ascertain the extent of the authority which the clearing house committee exercises over the banks with reference to their business conduct and also the power which the committee has to admit or reject members.

Answers to the questions are being prepared and will be forwarded to Washington. It is understood also that the clearing house committee has no objection to sending a representative to appear before the Pujo committee and set forth the operations and extent of authority which the committee exercises. Chicago from the first has treated the inquiry as of serious intent and the committee with the greatest courtesy. The committee began hearings in New York on Thursday, owing to inability of some of the witnesses to go to Washington.

GROWING DAVENPORT BANK

President Albert F. Dawson and his hard-working cashier, L. J. Yaggy, are being congratulated on the growth of deposits as shown by a recent statement of the First National of Davenport. The gain in twelve months has been from one and one-half millions to two millions, and 40 per cent increases in deposits within twelve months are rare—even in Iowa. President Dawson, as everybody knows, served six years in congress from the second

Iowa district, and has applied the same energy and forcefulness to the banking business that he did to his congressional duties. His time has been encroached upon considerably, owing to the never-ending demand for his services as a public speaker. He has addressed gatherings of business men all over the state, and attended several group meetings where he was on the program. His familiarity with financial legislation at Washington enables him to speak effectively on what to many bankers are difficult subjects.

The First National of Davenport enjoys the distinction of having been the first bank of its kind in operation in the United States under the national banking act. For forty-nine years it has occupied the same busy corner in Davenport, and two years ago erected a handsome six-story building of its own on this location. Its earned surplus exceeds its capital stock, thus putting it in the front rank of the strongest commercial banks in Iowa.

SUPERIOR, WIS., BOOMER

A. J. Wentzel, cashier of the United States National Bank at Superior, Wis., speaks in glowing terms of the growth and development of his home city. He is very enthusiastic about the steel plant which recently has acquired a large acreage, intending to build a belt line and to locate subsidiary plants thereon. Mr. Wentzel is very much interested in the agricultural committee of the American Bankers Association. He is chairman of the publicity committee of the Commercial Club of Superior, and always takes a deep interest in public questions and matters tending to promote civic welfare.

Editorial Comment

MORAL SUPPORT FROM IOWA

President Edward J. Curtin of the Iowa Bankers Association, in his annual address at the Cedar Rapids convention, came out strongly in favor of bank supervision and requested the Iowa association, which is the largest in point of numbers, to go fairly upon record on the subject. Mr. Curtin is among the very first to advance unqualifiedly this doctrine in a state where the private bankers are entrenched almost as strongly as they have been in years past in the state of Illinois. In presenting the subject Mr. Curtin said:

"The recent suspension of three private banks in our state, together with the agitation for their control, that is now being made in our sister-state of Illinois, has brought to the minds of the people of Iowa the thought that sooner or later this question must be faced. Iowa bankers have conflicting opinions on this subject, but deep down in the hearts of most of them is the settled conviction that no institution should be trusted with the care of the funds of the community without its being organized and conducted under the banking laws either of the United States or of the state in which it operates."

Mr. Curtin was aware of the prejudice that exists in banking organizations against the bringing up for discussion of such topics, partly for the reason that the bankers are sensitive about condemning the methods or practices of their fellow bankers. This especially is true when the fellow banker is a fellow member of the state association and contributes to its support and protective work along with the state and national banks. President Curtin, however, waved all of this sentiment aside and pronounced boldly in favor of state supervision, asserting repeatedly that "banking is not a private business." Neither would he have the name "bank" used by any but authorized banks. "If the assets of the bank are good, inspection and investigation will better rather than injure them; if they are not good, the sooner they are made good or put out of business the better for the state," is one of the arguments advanced by Mr. Curtin. He does not believe that depositors should be allowed to suffer complete loss as so frequently happens when a private bank fails. Not being under inspection, the private banker can continue in business until either he has lost all or has been given time to make his escape to a friendly country.

President Curtin demanded of the members of the association that they go squarely upon record and instruct the next executive council to draw a conservative banking bill and present it to the next legislature. He did not favor a drastic measure by any means, but called attention to the fact that the public has been aroused as never before and that if the bankers do not prepare and offer for passage a bill which will meet the requirements of the public, a much more drastic measure will likely be forthcoming from some other source. Now that Illinois and Iowa practically have joined hands in this matter, there will remain no "open territory" for private banking in any of the states of the Middle West. If these two great farming communities put their seal of approval upon universal supervision and inspection of all forms of banking it will make easier work for the uniform law commissioners and for the American Bankers Association committee on universal banking laws when their measures are ready for the legislatures.

JOINING THE PROGRESSIVES

The great state of Georgia, so far as her banking interests are concerned, has decided to join the progressives in association matters by employing a paid secretary, who will open permanent state headquarters. This new movement has been held back in a number of states owing to the fact that some competent banker was willing over a period of fifteen or twenty years to devote his time to looking after the detail matters of association work. In some cases the old secretaries grudgingly gave up the position owing to its associations, and in some cases owing to business opportunities which it brought about. L. P. Hillyer is considered one of the ablest bankers in the South. For twenty years he was secretary of his state association, and devoted a marvelous amount of his time to conducting it properly. His great ability as a public speaker put him in demand everywhere, and those who have heard him recite "When Bryan Came to Butte" never will forget it, neither will they willingly ever miss an opportunity to hear it again. Elsewhere in this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER will be found in part Mr. Hillyer's valedictory at the close of his long engagement. It is well worth reading and contains an inspiration for other states, which, no matter how efficient their present arrangement, will greatly benefit by having a secretary whose full time will be at their command with permanent headquarters established. In the case of Mr. Hillyer he was elected unanimously to be first vice-president of his state association, and next year will be made its president. There comes a time in the history of each state organization when its growth and the growth of its secretary demand a change,

The modern up-to-date method is to have a paid secretary who has been trained and educated along secretarial lines. He must understand insurance, bonding, purchasing, and have considerable executive ability. Economical ideas soon tell in the administrative affairs of the office. Few bankers having the capacity for the position really have the time to spare from their other duties to conduct the association matters properly. The time has come when no state long will be satisfied with less than 100 per cent efficiency in its organization. Missouri already has reached that point and a number of other states are pressing forward to divide the honor. It has been predicted that the new secretary for Georgia—Haynes MacFadden—will not be the last to reach that point of efficiency which is the dream of every state secretary.

SHORT AND TO THE POINT

Secretary P. W. Hall has shown possession of "the masterful hand" in preparing for the big Iowa convention held at Cedar Rapids this week. He presented a very fine list of speakers—probably the best to be obtained for the week in which the meeting was held. He had the tact and good judgment to prevail upon them to present short papers. Attention is called to two of them reprinted in this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER. For conciseness of phrase and purity of logic it is doubtful whether anything read at a bankers' convention this year can compare more than favorably with the talk of George E. Allen, educational director for the American Institute of Banking, or with the fine presentation of the numerical system of the American Bankers Association by Charles R. McKay, head transit manager for the First National Bank of Chicago. It is but fitting that he who would urge a short cut to complete education in banking or provide a quick method for recording transit items should do it with the fewest number of words. In fine, each of these two gentlemen has presented in tablet what appears to be an unanswerable argument in favor, on the one hand, of the saving of years of time in securing a general education in banking, and on the other in cutting down the necessary labor of recording transit items by from 25 to 50 per cent. The man, the method and the brevity; each carries a lesson to other state secretaries and to other speakers who will be called upon to address similar conventions.

SAFE INVESTMENTS FOR BANKS

To be able to obtain from $4\frac{1}{2}$ to $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent income in such an easy money market as has recently been experienced is unusual, but the latest bulletin of investment bond offerings issued by the investment banking firm of D. Arthur Bowman & Company, Third National Bank Building, St. Louis, contains some of the most inviting items seen in some time, and would help to solve the investment problem for many banks and investors.

Bankers desiring a secure "second line of reserve," or investors who must place their funds to the very best advantage, both from the standpoint of security and income, are bound to be very much interested in the latest list of securities, particularly since there are several new listings embraced which are bound to achieve decided popularity with the rank and file of investing institutions and individuals. On request this Municipal and Corporation circular will be sent to any address.

safety deposit vaults. The main banking-room contains about 20,000 square feet. Placing the vaults and furnishing the banking-rooms will require several months, and it is not probable the bank will be able to move into its new quarters before October 1st. The State Bank moved into its present quarters May 1, 1897, or a little more than fifteen years ago. At that time its deposits were $2,261,381. The last published statement of the bank, that of April 19th, showed $26,025,300 deposits. In this regard the bank has been multiplied about twelve times in the fifteen-year period. In the same time, the capital stock has been increased from $500,000 to $1,500,000 and the surplus and undivided profits have risen from $233,284 to $2,200,588. The dividends on the stock fifteen years ago were 6 per cent; they now are 12 per cent. The State Bank was started about thirty years ago by the late H. A. Haugan and John R. Lindgren, who were responsible for its early success. The management now is in the hands of L. A. Goddard, president; Harry A. Haugan, vice-president, and H. S. Henschen cashier. The bank ranks No. 12 in size among the seventy or more banks in the city and is regarded as exceptionally strong.

DIRECT CONNECTIONS WITH ALL IMPORTANT IOWA TOWNS

Dean C. F. Curtis of Iowa State College at Cedar Rapids

The bankers associations of the Middle West, particularly those of Minnesota, Illinois and Iowa, are entitled to great credit for their active efforts in behalf of agricultural education. The report of the first annual conference of the bankers committees on agricultural education, held at Minneapolis and St. Paul last October, is the best educational report put out by any organization in recent years. This report is of value because it recognizes a situation vital to the welfare and prosperity of all of our people, and, with characteristic business decision, it makes for immediate results in improvement of educational conditions. The interest and activity of the bankers are the most hopeful movement for a sound system of vocational education that has yet appeared.

No body of men, as a class, carries a greater influence or has a more genuine interest in economic or educational problems, along practical lines. No class of business or professional men is in such close relations to rural communities or has the confidence of the farmer to so large a degree as the bankers. No problem more vitally concerns the banker from the standpoint of his future business interests.

Byron gave expression to the broad relation of agriculture when he said, "As the soil is, so is the heart of man." The banker might well say, as the soil is, so are the bank balances. There are more bank balances that are directly or indirectly traceable to the soil of the Mississippi Valley than to all other industries combined. There is nothing sadder nor more disheartening than a people struggling for existence on an impoverished soil.

Most of the agricultural states of the Middle West have lost population during the last ten years, leaving out of account the large cities. This is not particularly alarming, but the great decline of school population in both rural and city schools is more significant and more alarming. Our public school system and policies are largely responsible for this loss. Senator Burton of Ohio, who has the reputation of having more knowledge of the present condition of high prices of the necessities now prevalent than any other man in America, is quoted as saying that one of the chief reasons is "the overproduction of non-producing citizens, and the tendency of people to become lazier and more wasteful." So far as agriculture is concerned, we shall probably have relatively fewer citizens engaged in agricultural production ten years from now, and still fewer twenty years from now, than we have to-day.

One hundred years ago, ninety per cent of the population of the United States lived on the farms. Fifty years ago, two-thirds of the population was in the country. To-day we have scarcely one-third of our population living on the farms. As our manufacturing and commercial enterprises expand, the proportion of people in the cities in relation to those in the country will increase still more. This in itself is not alarming, provided the farming is of the right kind and the land holders' heritage is not destroyed.

The primary purpose of a better agriculture is increased crop production. The railroads and grain dealers rejoice in increased prosperity to the farmer from this standpoint. A larger volume means more business.

But this is not all of the problem. We have indulged in too much senseless talk about the ability of the United States to feed the world. We will be put to the test to feed our own people within the next ten or twenty years. Indeed the cry of distress already has gone up, and we even now are importing foodstuffs. We have done too much exporting of raw material already. With every 150,000,000 bushels of wheat that we export, we give to foreign countries $20,000,000 worth of feedstuffs, $15,000,000 worth of fertility, and $8,000,000 worth of labor in milling. This is a profligate waste of capital and labor. If we have a surplus we should export only the flour, and retain the feedstuffs, fertility and labor for the enrichment of our own land.

Ten years ago, I spent a day in McLean County, Illinois, with Hon. L. H. Kerrick, one of the clearest headed, most logical farmers I have ever known. He called my attention to a piece of land that he had rented the year previous of a neighboring tenant farmer. The land was planted to corn. The rent price was half the crop. Mr. Kerrick bought the tenant's share, which was forty bushels per acre, at forty cents per bushel. Some of the tenant farmer's neighbors reminded him of the rental that he had paid for the use of that land, amounting as it did to $16 per acre. The balance of the land farmed by the tenant that year had been rented at $3.50 per acre. "Yes," said the tenant, "but do you know that I made more money farming Mr. Kerrick's land at $16 per acre than I would have made from the other land if it had been rent free?" The two fields were immediately adjoining and originally were exactly alike. One field had been farmed as a tenant grain farm. The other had been farmed as a live stock farm. One field had been marketing raw material; the other had been marketing a finished farm product. No nation ever became great agriculturally, commercially or intellectually, merely as a producer of raw materials.

This problem not alone is one of education. It has become a national problem. No agitation of this subject that merely stimulates agricultural production for a time ever will offer an adequate solution. The extension work, carrying immediate help to the producer of the farm, is of practical and immediate benefit. The plan to put a good teacher and demonstrator in each county will bring the work still closer to the people. But nothing short of an adequate and complete system of vocational education, including the trades and industries, will ever solve this problem. This must be provided in the public schools, or in special schools.

We need a federal policy and federal aid in giving impetus and definite form to this work just as has been done in case of the agricultural and mechanical colleges. A national problem should be solved by national legislation. There should be united effort on the part of federal, state and local forces. The instruction provided should be universal and of the kind to fit men for the highest efficiency in creative work. It should extend to the trades and industries as well as to agriculture. It should reach the farm home and the rural church.

It is not solely a question of making money. Rural depopulation and farm tenancy are most marked where agriculture is most prosperous. We will not have stability and permanency in American agriculture until the rural home becomes the best home in which to live, and the rural schools suited to the needs of rural life and as good in the grades offered as any city schools. The prosperous farmer prizes educational, social and religious advantages. If they cannot be had in the country he will move to town.

The present farm tenant system is a menace to American agriculture. The land owner is as much to blame for this system as the tenant. Under a system of longer tenure and more diversified farming, the tenant will become as much interested in good schools and churches, and as good a citizen in the community, as the owner. When land values become more stationary and land holders look to crop returns rather than advancing values for profits, our farm tenancy system will change.

The extension work in agriculture and home economics, which has met with popular favor, will be followed by engineering extension for the trades and industries. This movement is a long step in the direction of a system of general education along these lines.

We have over a thousand students taking the collegiate work in agriculture and home economics at the Iowa State College at Ames. We reach about ten thousand annually with our short course work. We conduct county farm demonstrations in ten or a dozen counties, and we soon will have twenty-five thousand boys and girls enrolled in agricultural club work. Yet, if we were to double this, or even reach every county with a short course, we scarcely would reach over five or ten per cent of the people of the state engaged in agricultural production. Besides that, the educational work that is to be of real service must

By Edgar P. Allen

Thornton Cooke, treasurer of the Fidelity Trust Co., probably keeps in as close touch with financial, industrial and agricultural conditions in this section as any banker in the Southwest. He comes in daily contact with those who are best posted on crop prospects, manufacturing output, and business operations generally. He expresses himself as highly gratified at the outlook for the immediate future. "I was talking only to-day," he remarked, "with President H. U. Mudge of the Rock Island, and if there is a railroad man who keeps in closer touch with what is going on than Mr. Mudge, I do not know who he is. Mr. Mudge reflects the very general optimism that seems to be prevalent and which is not affected by the disturbance of the most exciting political campaign the country has had since 1896. "The West is probably less affected by the average presidential campaign than any other section of the country, but the disturbance seems to be even less pronounced than usual this year. The consensus of opinion of financiers, railroad men and shrewd judges of business conditions generally is that the summer will be an extremely busy one and that before we know it we shall be in the throes of the greatest crop movement and industrial activity the country has had for years. It used to be that the country as a whole merely 'marked time' during the presidential campaign, at least until the nominations were made. But this year the business world hardly knows there is a campaign in progress. The heavy increase in bank clearings all through the West and Southwest shows that these sections are enjoying abundant prosperity. The Kansas City clearings for the first five months of 1912 show an increase of more than $16,600,000 over those for the corresponding five months of last year—not a sensational increase, to be sure, but very gratifying under all the circumstances. There is every reason to believe that this increase will be much greater from this time forward."

Banker with Great Memory

Joseph Talbert, vice-president of the National City Bank of New York, was a Kansas City visitor last week. He called on President E. F. Swinney of the First National and J. Z. Miller, Jr., of the Western Exchange Bank and Commerce Trust Co. Only twenty years ago Mr. Talbert was assistant cashier of a bank in San Angelo, Texas, at $60 a month. He went to a national bank at Fort Worth, became a national bank examiner and later went to Chicago. Among bankers throughout the country Mr. Talbert is noted for his phenomenal memory, to which his rapid rise from $60 a month to president of an institution with $25,000,000 capital and $200,000,000 deposits is attributed. It is said that Mr. Talbert can repeat without refreshing his memory the history of any important business firm in the fifty largest cities of the country.

Mr. Talbert has made a tour of the Middle West during the past couple of weeks and he returns East with renewed confidence in the prosperity of this section of the country. "The outlook could hardly be better," he remarked. "Crop prospects are most encouraging and everybody seems to be in an optimistic frame of mind."

Country Bankers and Good Roads

The country bankers of Oklahoma are endorsing most heartily the plans of Col. Sidney Suggs, Oklahoma highway commissioner, to connect up every county seat in the new state by means of good roads. Numerous meetings of commercial clubs have been held throughout the state, at which the bankers of the smaller towns, especially interested, have taken an active part. A state highway meeting will be held at Atoka June 10th, at which the bankers will be well represented by delegates enthusiastically advocating better roads. The bankers realize that accessibility is a condition precedent to prosperity and that without good roads the more important towns cannot be made trade centers, upon which the prosperity of the small town bankers so largely depend. The bankers are recognizing more and more the intimate relations that exist between the farmers, the bankers and the small town business men. Good roads are the solution of this triangular problem, and the bankers are only displaying ordinary business judgment in fostering the movement that holds out the certainty of wider advantages to each of the classes involved.

Western Securities in Favor

Henry C. Flower, president of the Fidelity Trust Co., has just returned from a foreign trip lasting three months. Mr. Flower kept in close touch with financial centers while abroad and returns with an increased enthusiasm over the outlook for western and southwestern securities.

"It was very gratifying to me," said Mr. Flower, "to find that securities based on western collateral are growing in favor of foreign financiers, as well as in that of the moneyed men of the American centers. Western and southwestern securities have always had a very encouraging stability, and it is especially pleasing to note that they are more than holding their own at a time of very general industrial unrest that necessarily tends to disturb the financial equilibrium. Some very big things have been accomplished within the past few months in the location of western securities in the foreign markets and the outlook for the future is growing brighter all the time."

Central West Notes

A prize of $1,000 has been offered by C. F. Colcord and Robert Galbreath for the best road on the interstate postal highway that extends from Arkansas City, Kan., through Oklahoma City to the Texas state line. Special interest is being taken in this particular enterprise and the bankers are lending every assistance in their power to help the good roads movement in all its departments.

The Kansas City (Mo.) bank clearings for the first five months of 1912 were $1,086,736,660, as against $1,070,091,487 for the first five months of 1911, an increase of $16,645,173.

Financial circles in this section are deeply interested in the proposed issue of $2,500,000 of Orient receivers' certificates, which are to be used in extending the line from Granada to Stockton, Texas. Federal Judge John C. Pollock has approved the issue and $1,000,000 has already been sold to a Boston firm.

Announcement was made in Fort Worth recently that the Mercantile Trust Co. of St. Louis, headed by Festus J. Wade, will finance the proposed interurban from Fort Worth to Mineral Wells. The cost of the road will be nearly $1,000,000. Fort Worth and St. Louis capitalists will subscribe largely to an issue of $700,000 preferred stock.

A case of some interest to anybody affected by defalcations was decided by the Missouri supreme court last week. The Middleton Bank of Waverly lost a suit for $22,000 against the National Surety Co. of New York, on the ground that the company was not notified of the defalcation of Cashier E. H. Lewis six years ago within the time limit specified in the cashier's surety bond.

William L. McKee of the Fort Dearborn National Bank, Chicago, has many friends in Kansas City, and he surprised all of them the other day when he stopped over long enough to introduce his bride. Mr. and Mrs. McKee were married last Saturday in Denison, Texas, figures are correct then there is something radically wrong, and we ought all to know it, and help right things. Figures against us are of equal service and interest in reaching a conclusion.

I was asked a few months ago for my opinion as to the best method of advertising the state. My response was that this was the best and the worst advertised spot on earth, and that if Kansas were to keep her mouth shut for five or ten years there is no telling how advantageous it might be in increased population. There is a wrong impression abroad about Kansas. Any how, there is something the matter. There is a possibility that we are afflicted with the mouth disease, so many of our statesmen have a desire to appear on the first page, top of column next to reading matter. Our editors should use more discretion and draw the line on what a fellow is going to do, and place the limit on what he has done. This would reduce the grand standing and wind jamming very materially and relieve thousands of readers. We are told that this is an area of advertising. It is also an era of gush and dope; a few of our preachers are suffering from a constipation of gospel topics—which wouldn't be so bad if they did not land top of column with scare-head. The arts, devices, machinations and manipulations of the politician have been eliminated by our primary system, and so we have the tiresome and wormy chestnuts, the unsterilized air, with which the statesmen educate the referendum. Now, do not misunderstand me. I am not opposed to reasonable advertising or effort, but there is so much gross exaggeration that might be dispensed with. We talk too much and no doubt occasionally have our wires crossed. What we want is a scheme whereby we can manage our own freaks, and the smart Alecks on the newspapers. We must have some other diet than our own taffy.

Furthermore, do not get the idea that I have a grouch. I have not. I have the most interesting job on earth, and everybody very graciously helps me take care of it; but we maintain quite a clipping bureau and the mental strain exercised in drawing a line between biography, history, and the political self-advertising hot air intended to enlighten or fool the referendum oftentimes wears heavily on my nervous temperament.

Pardon this digression, because with the banker "the stuff" is absolutely essential in balancing the books, and not wind. No people in all history have seen or enjoyed more than have those who remained with Kansas through the past fifty years—beholding this magnificent commonwealth emerge from nothing, prevailing over all sorts of difficulties and discouragements—and we ought to cut out some of our braggadocio and spend much time in the most humble thanks to the Giver of all good.

tion to the "Public Welfare." Joseph Chapman, Jr., was down for a talk on agricultural subjects and J. Adam Bede, also of Minnesota, closed the day's session with one of his characteristically humorous addresses.

The social features at Cedar Rapids, always one of the strong numbers of the Iowa proand a number of smaller entertainments were provided by the ladies of Cedar Rapids.

Secretary Hall reported 1,548 paid members, with only about a hundred banks still out of the fold. This constitutes a revelation in in Iowa association matters, and affords a useful lesson to Illinois and other states as to how to go about it. Mr. Hall's plan is to have the member banks of each county go out after the non-members with a sharp stick. Invariably they are driven to cover. The printed report of the secretary covers completely the doings of the council of administration for the year, group meetings and special committees and time lock features. Iowa is making a specialty of its protective department and has engaged the services of the Burns National Detective Agency for that work. The report of the secretary covers in detail many of the prominent cases which have occurred during the past year. Iowa Bankers Association maintains a balance of nearly ten thousand dollars in the treasury and the yearly receipts are slightly over that amount. The popularity of P. W. Hall with the members of the Iowa association was one of the notable things at the convention. He seems to have the gift of being an efficient secretary without doing things which are not wanted done, or failing to carry out the suggestions of those who are responsible for the welfare of the association.

Secretary Hall is the first state secretary to follow Col. Farnsworth's lead and print a daily registry list. The Cedar Rapids delegates appreciated this advanced move.

Charles Shade, president of the First National at Rock Rapids, was elected president and Charles R. Hannan, Jr., of Council Bluffs, was chosen for treasurer. Two more popular men could not have been found and there was no opposing movement. Henry M. Carpenter of Monticello and D. H. McKee of Davenport were elected to be members of the A. B. A. Executive Council—one to fill the Reynolds vacancy and the other a newly qualified membership. Registration the first day 900, which is going some even for Iowa.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

When teacher rings her bell early June 14th a lot of banker school boys will respond by gathering in the auditorium of the state agricultural school for two days of lessons from "professors" gathered from all parts of the country to talk learnedly on finance and agriculture and similar subjects, as outlined in the program of the Minnesota Bankers Association's twenty-third annual convention, to be held this year on Rosetown township, which is halfway between the business centers of the two Twin Cities.

Frank E. Holton, who used to be a banker, is to register the pupils when they arrive by bus from the street car line. He will have an office in the administration building. The regular program for Friday will be followed at night by a moving picture show of the Durbar, while an orchestra plays and W. I. Nolan, a talker, will make some "Remarks Wise and Otherwise," with the accent on the "Otherwise." "Pupils" who wish may live in the college dormitories, or they can put up at the taverns in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Several "big" men are to talk to the pupils, such as James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, on extension of agricultural education in the Northwest; R. W. Bonyng, Denver, member of the National Monetary Commission, on the proposed plan for a national reserve association; Dean C. F. Curtis, of the Ames Agricultural College, on secondary education in agriculture; Dean A. F. Woods, of the Minnesota Agricultural College, on agricultural education in Minnesota; Thomas Cooper, secretary of the Better Farming Association of North Dakota; C. G. Schulz, Minnesota superintendent of education, on consolidated rural schools; Professor John Monroe, of the Cokato associated high schools, on the agricultural high school.

President D. S. Culver, vice-president of the National German-American, is to start the school session by introducing Rev. Everett Lesh, Olivet Congregational church, Merriam Park, who will lead in prayer. Mr. Culver, Secretary C. R. Frost, and Treasurer A.

G. Wedge, Jr., of Bemidji, will make reports. J. W. Wheeler, vice-president of the Capitol National, will report for the committee on agricultural development and education. The heavy addresses will follow. After Principal Monroe will come P. H. Konzen of Hallock on the prospects and possibilities of Northern Minnesota and C. P. DeLaittre of the Aitkin County State Bank on the blue sky law. At 4 o'clock will be recess. The pupils will be shown how to feed steers, manage farms, plan farms, control insects, diseases and weeds, and several other things absolutely needed for the equipment of a perfect banker.

For the second day, in the morning, the big guns will begin to speak again. H. J. Maxfield, immigration commissioner, will talk about the state department of immigration; Joseph Chapman, Jr., will make an address on the purposes of the A. B. A. committee on agricultural development and education; George DuToit, president of the Carver County State at Chaska, will report on registration of commercial paper; A. G. Wedge, Jr., vice-president of the First National, Bemidji, on surety companies; L. A. Huntoon, president of the First National, Moorhead, on the handling of farm mortgages by national banks; W. F. McLane, cashier of the Hennepin County Savings, on the A. B. A. convention at New Orleans. After the report of the committee on resolutions and group organizations, there are to be informal discussions, election of officers and members of the council and to the A. B. A. council, then school will be out.

J. A. Latta Addresses Group 9

One of the principal addresses at the ninth congressional district bankers meeting at Battle Lake was that of J. A. Latta, vice-president of the Northwestern National, on "The Central Banking System as Proposed by the National Monetary Commission." A. L. Thompson of Mahanomen presented a paper recommending a law to compel the filing of chattel mortgages with the county auditor, and the unanimous sentiment of the convention was for such a law. Attorney-General Lyndon A. Smith discussed the recent decisions relating to banking. The visitors were guests for a banquet and a boat ride on the lake in the evening. Officers elected were: T. O. Haf-dahl of Beltrami, president; J. L. Humphrey, Fosston, vice-president; C. L. Marsh, Crookston, secretary, and E. E. Adams, Fergus Falls, and R. J. Landberg, Henning, members of the district committee.

Directors in Securities Company

C. T. Jaffray, president of the Minneapolis First National, and F. P. Hixon of La Crosse, Wis., director in the Security National, Minneapolis, Thomas Baxter of Boston, John MacMillan and Austin Cargill of Minneapolis are directors in the Cargill Securities Company, organized to take over the W. W. Cargill estate. Principal properties are the La Crosse & Southeastern Railroad, Cargill Elevator Company and the Sawyer and Austin Lumber Company holdings in Arkansas.

Joseph Chapman, Jr., Addresses Graduating Class

Joseph Chapman, Jr., has stepped over the line from the agricultural and consolidated rural school business into the regular ranks. He delivered the commencement address for a high school class of thirteen (note the number) at Browns Valley, Minn. Says a Browns Valley correspondent: "Mr. Chapman prophesied that the high school curriculum of ten years hence will little resemble that of the present time. He pleaded for a high school that will reach far out into the surrounding rural community, preparing the boys for business and the trades and the girls for home makers. His address is generally acknowledged as one of the best ever given here."

Savings Banks in Twin Cities

Savings banks of Minneapolis continue to hold the business notwithstanding that the postal savings bank is gaining. From September 1st to June 1st there were 4,946 deposits, leaving $172,770.50 in the bank at the latter

GEORGIA BANKERS CONVENTION AT ATLANTIC BEACH

Atlantic Beach, Fla., June 1.—The large attendance at the twenty-first annual convention of the Georgia bankers was in a large part due to their selection of this beautiful watering place on the Florida coast as the convention city. One of the events of the first day's session was the annual banquet at the Continental Hotel, followed by a boat trip given by the Jacksonville Clearing House Association.

A feature of the convention was the retirement of L. P. Hillyer, who for twenty years was secretary of the association. The Georgia bankers hereafter will maintain a paid secretary, and have elected Haynes MacFadden, who for a number of years has traveled throughout the South for the "Southern Banker," printed at Atlanta. The new president of the association is B. W. Hunt of Eatonton, and L. P. Hillyer heads the list of vice-presidents; E. D. Smith is treasurer. Among the principal speakers were the Hon. Lee McClung, U. S. treasurer at Washington; R. F. Maddox of Atlanta; President Lincoln Hulley of the Stetson University at DeLand, Fla., and Bradford Knapp of the agricultural bureau at Washington. Among the bankers who spoke are W. H. Searcy of Cairo; A. B. Mobley of Monroe; J. T. Duncan of Douglasville and John M. King of Rochelle.

Mr. Hillyer's Valedictory

In withdrawing from the secretaryship of the association, Mr. Hillyer said:

"I am proud of my connection with this association. I am proud of the fact that twenty years ago I assisted Daddy Lane in its organization and was elected its first secretary. My heart has been deeply touched each year by my unanimous re-election. I have seen the association grow from the forty-odd which met in the Lanier House in Macon to more than ten times that number at the present time. It has grown so large, there is so much to do, and so much more that can be done. I am sure that an active paid secretary is absolutely essential; a secretary whose only work will be for the association. For the good of the association, therefore, I recommend that such a secretary be elected my successor. As no officers of an association of this kind are expected to do much work except the secretary, the success of the association is largely due to the secretary's efficiency and constant activity. If his outside duties are such that he cannot give much time to the association, the association surely will grow sick and pine away."

Mr. Hillyer also enumerated the various advantages to be derived by membership in the state association, and stated that he could not see how any bank could afford to remain out of the fold.

Mr. McClung Advocates Revision of Currency System

Mr. McClung believes that a currency system allowing adequate contraction after financial upheavals is just as necessary as a system allowing expansion to meet emergencies. He said in part:

"There is a widespread belief in the minds of our people that the issuing of currency is rightly a governmental function and should have no connection whatever with banking. The question naturally arises: Why should the government not issue the whole volume of paper currency? As circumstances practically have concluded the further issue of national bank notes, it is becoming necessary to revise our currency system in order to provide for an enlarged volume of circulation."

Interesting Address by W. H. Searcy

W. H. Searcy, cashier of the Citizens Bank at Cairo, delivered a very interesting address, his subject being "Should Country Bankers Charge their Customers Exchange?" The speaker maintained that they should and cited many arguments in support of his contention. Mr. Searcy believes that the banks should not attempt to get rich through the medium of exchange, but that they should charge such a sum as will be adequate to protect them from loss. He believes that, if the subject were discussed generally at all group meetings and conventions, and the banks educated in the matter, the problem soon would be solved. In opening his address Mr. Searcy said:

"I do not construe the words 'country banker' to mean a man from the 'back woods' and one who has no knowledge of things outside of his own institution, for upon the country banker rests a responsibility equally as great as rests on the shoulders of the city banker, for if there were no country banks there would be very few city bankers, for most of our city friends can trace their banking ancestry to some bank usually called a 'country bank.'"

Able Talk by Albert B. Mobley

A very able address was delivered by Albert B. Mobley, cashier of the Farmers Bank at Monroe. Mr. Mobley chose for his subject "The Conservation of our Money Power." He likened the money power of the country to the water power, saying that if there is too little water we have droughts and destruction of crops; too little money and we have panics and destruction of business; too much water and we have floods and destruction of property; too much money and we have speculation and high finance. He said in part:

"Idle water does not develop power, neither does idle money develop money power. Water to develop power must be flowing. Money to develop power must be flowing—must be spent—it must be used. Water when used to develop power can be used again by other water wheels; it is not wasted. Money when used to develop power, when spent, is not wasted, for it can be used over and over again. Money is labor. Wealth is accumulated labor. Money to give power must be spent for the necessities and luxuries of life; it must pass over the labor wheels."

The speaker stated that he believed that there were too few streams in the South; that the streams which they have are not constant in their flow; that the population is too small; that the South is not producing the crops of which it is capable and that it is not manufacturing its raw material into finished products. He urged the sale of finished products in order to fill the money streams, thereby enabling the South to employ its own labor and to develop its money power. He believes that the banks bear an important relation to the community in conserving its resources, and urges upon all bankers the necessity of studying local conditions. In closing his remarks the speaker said:

"To the bankers of the South and of the nation I say, conserve the money power of the nation. It is your duty and your business. Deepen our money streams, strengthen the levees, and beware of leaks in your dams, both storage and power dams. Build more streams—before the currency laws, if needed. Improve the banking laws if defective. Establish the central bank system if it is the thing we need. Eliminate so much speculation and high finance in our business. See that the streams of money are constant in their flow so that our labor may be employed in contributing to the needs of the human race."

Other Addresses

Talks also were made by John T. Duncan, president of the Douglasville Banking Company, Mr. Duncan talking on "Financing the Farmer," and by John M. King, president of the Bank of Rochelle, he choosing as his topic "Single-Name Unsecured Paper." Mr. Duncan stated that the whole business structure

(of the South at least) rests upon what the farmer has and raises as its foundation. He believes that if the farmer can be financed properly the whole community problem is solved. He believes that banks prosper most and lend most in those sections where the farmer is on nearly a cash basis. Mr. King spoke of the dangerous practice of taking a note with but one name, giving as his opinion that if a bank were overburdened with such paper, it soon would be noised about that the bank was not as conservative as it ought to be and that thereby it would lose the public confidence and trust once reposed in it. He stated that such a practice was looked upon with disfavor by both the state and national bank examiners.

date. The open accounts numbered 1,634. Since the bank opened there have been $4,000 in U. S. bonds issued with application for $3,000 more. Superintendent J. W. Fleu says that the fine condition of the savings bank is responsible for the low record of Minneapolis' postal savings institution. In St. Paul, which also has fine savings banks, the deposits since opening the postoffice bank have been $597,872, a total of $50,930 for May. In the farmer savings banks, in Minneapolis, there was reported more money deposited in the last quarter and less withdrawn than for any similar period in years. "There is not so much speculation, but business, as a whole, is more satisfactory now than in other years," said N. F. Hawley, treasurer of the Farmers and Mechanics Savings Bank. "People seem to be more conservative than they used to be and to be living more within their means. The farmers in particular seem to be doing well and even now, with the harvest several months away, farmers are paying off mortgages."

Gain in Bank Clearings

With $16,523,742.57 gained over last year in a five-month period in which every month was heavier, Minneapolis bank clearings, at $409,515,284.93, show general business greater in volume and June is starting in with the indication of more than full maintenance of the comparison. In January, February, March, April and May, 1911, the total was $392,991,542.36.

To Inspect German Schools

Who it is that has offered to send three members of the Minneapolis school board and one educator abroad Joseph Chapman, Jr. refuses to tell. To formulate high school plans before the legislature meets is the idea.

"No city in the country has sent a party of this kind abroad to make a study of European schools for the benefit of the public schools," said Mr. Chapman. "The nearest approach to it was the sending of the superintendent of the Chicago schools abroad some time ago. The thought is that the future development of the Minneapolis high schools shall have the benefit of the ideas these men will get abroad. Germany is ten years ahead of this country in trade schools and we may as well profit by Germany's mistakes and Germany's strides in education."

Will Not Organize New Bank

While work is progressing on the organization of a bank for the Lumber Exchange building, that for a bank offshoot of the First National has been abandoned. The latter was backed by men interested in the larger institution. "We have decided not to organize the bank," said C. T. Jaffray, vice-president of the First National Bank, who was one of the men identified with the plan. "We were unable to make satisfactory terms regarding the lease of

Will Attend Agricultural Conference

Earl S. Gwin, New Albany, Ind., president of the Indiana Bankers Association; Secretary W. B. Harrison of Enid, secretary of the Oklahoma Bankers Association, and W. F. Keyser of Sedalia, secretary of the Missouri Bankers Association, have written Joseph Chapman, Jr., that their associations will be represented at the meeting of the national bankers association's committee on agricultural development and education in Minneapolis, August 7th and 8th. Besides these states, Colorado, New York, Florida, South Dakota and Iowa have appointed committees to attend.

Banking Notes

Bankers who are to go on the trade extension excursion from Minneapolis to Northern Minnesota and Winnipeg, June 17th, include George F. Orde, First National; A. V. Ostrom, Northwestern National; J. S. Pomeroy, Security National.

George C. Power of the Second National has returned from a month in New York and the Bermudas. Perry Harrison, Security National, is in the East for a vacation.

J. S. Ulland, president of the Fergus Falls National, a good Methodist, was honored by the general conference just closed at Minneapolis in appointment as member of the book committee. He was a delegate from the Northern Minnesota conference to the big meeting.

reach the population of school age. You cannot educate an old man. Men and women can be reached best through the boys and girls. This already has been demonstrated repeatedly. The present extension and demonstration work could not have gotten under way but for the enthusiasm and helpful knowledge of the boys and girls returning from the agricultural and mechanical colleges.

The American nation will not be able to hold its place among the industrial nations of the world with anything short of a complete and adequate system of agricultural and industrial education. The key-note of Germany's industrial progress has been, and is, that there must be greater skill and efficiency on the part of all the people. America has led all the nations in the doctrine of universal education, but we have fallen behind in training for practical efficiency. The only objection seriously urged against the inauguration of a federal and state policy of vocational education is on the ground of economy. The total federal appropriation for all lines of agricultural work during the past ten years has not exceeded 3½ per cent or 4 per cent of the aggregate. The establishing of a broad and adequate policy such as is provided for in bills now pending before congress would not increase this above 5 per cent or 6 per cent. The active interest of the bankers organizations will be a powerful influence in bringing this about.

Such schools would stop rural depopulation and reverse the tide from the country to the city. They would put our crop yields on a par with those of foreign countries—from 25 per cent to 50 per cent above present yields. They would check the decline in soil fertility and help to keep American farms for American boys and girls, instead of for foreign tenants. They would become centers for rural social life and organization. They would contribute to the contentment of rural life, and thereby give greater stability and permanence to the nation's best citizenship.

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

Des Moines, June 6.—The bankers convention of Cedar Rapids this week has been one of the most interesting events in Iowa. It followed the state primary, which has been the topic for some months. The results of the latter furnished a good social topic and offered the occasion for many to say: "I told you so." The attendance at Cedar Rapids has been all that could be expected and the program was eminently satisfactory. Des Moines was well represented and in fact the city banks have been somewhat depleted during the two days of the convention.

Gain in Clearings

Des Moines bankers are well pleased with the showing made by the clearing house association for the month of May. The gain over the clearings for the same month last year was $838,519.78. This million dollar increase looks good to the financiers as an evidence of prosperity and of steadily increasing business in Des Moines. The clearings for the month of May this year totaled $19,659,829.61 as against a total of $18,821,309.93. The clearings for the final week of May this year totaled $3,747,380.30, an increase of $801,465.47 over the clearings for the corresponding week last year.

John Mowery's Death Keenly Felt

The death of John Mowery of Ottumwa, president of the Ottumwa National and Wapello County Savings, has been a source of much sorrow to Iowa bankers who have been associated with Mr. Mowery for many years. He was prominent in Ottumwa business circles for thirty-five years. He was elected president of the Ottumwa National in 1890. When the Wapello County Savings was started in 1897 he was made president of that institution too. In addition, he was president of the Blakesburg Savings, the Batavia Savings, the Hedrick State and the Farson Savings. He had been ill since February. The funeral was held from the family residence, conducted by the pastor of the Methodist church, and was largely attended.

Story City Bank Case

Important figures as to the real value of the bank stock and other property of John Swan of Story City have been filed in the federal court at Des Moines. Mr. Swan was forced into bankruptcy by his son, cashier of a private bank at Story City, who skipped out with all of the available cash. In his petition in bankruptcy court, the father professed liabilities of $82,291 and assets of $82,082. However, appraisers appointed by the court find the assets are only $62,288.87, while the assets of the bank itself are listed at $47,692.59. The appraisers are S. R. Cornelliussen, John Egenes, Thomas Mason and B. C. Vold. The failure of the Story City bank has caused much attention throughout Iowa, not only from the fact of the heartless son thus bankrupting his father but from the fact that it shows very plainly the necessity for some sort of regulation of private banks.

Homer A. Miller Entertains at Golf

Homer A. Miller, president of the Iowa National, Des Moines, pulled off his annual golf game at the county club links in this city last week. He had as his guests, Joseph T. Talbert, vice-president of the National City of New York, S. M. Felton, president of the Chicago Great Western Railroad, and E. C. Finkbine, a director of the Great Western and a stockholder in the Iowa National. Mr. Talbert while in Des Moines gave out an interview in which he declared that Roosevelt will be nominated, elected and that the money interests of the East will not be affected thereby. Mr. Talbert explained that Wall Street is more friendly to Taft than to Roosevelt but the opinion is divided and that the rank and file seem to be for the Colonel. When asked regarding the demand for money at present, he stated that it is slight. "The railroads are not pushing any big ventures," he said. "There is no big demand for money."

As to who won the golf game the interested parties were silent. This four cornered affair has always been a leading event in Mr. Miller's daily career, and he looks forward to it from one year to the next. But he never gives out the score—probably for reasons of his own.

Rumor of New National Bank for Des Moines

There has been a rumor in bank circles at Des Moines that a new national bank is to be formed in Des Moines. The names of Vice-President Butler and Cashier Harry T. Blackburn of the Iowa National have been connected with it. There have also been rumors that these two men have been figuring upon buying the bank stock of Arthur Reynolds of the Des Moines National, the assumption being that the latter is going to one of the Chicago banks. However, Messrs. Butler and Blackburn have stated that the rumors are entirely without foundation. They say they have no intention of quitting the Iowa National and that they are loyal to President Miller and the institution of which he is head. It is not known how the report started but it has been talked about a good deal in rival banking circles.

Death of J. H. Carleton

John Humphreys Carleton, president of the State Bank of Dows, died some days ago. The directors have sent out this touching tribute to the memory of the deceased: "With deep sadness the officers and directors of the State Bank of Dows announce the death of their president, John Humphreys Carleton, on May 7, 1912. A thread of splendid strength and manly beauty has been silently slipped from the woof of our commercial and social texture. He has passed out upon the River of Death, where the tide ever ebbs, but never flows. Mr. Carleton has been associated with this bank since its organization twenty years ago and

The State Bank and Trust Company of Port Lavaca, Texas, has filed an amendment changing its name to the First State Bank of Lavaca, eliminating the trust feature and decreasing its capital stock from $50,000 to $30,000.

for the past fifteen years has been its president. He was a wise and safe counselor, and his name, standing as it ever has for the strictest business honesty, integrity and sagacity, has been a bulwark of strength to the institution of which he was so long the president."

Sells Stock in Waterloo Loan and Trust Co.

W. R. Jameson of the Waterloo Loan and Trust Company has sold his stock in the Waterloo Loan and Trust Co. to F. J. Eighmen and other Waterloo capitalists. This concern was organized seven years ago and has assets of between $500,000 and $800,000. Mr. Jameson will retire from active management of the institution and it is probable that a new location will be secured. Ben J. Howrey will remain as president, A. E. Smith as cashier and C. A. Barber as assistant secretary.

Iowa Banking Notes

G. G. Lindquist, vice-president of the First National of Gowrie, died recently in that city after many years' suffering from tuberculosis. His banking career began in the Webster County State in 1895. Later this institution became the First National of Gowrie. He was elected cashier in 1901 and held this position until he resigned to become vice-president in 1907. F. W. Lindquist succeeded him as cashier.

The Security Savings at Cedar Rapids recently voted to increase its capital stock from $150,000 to $200,000.

The Tri-City Bankers Club at a meeting at Davenport recently decided to form a separate clearing house for the banks at Rock Island and Moline. J. L. Vernon was made chairman and M. S. Heagy secretary. The club was made a permanent institution. William Heuer of the Union Savings of Davenport was elected president and A. J. Lindstrom of the Rock Island Savings was made secretary and treasurer. Finger-print identification will be studied.

Out-of-the-city bankers seen in Des Moines recently include Vice-President H. I. Foster, Shenandoah National; Vice-President E. E. Reder, Peoples National, Albia; Cashier E. L. Higgins, Gillett Grove Bank; Assistant Cashier E. A. French, Black Hawk National, Waterloo; Cashier J. E. Walker, Truro Savings; Cashier H. S. Fleagle, Fernald Savings; President J. B. Elliott, Knoxville National.

The Citizens National of Winterset has celebrated its fortieth birthday. The charter has been extended for twenty years and Cashier W. J. Cornell has entered upon his thirty-fourth year in connection with the institution as cashier.

The First National at Creston is now in its new structure, which has been extensively remodeled and made into a beautiful and businesslike home.

MANY bankers, from time to time, have need of a special or secondary reserve fund. This reserve fund they carry in bonds or as an inactive account at interest with a metropolitan bank. Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

What few heads of banking institutions there are left in town this week are much interested in the sessions being held in the city of the Iowa State Tax Commission, which is conducting hearings on the request of the commercial interests of Sioux City. The commission has imposed upon it, not the duty of readjusting taxes, but merely of studying the conditions, needs and possibilities of the state's taxing system, and to make a report, with recommendations, to the next legislature. The last legislature undertook to remedy some of the most glaring defects in the system, and it did it at the expense of bankers by placing a flat tax on capitalization without allowing offsets. Another real reform was the placing of a millage tax on moneys and credits. This, however, has not resulted in the increased revenues expected when it was instituted as a substitution for the insufferable tax ferret. Business men are placing these facts before the tax commissioners in the hope that a new code on taxation will result.

South Dakota is in a fair way to a most prosperous year, says Geo. S. Parker, president of the Livestock National, who has returned from Dallas, S. D., where he participated in the sessions of a group of South Dakota bankers, made a speech and presided at a banquet. He found that crops are exceptionally promising and that the failures of the past are likely to be forgotten in the successes of the future.

Among the Visiting Bankers

Among the bankers who visited Sioux City this week are J. S. Wilson, cashier of the First National, Hull; S. Hahne, assistant cashier of the State Bank of Schaller; W. A. Schaetzel, president of the Union County Bank, Elk Point; and D. A. Oltman, cashier of the Kingsley Bank, Kingsley. Nebraska visitors were T. A. Anthony, cashier First National, Wausa; W. S. Weston, vice-president First National, Hartington; H. F. Wilson, cashier of the First National, Wayne; E. G. Hancock, president of the Thurston State Bank, Thurston; and L. C. Barbour, cashier First National, Brunswick.

Numerical System of the American Bankers Association

The numerical system of the American Bankers Association simply is an evolution and consolidation of various numerical systems formerly in use into one universal and comprehensive plan and comes to supply an urgent demand for efficiency, speed and accuracy in handling out-of-town bank checks, commonly known as "transit items."

The system of using numbers for registering transit items is not a new idea. For more than twenty years the New York Clearing House numbers have been used in listing checks sent to New York correspondents. This was the first application of the numerical system for registering transit items. Like many other labor saving inventions, it began in a small way. It plainly was apparent that it required less time to write the number "1" than to write "Bank of New York, National Banking Association," or the figures "53" in place of the "Importers and Traders National Bank."

The New York Clearing House numbers were not printed on the checks and, therefore, had to be memorized. As there were a large number of non-clearing banks in New York which had no numbers, the use of numbers was confined to the clearing house banks until someone suggested the plan of supplying additional numbers to non-clearing banks. Each bank adopting this plan sent its own list of numbers to its New York correspondents, without any regard to the uniformity of the numbers. Owing to the increased use of bank checks, the volume of transit items grew so rapidly that it was found necessary, as a means of saving labor, to use numbers for registering the name of the drawee banks on items sent to Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis and other large banking centers.

As a further means of reducing labor, local depositors and out-of-town banking correspondents were numbered and supplied with endorsement stamps bearing the numbers assigned, so that the name of the depositor or endorser could be registered by a number as well as the name of the drawee bank.

In doing this pioneer work each bank was blazing its own trail and had, therefore, a nu-

C. R. McKay, manager of the Transit and General Books department of First National, Chicago, tells of the new plan at the Iowa convention. Mr. McKay served on the committee which "dug up" the system merical system of its own, with the result that some bank correspondents were designated by as many as a dozen different numbers. This caused confusion and made the numerical system unpopular with many of the banks, who objected to using the endorsement stamps bearing the various numbers assigned them.

To overcome this confusion of numbers the Texas banks adopted a uniform numerical system for their own state by designating a definite number for each Texas bank, the numbers beginning with 500 and running up to 2,100. Those under 500 were used to number each bank's city depositors.

C. J. WEISER

President Winneshiek County State Bank, Decorah, Iowa

As Oklahoma and other states were considering the adoption of similar systems to be used within their own states, it became apparent that unless a uniform system for the entire country were adopted so much confusion would result as to make the numerical system impracticable for universal use.

It was this condition of affairs which prompted the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association to call a meeting of the transit men of about sixteen of the principal cities of the country for the purpose of formulating a universal numerical system, so that each and every one of the 28,000 banks in the United States would be designated by a definite number of its own. This meeting was held in Chicago in December, 1910, and a committee was appointed to evolve a system. The numerical system formulated by this committee was adopted by the American Bankers Association in May, 1911, and now is known as the "Numerical System of the American Bankers Association."

In order to make the system universal, the Texas banks were prevailed upon to adopt the "Numerical System of the American Bankers Association" to take the place of the Texas system, which had been in operation for nearly a year; so we now have only one numerical system, which is universal and can, therefore, be used by every bank in the United States.

A key to the system, showing the numbers and names of all the banks in the United States in both numerical and alphabetical order, has been published and distributed to about 6,000 banks throughout the country. It is estimated that about 7,000 banks already have adopted the system by placing the numbers assigned them on their checks and endorsement stamps.

The system may be briefly explained as follows:

The reserve cities and collecting centers each are designated by prefix numbers from one to forty-nine, inclusive, in the order of their population. The lower numbers thus are assigned to the larger cities, upon which the greater number of checks are drawn.

The prefix numbers are followed by the individual number of the bank in each city, clearing house banks being given their clearing house numbers and other banks assigned arbitrary numbers in the order of their seniority. New York City is No. 1, Chicago, No. 2, Philadelphia, No. 3, and so on.

The numbers of the reserve banks in Iowa are, Des Moines, 33, Sioux City 41, Dubuque 45, and Cedar Rapids 47. The National City Bank, New York, would, therefore, be designated as 1—8, the First National Bank, Chicago, as 2—1, the Cedar Rapids National Bank as 47—3.

The prefix numbers from 50 to 99 have been assigned to the states, which have been divided into five sections—eastern, southeastern, central, western and southwestern. Those containing the principal collecting centers, namely, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Missouri and California, have been given the first numbers in their respective sections, 50, 60, 70, 80, 90, to indicate that the following numbers in each section represent the states in the same territory.

The state prefix is used in numbering banks located outside of the 49 cities mentioned. In Iowa, Davenport is the first city to be numbered with the state prefix, which is 72. The First National Bank of Davenport is 72—1.

The banks throughout the state are numbered in the relative order of the population of the cities in which they are located, the large cities thus having the lower numbers. Each bank is numbered in consecutive order according to seniority in each city and town, excepting in towns having only one bank, in which case the banks are numbered in alphabetical order according to towns. The numbers in Iowa run up to 1,667, being exceeded only by Illinois with 1,684.

To make the numerical system complete it only is necessary for each bank to supply numbered endorsement stamps to those of its local depositors who have out-of-town items. As the local depositors' numbers have no prefix, they will in no way conflict with the numbers assigned banks.

As an illustration of the use of the numerical system, an Iowa bank in registering an item on the First National of Bloomington, Ill., to be sent to its Chicago correspondent, would write, for instance, the number 127, representing the number of its local depositor, or 72—75, if it was received from the Muscatine State Bank, and, instead of writing Bloomington, Ill., would simply write 70—

103. If the item were drawn on Chicago instead of Bloomington, the name of the drawee bank would be indicated by the number 2—1 or 2—20, or whatever the Chicago bank's number might be.

The numerical system has been endorsed by the Iowa Bankers Association and other state bankers associations, all over the country, and already has been the means of saving from, at least, 25 to 50 per cent in time and labor in registering transit items.

The numerical system has made it possible to list the description of transit items, as well as the amounts, on the adding machine, and in recent tests of speed 150 items have been written on the machine in less than 10 minutes which formerly consumed nearly an hour by the old style methods.

Although it is less than a year since the system was brought to the attention of the banks, the numbers already are in use on practically all endorsement stamps. All that now is needed to make the system practical for use by all banks is for each bank to print the number on all its checks.

We already have secured the co-operation of a large number of lithographers and printers, who have agreed to print the numbers on all new orders for checks, and steps are being taken to induce all of them to do so.

Committees have been organized in many of the large cities for the purpose of pushing the adoption of the system as rapidly as possible. The Chicago committee consists of eighteen members, including a representative from each of the clearing house banks. Each member of the committee, besides pledging his own bank to place its number on its checks, will endeavor to secure the co-operation of all the banking correspondents who carry accounts with his bank, and also will request all city depositors whose checks are ordered direct from the lithographers to agree to print the numbers on their checks.

I would, therefore, suggest that, if action has not yet been taken, arrangements be made during this convention to form committees at once in Des Moines, Sioux City, Dubuque, Cedar Rapids and Davenport, and, if necessary, in other collecting centres, to secure the co-operation of all Iowa banks by requesting them to place the numbers on their checks, so that all banks throughout the state may have the benefit of using the system as soon as possible.

The system can be used to advantage by small banks as well as large, and I trust that every banker attending this convention will co-operate towards making the system an immediate success by placing the number on the checks of his own bank, so that his fellow bankers in the neighboring towns and cities, and throughout all America wherever his checks may circulate, may be enabled to save labor, time and money by the use of the "Numerical System of the American Bankers Association."

OUT-OF-TOWN VISITORS

J. W. Wheeler, president of the Capital Trust Company of St. Paul and one of Minnesota's agricultural boosters, was a recent Chicago visitor. Mr. Wheeler says that the group meetings in Minnesota this year have been above the average in interest and attendance. He says that there are excellent prospects for good crops in Minnesota, and reports that arrangements have been made by the agricultural college at St. Paul for the entertainment of the delegates to the Minnesota convention this month, also that a splendid program has been arranged. Arthur D. Robinson, representing the National City Bank of New York, and Beverley D. Harris, vice-president and cashier of the South Texas Commercial National Bank of Houston, also were callers in the financial district during the past week. E. V. R. Thayer, president of the Merchants National of Boston, called on Chicago banking acquaintances. Mr. Thayer is interested in the stockyards here and in Kansas City. He is a member of the board of directors of a great many of the largest financial and manufacturing concerns in the New England states. F. G. Pousland, treasurer of the Old Colony Trust Company of Boston, also was a visitor. Mr. Pousland is conceded to be one of the biggest bankers in the East. Among other prominent bankers recently seen in Chicago are J. W. Perry, president of the National Bank of Commerce, Kansas City; William Ontjes, cashier of the Sioux Falls (S. D.) Savings Bank. He says that the crop prospects in South Dakota never were better. South Dakota has had an abundance of rain this season and everybody is feeling good. T. C. Richardson, president of the Granger Bank, Evansville, Wis., called on Chicago banking acquaintances the past week.

DAN NORMAN of the Continental and Commercial National has been appointed to invite visitors to the weekly luncheons of the Chicago Association of Commerce at the La Salle at 12:15. The "cats" are fine. Call Dan up, and he will assign you a good seat.

CHAIRMAN ARTHUR REYNOLDS has R. E. James of Easton, Pa., O. E. Dunlap of Waxahachie, Texas, and John J. Sherman of Appleton, Wis., all members of the Big Council, on the Fidelity Bond and Burglary Insurance committee.

We Have For Sale the controlling interest in several banks in the Northwest and requiring $6,000 to $20,000. No trades. Your inquiries treated in strict confidence. C. B. Enkema & Co., 236 Security Bank Building, Minneapolis.

THIS is in keeping with the resolution passed at Briarcliff to appoint committees hereafter, so far as possible, from members of the council. John L. Hamilton for several years headed this committee, which was made up entirely outside of the council list. The old committee resigned at Briarcliff.

MEMBERS of the new committee have been selected for their experience and ability and because of their well known talent for effective work. James is an attorney, trust company banker, and an ex-legislator. Dunlap and Sherman also have special qualifications.

THE Kansas papers say that B. F. Harris "spoke very interestingly for an hour" at the big Topeka convention, but we have it direct from Bowman that he "talked but 33 minutes."

REMINDS one of a story. The late Billy Emerson was asked, "Why is it that married men live longer than single men?" "They don't," said Billy; "it only seems longer." Get the point?

TALK continues about the creation of a committee on uniform state banking laws for the A. B. A. This is not an idea of supplanting existing committees concerning special subjects but has reference first of all to supervision and inspection and the creation in each state of a state banking department.

THE general subject has been under discussion quite a number of different times in the American Bankers Association. Prior to 1909 the association had a committee on uniform laws which was composed of Edward D. Keys of Springfield, Homer Miller of Des Moines, and Geo. F. Orde of Minneapolis. The purpose of this committee was along similar lines but public sentiment had not been created then as now.

THE association also had a committee known as "Standing Law Committee," which served until the spring of 1910. At that time a committee known as the "Law Committee," of which Pierre Jay is chairman, was appointed, the purpose being to particularly look after segregation of savings deposits, or at least make an inquiry into savings deposits, and also to have charge of the question of uniform state laws.

THE trust company section has two committees on laws, one being a committee on legislation and the other, a committee on protective laws. The savings bank section also has a law committee, of which Lucius Teter of Chicago is chairman.

ALL of these committees were appointed with the view of keeping in touch with the various laws needed in the different sections, as well as to secure in so far as possible the passage of uniform laws. By referring to the annual issued by Secretary Farnsworth, those interested will secure all of the information desired on these committees.

PIERRE JAY rendered a report at Briarcliff which he regarded as final for his committee, and it was a very able paper. The purpose, in part, was defeated by the splendid team work of a couple of masterful Pennsylvanians.

THE new plan to co-operate with the Uniform Law Commissioners representing all the states must, then, come up as new business on the floor of the convention. If a new uniform law on bank supervision and inspection, as well as covering banking in the states, is to come before the legislatures in all the states the A. B. A. ought to have a finger in the pie. It's a big issue and will engage the attention of big men.

KANSAS had an A. B. A. rally or revival meeting at Topeka at which fifty new members for the national organization were obtained. Two or three other states we could mention might qualify each an additional member of council by the same plan. Who will be the revivalist for Illinois, when she gets back to holding her conventions in the season?

AS a result of the Harris talk at Knoxville, Tennessee will have an agricultural committee and Mr. Harris' paper will be circulated as its first document. Good work.

J. N. FISHER, of Morristown, is the new president of the Tennessee Bankers Association. Other officers chosen are: Vice-presidents—East Tennessee, J. W. Willis, Greenville; Middle Tennessee, W. N. Kannon, Jr., Franklin; West Tennessee, J. N. Harminson, McKinzie.

I. B. TIGRETT is the new Tennessee vice-president for the A. B. A., and J. P. Gaut of Knoxville goes on the Detroit nominating committee.

SECRETARY F. M. MAYFIELD has made a good record in the office and was unanimously re-elected.

HOWARD WOLF, secretary of the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association, spoke on the numerical system of that association, and urged its adoption by the Tennessee association.

T. R. PRESTON, of Chattanooga, discussed the advantages of the system recommended by Mr. Wolf, and also told of benefits to be derived from membership in the American association. As a result of his address, the Tennessee membership in that association was increased from 160 to 300. Some record for Preston.

MR. PRESTON paid a tribute to Frank O. Watts, of Nashville, an ex-president of the American Bankers Association. He said that Mr. Watts reflects much credit on Tennessee, the American Bankers Association and the bankers' business generally.

FRANK K. HOUSTON, of Nashville, presented a resolution strongly endorsing the National Conservation Exposition to be held at Knoxville in 1913 and placing the association on record as favoring the exposition and memorializing congress to pass favorably upon the appropriation bill now before that body.

AMONG the distinguished visitors who attended the meeting at the Tennessee Bankers Association convention was Samuel Cassidy, of Louisville, Ky. He is president of the National Bank of Commerce of that city and has the distinction of having been in the banking business longer than any other banker in the state of Kentucky.

JAMES J. TOWNSEND has been complimented with another term as president of the Chicago Stock Exchange.

GOVERNOR FOSS has just signed a bill appropriating $5,000,000 for good roads in Massachusetts.

OYSTER BAY (N. Y.) BANK has doubled its capital stock—probably by way of overanticipation?

SECRETARY WILLIAM J. HENRY has sent out formal invitations for the New York convention at Buffalo on June 13th and 14th. The secretary's office is at 11 Pine Street. If you are going, please notify him promptly.

CHICAGO TITLE AND TRUST is tipped off as a "good buy" at present prices.

MISSOURI has more than four and one-half millions in the state treasurer's hands. That's the job R. S. Hawes should have gone after.

AND now the Millers Association has taken up agricultural education. Chance for another alliance for the Farmers Friend, right where the millers live, too. Why not invite them to the Second Conference?

SUBURBAN nationals with less than the regulation $200,000 capital are a thing of the past in Chicago. What will be done to those which slipped through under a misconception of the law hasn't been determined. Nothing worse than the guillotine has been suggested.

THE slip-gap was "any place," which was interpreted to mean any part of a large city having a local title. Very ingenious!

EDWARD F. CRAGIN, formerly of Chicago but now of New York, was arrested the other day for allowing a man to loan him $2,000 under the impression that Cragin was an official in a certain large corporation. 'Tis a funny world!

GROUP 6 at Tuscola, on Tuesday, had a fine luncheon and several good talks. One by G. W. Telling, president of the group, was especially fine. S. E. Bradt of DeKalb spoke on "Hard Roads," and Dr. W. E. Taylor on "General Farming." Robt. W. Bonyng of Denver represented the National Citizens League in a strong currency address.

SPEAKING of the Pujo investigation, the National City Bank circular (Chicago) says that "the banks are operated honestly and have nothing whatever to conceal, but it is perfectly reasonable for them to act most cautiously in a matter which involves the giving out of information concerning the private affairs of those with whom they do business."

CHARLES WILLIAM BURROWS of Cleveland, president of the one-cent letter postage association, will address the members of the Chicago Association of Commerce at the Wednesday luncheon at the La Salle Hotel next week. He is a distinguished literary man and a fine speaker.

L. H. SCHROEDER, manager of the Central Trust bond department, says of gas bonds that "bonds secured upon established gas properties in growing communities are recognized as among our safest investment securities. It has been stated that upon approximately $400,000,000 of such bonds outstanding less than 1 per cent of the interest is in default, and that this record is equaled by no other form of investment with the single exception of United States government bonds."

GILES L. WILSON, a widely-known national bank examiner, has been elected a vice-president of the Florida National Bank at Jacksonville and will enter upon the duties of that office June 15th.

MR. WILSON'S field has been South Carolina and part of Georgia. G. E. Garner is president of the Florida National, Arthur F. Perry and J. R. Parrott vice-presidents along with Mr. Wilson, and W. A. Redding is cashier.

"FATHER," said the little daughter of Joseph Chapman, Jr., after that distinguished pro-farmer had returned from doing a fruitless Marathon behind a runaway calf at the Chapman Minnetonka farm, "father, how do you ever expect to keep the boys on the farm when you can't do it with the calves?"

RUMOR has it that the 19-year-old daughter of D. R. Forgan is having marked success in her operatic studies in Paris. Her instructor rates her singing voice as strictly in the first rank.

George B. Caldwell

If the "investment bankers section" could have had the team work behind it which went into operation at the annual election of Oak Park Club on Wednesday, a different story would have been recorded at Briarcliff. There were two tickets up, but George B. Caldwell was elected president by a very handsome majority. He should play the home team at Detroit. Hits must be bunched.

CHICAGO BANKERS ATTEND MINNESOTA CONVENTION

Among the Chicago bankers who left this week to attend the sessions of the convention of the Minnesota Bankers Association held in the agricultural college, a department of the University of Minnesota, at St. Anthony's Park, midway between St. Paul and Minneapolis, on June 14th and 15th, are Thomas E. Newcomer, assistant cashier of the Fort Dearborn National; Henry Meyer, assistant cashier of the National City; R. F. Newhall, assistant cashier of the First National; W. W. Gates, assistant cashier of the Central Trust; James G. Wakefield, assistant cashier of the Corn Exchange National, and Messrs. Thompson and Hanson of the farm loan department of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company.

Two Favorites With Group 4 Members

WILLIAM J. FENTON
CHICAGO

GEORGE WOODRUFF
JOLIET

MEMBERS of Group 4, Illinois, in the beautiful village of Yorkville, voted their compliments to, and confidence in, two of their number. William J. Fenton, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic, was unanimously endorsed for membership on the A. B. A. Executive Council to succeed Nelson N. Lampert, retiring. George Woodruff, the popular young president of the First National at Joliet, was elected to membership on the Illinois Council. Both were rewards of merit, for things done and goods delivered. Illinois will elect two, possibly three, members of the Big Council. Ex-president E. E. Crabtree is favorite for successor to Wm. George of Aurora, retiring. Group 4 bankers meant by their votes for Mr. Woodruff to put him in the race for chairman of the body to which they elected him.

H. H. Hitchcock

Howard H. Hitchcock, vice-president of the First National of Chicago, who has been on a vacation up in Canada, recently returned to the city.

PERE MARQUETTE DIFFICULTIES

Farmers Loan and Trust Company has filed objections to the Pere Marquette issue of $3,500,000 receivers' certificates, and Attorney General Kuhn of Michigan has filed a petition for intervention in behalf of the state, charging the loss of millions through excessive capitalization, financial juggling and incompetent management, resulting in deterioration of property. Hearing was set for June 24.

ELGIN BANK OFFICIALS SUMMONED

Subpoenas for D. E. Wood, president; M. C. Getzelman, vice-president, and five other officials and employees of the Elgin (Ill.) National were taken to that city Wednesday to command their appearance before the federal grand jury now in session in Chicago. The witnesses will be examined with a view to the indictment of Louis N. Seaman, former cashier of the bank, who was arrested Tuesday in Los Angeles by government agents for alleged peculations amounting to more than $100,000.

NEW LISTINGS ON N. Y. EXCHANGE

The governing committee of the New York Stock Exchange has listed Guggenheim Exploration Company, $15,038,800 capital stock; Ontario Power Company of Niagara Falls, $14,000,000 first mortgage fifteen-year 5 per cent gold bonds, due 1923; Chicago, Terre Haute & Southeastern Railway Company, $3,950,000 first and refunding mortgage fifty-year 5 per cent bonds, due 1960; Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Company, $5,000,000 twenty-year 4½ per cent debentures.

CHICAGO TITLE AND TRUST EARNINGS

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

FRANK D. BRUNDAGE, New York, says the Iowa convention was the largest state convention ever and that the program got next, even to the old-timers. From visiting a dozen such and listening to the gossip, he concludes that Mr. Cogswell of Albany will have little if any opposition for the chairmanship at Detroit.

"DETROIT convention," said Brundage, "will be the record. At first the hotels stumbled and fumbled a little over reservations, but now every one has been fixed up and the hotel committee has rooms to spare. Farnsworth has been scratched off the unfair list even by the kickers."

GEORGE E. ALLEN, 11 Pine Street, who spoke at Cedar Rapids, stopped over a day in Chicago to visit with Rubecamp, Jackson, and the other high-steppers of the Chicago Chapter. He is enthusiastic over the coming Salt Lake convention of the A. I. B.

WE hear that Wm. A. Heath is going to resign as A. B. A. vice-president for Illinois so that Latham T. Souther can serve at Detroit. The hit-or-miss system of holding the Illinois convention has been such that Heath, who was appointed once and elected once, hasn't yet had a chance to preside at a meeting of the Illinois members.

HE doesn't want Mr. Souther to get the same kind of a deal. When Wm. A. doesn't do the fairest and kindest thing he can think about it is a cold day. Then there's John D. Phillips? He gets the short-end just as Crabtree did. Who is big enough to put Illinois in line?

CONTINENTAL AND COMMERCIAL SECURITY COMPANY, capital $6,000,000, has been incorporated at Springfield by a company of which George M. Reynolds and others were the incorporators. This company will build the new Continental and Commercial building which will total, in the end, ten and one half millions.

NO stock will be sold—possibly some bonds—and the national and the two trust companies will own and occupy the building, the largest banking plant in the country, if not in the world.

"ROOSEVELT is the biggest bluffer that ever happened, but he is also the quickest quitter. Witness his back somersault on Root for temporary chairman. Apparently, too, he has abandoned his great project of turning out national committeemen who have 'ceased to be in touch with the people.'" — Harper's Weekly.

ONE of our wisest friends tells us that bankers' associations which formerly elected one of their own members to be secretary made one big error when they hired a paid secretary by "electing" him also. He should have been "hired" only and kept while efficient, courteous, and obedient.

THINK it over! More in it than at first you will agree. It is a trouble saver and will keep at rest the problem as to whether or not he is an executive, an official or an employee. Being elected is what spoils the light headed individual for acceptable service.

"THE Town of Crooked Ways" isn't Joliet or Chicago, but a new story by J. S. Fletcher, who wrote "Daniel Quaine." It is a study of life in a little country town with a bunch of realism thrown in. Published by Dana Estes & Co., Boston.

WE understand there likely is to be an Iowa round-robbin against the Journal-Bulletin because it spells the name of that distinguished Decorah banker—"Curtain." Neither Henry Carpenter nor Dave McKee will stand for such a defamation of history.

OH, yes, when he gets through speaking it we are going to print the B. F. Harris agricultural address. George E. Allen, a distinguished New York farmer, says it's good.

REALLY, you know, the boys on the council were pretty cute at Briarelliff on the round-robbin subject. The petitioners thought to get a committee appointed on whom they could work in a body, and that the committee would think it "wise" to report favorably.

THE program was reversed, however, and now a committee of the kicking publishers will appear before the council as a whole, which will be a totally different matter. This will put the question not by favor but on its merits.

GEORGE S. PARKER of Sioux City was kept rather busy at the meeting of Group 11 of the South Dakota Bankers Association. Mr. Parker was on the regular program for a talk on securities, and presided as toastmaster over the banquet program in the evening.

SEATTLE NATIONAL gets out a trade and crop bulletin twice a year, and the spring edition is being sent out at present. It contains brief comment on the National Monetary Commission bill by leading bankers of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, as well as the subject-matter which is covered by the title.

ATENTION is called to the expansion of the foreign commerce of the Pacific seaboard in the past ten years, and the prediction is made that all records will be broken when the Panama Canal goes into operation.

THE Seattle National believes not only in getting more people back on the farms but in teaching them how to get more out of their labor after they get them there. Attention is called to the thousands of acres of cut-over lands which may be had cheaply, the fertility of which is not doubted. In fact, the great Northwest has "room for millions to come."

IT is believed in Seattle that Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, with favorable weather, will produce this year the largest crops ever harvested. There has been a large increase in acreage and the present indications are that there will be a large yield.

THE live stock industry is attracting the attention of the Northwest and dairying and poultry products have shown enormous gains, particularly in the last two years.

ON Friday of this week Group 3, Indiana, met on the farm of A. G. Lupton, near Hartford City. Automobiles conveyed the delegates to and from the farm, where a country dinner was served, which the visitors said was the "real thing." There were talks by Prof. Skinner of Purdue University, Dick Miller of Indianapolis, and Robert L. McCabe, chiefly on banking topics. Banker Lupton's farm is one of the most famous of its kind in America. He is the largest producer of Shetland ponies in the country.

PRESIDENT D. S. CULVER of the Minnesota Bankers has called attention to the fact that it has been the custom for many years in his state to submit the presidential address to the members of the executive council before making it public. There may have been a necessity for this proceeding at some time, but certainly it operates against that publicity which such a document otherwise could give to the state association and its affairs.

SO far as is known this is the only state where the president's annual address is subject to this form of "supervision and inspection."

SECRETARY F. H. COLBURN of the California Bankers Association has issued a bulletin covering the proceedings of his convention, giving the convention detail, but none of the addresses, which in this particular instance were very entertaining. He labels his first bulletin No. 1, and leads one to anticipate future issues.

WORD comes from St. Louis that Mr. Huttig is taking things quietly at his residence at 37 Washington Terrace, and that he is not engaging strenuously in banking matters just at present. He continues to improve in strength in a very satisfactory degree.

RUMOR has it that several mysterious persons are engaged quite busily in buying up private banks in Illinois, the ostensible purpose being to convert them into state institutions.

Banking Conditions in State of New York

Custom makes it the duty of your president to address the members of the association at our annual convention, and it gives me great pleasure to perform that duty and to welcome you here to-day.

Since our last meeting the financial condition of the country has been unsatisfactory, from the standpoint of the manufacturer, the business man and the banker. The uncertainty and unrest which have prevailed, coupled with the political activities of the past few months, have made the conservative element refrain from engaging in new undertakings and become more careful in concentrating its available assets. This has naturally led to a decided decrease in our normal business, and while fundamentally conditions are on a sound basis, we have much to hope for before we experience the energy in business enterprises which existed before the present period of political agitation.

In this association, as in others, the term of office gives to your officials and executive council only time to inaugurate plans and changes which it is deemed are for the best interests of the association, and it is for our successors to carry to a conclusion the suggestions which are made in a previous administration, and are thought worthy of continuance.

In this connection I desire especially to call your attention to the appointment by the executive council during the present year of two committees. Their object and aims are of the first importance and I would urge upon you the necessity of their continuance by the association, and ask the hearty support of all in the good work which it is my earnest hope these committees will accomplish. I refer to the committee on currency reform and the committee on agricultural development and education.

With the feeling of unrest, and the false doctrines which it seems is the desire of some of our public men to engender in the minds of the people, we are led to question the sincerity of a large portion of those in public life, and it should be our aim to so educate, not only those in our calling, but all with whom we come in contact, that they may be able to think for themselves and realize the need of legislation which will insure the much needed and best currency reform that can be suggested by those who have made a study of the needs of the country in that direction, assisted by those whose every day life is devoted to the practical necessities of this wonderful country of ours, still in its infancy.

We should, as far as possible, forget our selfish interests, and endeavor to support that which will be for the benefit of all. We owe to the succeeding generations a legacy that will insure stability in a currency system, and one that will stand the test of time and make easier the task of those who succeed to our duties.

During the past few weeks, a request has been made by the committee on banking and currency of the house of representatives, of the national and state banks and trust companies of this and other states, to furnish certain information about their business. Many of our friends thought that compliance would be

W. H. BENNETT
New York City. President New York Bankers Association

but it is believed that all thoughtful members of the community will approve our course. It goes without saying in this audience that the representatives of our banks should be deemed the best advisers in respect to financial questions, and more particularly so when political exigency may afford opportunity to the advocates of false theories to misrepresent the conservative course to which bankers should adhere. It would appear proper that the bankers of this state here assembled express their opinion as to our duty in guarding the interests of those for whom we act substantially as trustees, and as to the method in which we may best render assistance to those who are conscientiously endeavoring to improve our monetary system. It is peculiarly appropriate for this association to consider the principles involved in a matter of this kind. On the one hand, many of the questions asked by the committee would involve the public disclosure of the confidential relations existing between the various banks and their customers, while on the other hand, there is the high authority reposed in our national legislature and the consideration of due respect to this important committee. Moreover, it should be the aim of banking interests generally to aid in the proper and wise reconstruction of our monetary system.

There are many theories advanced, which it is claimed will quell the endeavor to instill unrest in the minds of the people, and the one that strongly appeals to me is that which makes possible insuring the wage earner a calling that will be suited to his physical and mental heritage, and that will yield him an adequate compensation.

During the past twenty-five years we have seen the overcrowding of the cities and the depopulation of the farms. There is a cause for this, and it has been suggested to your executive council that it is their duty to study the conditions that exist and endeavor by their help to make possible, by education, the accumulation of a competence at home, in an atmosphere that is more healthful and congenial than that of the crowded cities. In this endeavor we are assured of the co-operation of those in our state who have, because of their efforts, witnessed the good results of the conservation of natural resources.

Your legislative committee has successfully opposed several measures, and has succeeded finally in having passed two bills which the association has been supporting for several years.

Your attention is also called to the organization of a committee on inland exchange. This subject is now being seriously considered by the clearing houses of all the large centers, and we, as an association, should endeavor to obtain views and suggestions from all parts of the state, and be heard, before changes are made or new ideas adopted.

There will be presented at this meeting a recommendation in regard to the conduct of our finances. I urge upon you, the largest of the state associations, to give this recommendation your hearty support and thus remove the certainty of just criticism of the continuance of a condition which we, as bankers, are the first to condemn. If we cannot conduct our affairs so as to obviate the necessity of becoming a debtor, I would recommend an entire change in our procedure.

It has been my endeavor in the conduct of the affairs of the office to apportion the duties over the entire state, and to prevent in every way possible favoritism of any individual or interest. We should give to every member of the association that to which he is entitled, and favor none for personal gain or personal preference.

Before formally surrendering my duties, I desire to express my appreciation of the efficient co-operation of my brother officers and the chairmen and members of the various committees it has been my privilege to name. Your secretary is entitled to much praise for his untiring efforts in behalf of the association, and his desire to place it in a position befitting the great state in whose limits its work is confined.

PRESIDENT C. J. MONROE TO MICHIGAN BANKERS

The address of President C. J. Monroe delivered at the convention of the Michigan Bankers Association held in Kalamazoo this week was extremely interesting and practical in its nature. Mr. Monroe opened his address by detailing some of the early events leading up to the organization of the Michigan Bankers Association, and the origin of and adoption of the present banking law of Michigan. He also touched briefly on the need of a national reserve association, saying in part:

"When we recall the worry caused by panics, the wrecking of business enterprises and the destroying of property, entailing large losses and depriving thousands of wage workers of their daily bread, necessary raiment and shelter, it ought to stir every thoughtful person to strenuous efforts for their betterment. People who have passed three score and ten years, and have lived in the state, have personal knowledge or knowledge through their immediate ancestors. I remember very well the vivid recital of my father and his contemporaries of the losses and the hardship of the panic of 1837. Coming the year the state was born into the Union, like new enterprises as a rule, whether public or private, the state and its inhabitants were existing on the hand to mouth plan with little or no surplus to tide over the shock. I have a very distinct memory of the panic of 1857, how quickly it came and how it paralyzed all sorts of business and imposed many hardships on wage earners, and how it was aggravated and prolonged by the Civil War with all its destructive influences. With the older bankers I was in the banking business through the panics of 1873-87-93 and 1907 and so shared the common anxiety of the banking fraternity, responsible for the money of the people and helpless to command the ready money to pay any considerable part of it, although having plenty of property, securities and collateral; and none knew better than the bankers that there still was plenty of ready money to run business as usual, except for being checked by a panic stroke and diverted into hiding and idleness. It seems clear that we have not made any progress in warding off panics, for that of 1907 was the most unexpected, the most senseless and needless of any in the past. It came when labor and capital were actively employed, which are the principal handmaids of prosperity. So we must rely on thought, study and painstaking investigation, experience and observation to work out some plan more satisfactory. Certainly, a large amount of information has been gathered from foreign countries and also at home. It is a helpful sign that increased attention is being given to home conditions. The government, like individuals, must work out its own salvation. Financial salvation must come from a system that fits best into our conditions. I think the sentiment of a large majority of those who have given much thought to it is fairly well settled on three things: a co-operative association including the largest number of banks obtainable, the most rigid exclusion of speculators or speculative banks, and the most definite and exacting provision against expansion, with taxing and other penalties, making it of special interest and even obligation for the return of the currency issued as soon as possible after the emergency is over. With the new and country-wide interest being manifested by individuals and associations of all sorts, it may fairly be expected that public sentiment will be so crystalized that congress will pass the necessary statute."

Mr. Monroe also spoke on the many advantages of the American Institute of Banking in training bank clerks to occupy positions of honor, confidence and trust in the various banks in which they are employed. The Institute now comprises approximately 10,300 bank clerks who are divided among fifty-seven chapters in the larger cities of the country. It is less than twelve years old, and has progressed steadily in importance and membership since its inception. During this period about seven hundred bank clerks, members of the Institute, have been promoted to official positions in banks. The speaker pointed out that it is a universally recognized fact that banking, like other professions, requires a special training in order to fit one adequately to discharge the duties and responsibilities of the profession; that while an apprenticeship in a bank was at one time considered as being all that was necessary, it no longer is regarded in that light.

Reference also was made by Mr. Monroe to agricultural development and education, recommending that these subjects be added to the work of the association, and that a standing committee be appointed and authorized in the usual manner for the promotion of interest in these most important topics. Mr. Monroe stated that these matters first appealed to him when he noticed that they were to be discussed at the convention of the Illinois Bankers Association held at Springfield last year; also as a result of the work accomplished at the agricultural conference held in St. Paul last year. After the convention of the A. B. A. at New Orleans. Mr. Monroe attempted to learn what he could of the educational and industrial conditions of the South, making several stops on the way home and questioning and observing all that he could. He told of the boll-weevil scourge in the South and of the methods adopted by the government to check its spread. He spoke of the wonderful prosperity of the South as a result of the movement for agricultural education and vocational training, not only in the increase of manufactures, railroad building, population, schools and better buildings for homes and business, but also the large increase in bank clearings and individual deposits. He said:

"The report of the comptroller for 1911 shows of the seven groups of States by geographical sections, that the southern group increased in individual deposits from June, 1910, to June, 1911, 15.62 per cent; the next, the middle western states, 5.35 per cent, or about one-third as much, and the average for all the groups 4.07 per cent. The southern group also stands second in the volume of increase."

Dean A. F. Woods on Agricultural Education in Minnesota

It has been but very few years since the educational forces and citizens of Minnesota were divided into two contending camps on the question of industrial and especially agricultural education in the secondary schools. The need for better agricultural training was apparent to everybody, but the best method of securing it was a matter of dispute.

Minnesota had taken the first steps in this direction in 1888 before any other state had undertaken to solve the question. Under the auspices of the university and in connection with the agricultural college and the newly established experiment station, a school of agriculture was organized, taking the boys after they had completed the rural schools and giving them a training in the sciences underlying agriculture and country life affairs with special reference to the management of the farm and the farm home. Co-education was established in 1893.

The facilities for instruction in connection with the college and station were unusually good. The instruction in the college and the workers in the station co-operated in the work of instruction and demonstration, and the students received the added benefits of these contacts.

The course was designed to articulate with the farm, the school work covering a period of the winter months when the boys could best be spared from the farm. Short courses of four to six weeks are also organized for those farmers and their wives who could not be away for long, but who desired to know the most approved methods of farm practice and management.

A similar school was later established at Crookston, under the auspices of the university, in connection with a sub-experiment station and farm, and a year ago a third school of this type was organized at Morris in connection with a sub-experiment station and farm.

The success of these schools has been remarkable. They have always been crowded way beyond the capacity. Eighty per cent of the graduates, since the organization of the first school in 1888, are engaged in farming or in work closely allied to it, such as creamery manager, managing co-operative elevators, etc. Those who have graduated from the school are the leaders in stock breeding, crop improvement, co-operative marketing, co-operative dairies, consolidated schools, road improvement, drainage, home improvement, farmers' clubs, and in other movements tending to make country life pleasanter and more profitable. Every county in the state has from a few to a hundred or more of these men and women demonstrating the better way on their own farms and in their own homes.

When the demand came for more extensive agricultural education, the first thought was to establish more of these special schools, dividing the state into nine districts and providing a school for each. On the other hand, it was argued that even that number could not begin to furnish facilities needed, and to meet the demand agriculture would have to be introduced into the high schools and rural schools. After full discussion, provision was made by the Legislature of 1909, through the Putnam Act, for aiding ten high schools to the extent of $2,500 a year, in organizing courses in agriculture, manual training, and domestic art. The greatest difficulty was the lack of trained teachers. There was also much uncertainty as to just what to attempt with the restricted faculty and facilities available at even the best high schools.

About fifty schools made application for the aid. The High School Board, after careful investigation, selected ten apparently best able to provide for the work and well distributed geographically. They were Albert Lea, Alexandria, Canby, Cokato, Glencoe, Hinckley, Lewiston, Consolidated Rural School, McIntosh, Red Wing, and Wells. With the co-operation of the agricultural college and the high school inspector, Mr. Aiton, well qualified teachers were secured for each of these schools. The work started off with enthusiasm and made excellent progress during the year. Two hundred and sixty-six students registered in agriculture for the nine months course, 201 for the short courses of 3 to 6 months, and instruction was given to 544 in the grades.

In domestic science, 418 registered in the nine months course, 101 in the short courses, and 842 grade pupils were instructed. The agricultural college extension workers assisted each of these schools in organizing short courses and extension work. This proved a very valuable feature. Interest in the school was aroused and much assistance given to the farmers in testing corn for germination and other seeds for purity and germination, testing milk for butter fat, testing cows for yield, compounding rations, laying out rotations, making drainage plans, construction of silos, stock judging, organization of co-operative enterprises, and in many other ways entering into the life of the rural community.

conference of educators and others interested in agricultural education met at the university for the purpose of working out a unified plan for the state. Special invitations were sent to members of the legislature, the various educational boards and institutions, superintendents and principals of high and graded schools, the agricultural committee of the Minnesota Bankers Association, superintendent of public instruction, and other educators of neighboring states and of the national government. Representatives were present from all of these sources and took part in the deliberations. After careful consideration and full discussion, resolutions were adopted without a dissenting vote, endorsing the plan.

These resolutions outlined a well-defined educational policy, tending towards a better co-ordination of the parts of the present system. The discussions which were printed in full in the report of the state superintendent of public instruction for 1909-10, contain much valuable matter relating to all phases of the problem. The most important result was the evident determination of every one representing all parts of the educational system from the rural school to the university, the state departments, the legislature, the national government, the bankers and merchants, business and professional men generally, to work together in harmony in organizing the best possible educational system for Minnesota.

The general plan provides, first, for improved rural schools with state aid sufficient to stimulate consolidation or association; second, for the introduction of agriculture, manual training, and domestic art into the high schools as rapidly as facilities can be furnished and competent teachers provided; third, for the continuation of the schools of agriculture under the control of the university as schools of agricultural technology, open to graduates of consolidated schools or agricultural high schools for more extended work in practical agriculture and the establishment of similar schools for other industrial arts to supplement the work of the regular high schools; for the training of teachers in industrial subjects in the summer training schools, normal courses in high schools, normal schools, and the college of agriculture.

The legislature for 1911 made substantial provision to carry out all of these recommendations. The high school board was authorized to select twenty additional schools under the Putnam law, each to receive $2,500 a year. Provision was also made under the Lee-Benson act to give $1,000 a year to any high school or graded school that should suitably provide for the teaching of agriculture and home economics or manual training. Provision was also made under the Holmberg law for $1,500 aid for four-room consolidated schools, $1,000 for three-room, $750 for two-room. A principal capable of teaching agriculture, with proper equipment, including at least two acres of ground, must also be provided.

State aid for industrial contests and agricultural extension work was also liberally provided.

The wisdom of these provisions has been abundantly demonstrated during the last year. The 20 additional Putnam schools were quickly and wisely selected as follows: Bemidji, Deer River, Cloquet, Fergus Falls, Hector, Kasson, Litchfield, Little Falls, Madison, Milaca, Northfield, St. James, Sleepy Eye, Spring Valley, Thief River Falls, Warren, Westbrook, Wheaton, Willmar, and Worthington. All together about 85 out of the 207 state high schools have introduced agriculture, manual training and home economics. The country has been scoured for teachers. The greatest care possible has been exercised in their selection. Agricultural college graduates have been secured in most places and they have done remarkably good work, considering the difficulties to be overcome. Every possible assistance has been extended by the extension division of the college of agriculture, and provision for still further help the coming year is now being made. A thoroughly trained expert in agricultural education will visit each school and give or secure such advice and assistance as may be needed. The state department, the high school board, and the colleges of agriculture and education of the university will co-operate in this work.

The courses in the colleges of agriculture and education have been modified so that those desiring to teach agriculture may secure special preparation for that work. Similar provision is also made for home economics and manual training.

The demand for teachers of agriculture is far beyond the supply. Nearly every state has taken up the movement for secondary agricultural education and qualified teachers are sought everywhere. In Minnesota alone we could use three times as many teachers as we graduate each year at salaries ranging on the start from $1,000 to $6,500. It requires at least four years college work besides a year or more of practical experience to fit a teacher for the work in the high schools. Not more than half of any class are fitted by taste and temperament for teaching. It is evident therefore, that the college work must be largely extended if it is to fulfill this important function, not to mention the training of farm managers and experiment station workers and practical farmers. It is evident that the normal schools will have to co-operate in this work, probably offering two years of work equivalent to freshman and sophomore year, with special reference to teaching, followed by two or three years in the college of agriculture and education. Good work is being done in the normal departments of agricultural high schools in training teachers for the rural schools. The schools of agriculture at University Farm, Crookston, and Morris are also to assist in the work of training rural teachers, and courses have been approved with this end in view.

Our experience is of value to you because it is gained in the successful building of 67 dams to date (Nov. 1, 1911), of all heights up to 150 feet and having an aggregate length of over 4½ miles. We have inaugurated a system of bimonthly bulletins on pungent engineering topics as viewed from the Bankers' standpoint. Send us your name for our mailing list.

The summer training schools held at these points last year were attended by over 1800 rural teachers, and more are expected the present season. Through the extension division of the college, similar work in agriculture and domestic science is offered in as many of the county training schools as possible. The aim is to give every teacher in the state an opportunity to study the elements of these subjects, whether they ever have to teach them or not.

The industrial contest work in the schools also aids the teachers greatly in arousing interest of pupils and parents. Two experts from the college give most of their time to this work. One of the purposes of the agricultural high schools is to furnish centers for extension work. The college has co-operated extensively with them with this end in view. The printed maps in the seats illustrated the extent of this co-operative effort during the year. Each dot represents a center as reported by the schools where extension work has been carried on. The connecting lines indicate the extension centers. (See Map 3.) The short course and institute work of the college is shown on the following map. (See Map 4.) The demonstration farms are another line of educational work combining the good features of several of the older types of demonstration work. (See Map 5.) Farms and farmers representing the type meeting reorganization are selected with the co-operation of local interests and working plans are made by the experts for the reorganization and management of the farms. Careful account is taken of every factor entering into the case, including the man and the markets as well as the soil, climate, etc. No help is given beyond furnishing the plan and advice and frequent visits. What is accomplished is therefore the work of the farmer under his own conditions and becomes a real demonstration of what he can do rather than what the state can do. The location of these farms, as at present under operation, is shown on the map.

The state is divided into agricultural districts as indicated by heavy lines on map. A branch of the experiment station is located in all but three, which, with the agricultural high schools and consolidated schools, gives local centers to work from. The plan is to organize in each district on a county basis, having experts give their whole time to the work in each county, working directly with the farmers. A district committee made up of representatives from each county committee and local county committees will co-operate in developing local initiative. The experts will be secured through the co-operation of the county, the agricultural college, and the national department of agriculture, and under the general control of the agricultural college. It is hoped thus to harmonize and focus all work undertaken in a district. The national federation of grain exchanges has offered to co-operate with the county work to the extent of $1,000 for one year in each county. The west central district has been organized according to this plan and others are in process of organization. Two years of work of this kind in connection with the other forms of extension work has demonstrated its tremendous educational value as well as its value from a financial standpoint to the individual farmer and to the state. Sixty bushels of corn instead of 35; 25 bushels of wheat instead of 13; 400 bushels of potatoes instead of 150; 10,000 pounds of milk instead of 6,000; 2½ tons of hay per acre instead of 1½, are a few of the items of increase that are easily secured with little additional cost.

Agriculture has recently become a science as well as an art and organized business. It requires education, experience, and skill to compete in the business of farming to-day. And no business, profession, or calling can offer greater material rewards, greater scope for mental and physical development, greater opportunity to perform real service to humanity, greater pleasure and happiness, than agriculture.

Group Four

Never again will Illinois bankers inquire as to where Yorkville is located, for the reason that Group 4 was entertained there on Tuesday in matchless style. Probably it was the best group meeting ever held by that group organization. The program was one of the very best and would have served quite well for a state convention. President J. M. Hurst presided in a quiet, graceful manner, and introduced W. R. Newton, president of the Yorkville National, the only bank in that town, who welcomed the visitors. President George Woodruff of the First National at Joliet made the response for the delegates, and included in his remarks a short editorial from his own paper, which made a hit with the bankers. The principal address of the morning was by Charles H. Hammill, a Chicago attorney, who talked on "Constitutional Government," which in reality was a very clever arraignment of the recall agitation which has crept into the present presidential campaign, probably to the detriment of one of the candidates. Following Mr. Hammill there were short talks on good roads by President W. D. Steward of the First State Bank of Plano, and by Peter Klein, who in addition to being president of the German-American National at Aurora, is the editor of one of the leading papers of that busy city. Mr. Klein has a style that is inimitable, and drew forth rounds of applause as he detailed the prominence of the Fox River Valley district in manufacture as well as in dairy and other products. He left very little to be desired, even by a man who might be trying to sell one of those fine river front farms at five or six hundred dollars an acre. Clarence E. Smith, president of the Peoples Bank at Waukegan, urged the bankers to co-operate in the exchange of credit information, and cautioned them that such information, once imparted, never should be used against the man who furnished it.

The dinner served by the members of the Eastern Star easily was the hit of the occasion. The music furnished by the Yorkville orchestra was strictly of a classical order, and rendered in a way which drew forth great applause and many encores from those present. The dinner consisted of the choicest of the natural products of the fertile Fox River district and was much enjoyed by those in attendance. At the conclusion of the meal W. G. Edens of Chicago delivered one of his eloquent addresses on the interest which the banker is taking in agricultural and educational subjects. Mr. Edens paid a fine tribute to the ladies of the Eastern Star and to the spirit of hospitality which everywhere was manifest in the little city, which lies along both banks of the beautiful Fox River, and is on one of the main travel roads of the state. Transportation from Chicago was in part by the Burlington route and in part by automobile. President George of the old Second National at Aurora, and former President Simpson of the same bank each appeared at the station at Aurora with an automobile; each bore off a full load of bankers down the west shoreline of the Fox River, and at the conclusion of the convention they returned by a different route along the other shore. This courtesy was much appreciated by those who were favored with the opportunity.

Group 4 went on record unanimously as endorsing W. T. Fenton of the National Bank of the Republic of Chicago for membership on the executive council of the American Bankers Association. This resolution was offered by President C. E. Smith of the Peoples Bank at Waukegan, and it ought to be said by way of justification, that the presiding officer, Mr. Hurst, who is from Mr. Fenton's bank, had nothing whatever to do with the matter. It came about as a sense of justice to Mr. Fenton, who for years has been a prominent and productive worker in both the state and national associations, and who is an ex-president of the Illinois Bankers Association. The convention made further history by electing George Woodruff, president of the First National at Joliet, a member of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association, thus furthering the intentions of his friends to elect him chairman of that distinguished body. Charles N. Stevens of Evanston, the efficient secretary of Group 4, was elected to the presidency, and Charles B. Wright of Crystal Lake, a member of the executive committee, was promoted to be secretary.

President B. F. Harris of the state association spoke briefly on the work of the organization and asked the private and all other bankers to help secure the passage of a safe, conservative and equitable banking bill giving Illinois the same sort of bank supervision enjoyed by neighboring and sister states. His talk was pacific and pleasing to those present. His fairness and intent are above question and opposition, except where chronic, seems to be dying out.

The members nominating committee Group 4 were Thomas E. Newcomer, Chicago; B. J. Richmond, Elburn; G. D. Stroker, Wauconda; Ed. Wilson, Manhattan; W. D. Steward, Plano; C. B. Whittemore, Marengo; F. C. Bebb, Hinsdale.

The new members of the executive committee, in addition to the officers elected, are Robert Kelly, Will County; Henry Cooper, Kane County; William Givler, DuPage County; C. B. Whittemore, Henry County; G. D. Stroker, Lake County.

B. J. Stumm of Yorkville was elected treasurer.

William G. Edens

William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, returned this week from group meetings held in Tuscola and Jacksonville, Ill., and Princeton, Indiana. He reports these meetings as well attended and the programs presented of much interest. Crop conditions are a little backward in some of the southern Illinois counties owing to the late season. Business is going along in a rather quiet manner. Mr. Edens attended the meeting of Group 4, Illinois, held in Yorkville on Tuesday, the Michigan convention held in Kalamazoo, the meeting of Group 2, Indiana, at Gary on Thursday afternoon and that of Group 3, held at Hartford City on Friday, returning to Chicago in time to participate in the reception to be accorded to the delegation of Detroit business men representing the Detroit Board of Commerce, who are to be here on June 15th, and who will be the guests of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Michigan Convention

Kalamazoo, Mich., June 12.—For the first time in a number of years the Michigan bankers abandoned their seagoing proclivities and held their convention on land. Registration at the New Burdick began on the evening of the 10th and exceeded that of any convention held within recent years. Identification badges were furnished to the bankers, and the citizens of Kalamazoo notified everybody that came that automobiles would be at their disposal during the entire term of their stay in that city. Full courtesy of the park and country clubs was extended, and a committee of Kalamazoo ladies looked especially after the entertainment of visiting ladies. Mayor C. B. Hayes welcomed the visitors. Emory W. Clark of Detroit made the response, and was followed immediately by President Charles J. Monroe in his annual address. Business reports were made by Treasurer D. Dansart, Jr., by Attorney H. H. Smith and by Secretary (Mrs.) H. M. Brown. Home talent provided the entertainment for the first day, and it was of a very high order. Banking Commissioner E. H. Doyle spoke for the general good and safety of banking, and Attorney Smith of the association talked on taxation of bank stocks and deposits. These are two subjects in which Michigan bankers are very deeply interested at the present time. The session of the second day opened with reports of committees, and there were addresses by George E. Lawson on agricultural development; by J. L. Snyder of the agricultural college at Lansing on a similar topic; President D. B. Waldo of the Western State Normal School talked on the banker and the farmer and Hon. John A. Beaumont on agriculture. No other state has exceeded this broadside of four events all directed at the betterment of farming and domestic conditions. At four o'clock there was a meeting devoted to the interests of the American Institute of Banking, at which President C. J. Monroe presided as chairman and Clay H. Hollister of the committee reported. At this meeting George E. Allen spoke on banking education. There also was an evening session devoted to affairs of the Institute, at which President G. G. Rogers of the Kalamazoo Chapter presided. State Superintendent of Public Instruction L. L. Wright addressed the junior bankers as did Professor Edward D. Jones of the University. The third and concluding day's session was devoted entirely to routine proceedings, at which an immense amount of work was accomplished. It concluded with the election of officers. There was a session of the membership of the American Bankers Association carried out according to the program, a theatre party for the ladies and a banquet for the members of the convention. At the banquet special speakers were provided, among whom were J. Laurence Laughlin of Chicago, John H. Johnson of Detroit, and Hon. Julian C. Burrows of Michigan.

WISCONSIN

For the purpose of threshing out the plan of mutual insurance of bank deposits before it comes before the annual convention of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, the Milwaukee Bankers Association held a special meeting Tuesday night, following a dinner at the Milwaukee Athletic Club. Earle Pease, Grand Rapids; H. A. Moehlenpah, Clinton; E. A. Dow, and F. J. Carr, Hudson, members of the special committee appointed to draft the new insurance plan, described its provisions and aims. The plan as briefly outlined by Mr. Pease provides for the formation of a mutual insurance company by the bankers of the state, which shall grant policies to such banks, whether state or national, as shall apply for insurance, the premium as fixed in the tentative bill being $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent, or 25 cents on \$100. Of the few who stood out against the plan was J. W. P. Lombard, who characterized it as "too communistic and liable to foster unsafe legislation." Andrew J. Frame of Waukesha, who attended the meeting, had little to say on the plan except that it was worth careful consideration. Milwaukee bankers and others who attended the meeting included: Charles Ray, A. J. Frame, Waukesha; L. J. Petit, Earle Pease, Grand Rapids; William Bigelow, J. K. Hsley, H. A. Moehlenpah, Clinton; Oliver C. Fuller, E. A. Dow, C. R. Thomson, E. Reddeman, Willis L. Cheney, W. Frame, E. J. Hughes, William M. Post, H. A. VonOven, J. W. P. Lombard, George W. Strohmeier, Charles C. Brown, L.

Post was elected a member of the nominating committee of Group 8, W. B. A., including the Milwaukee banks.

Return Optimistic

Glowing tributes to the wealth of the country and the enterprise of the people throughout the central section of Wisconsin are paid by bankers and others who returned Sunday from the annual business junket of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association. In particular reference to the banks visited, Secretary W. G. Bruce of the association, says: "The banks everywhere show heavy deposits. Small towns with populations of from 1,000 to 2,000 frequently show total deposits of over $1,000,000, most of the money belonging to the farmers."

President Otto H. Falk of the association, on his return, said: "The crops throughout the state look promising and the farmers as well as the people in the many towns stopped at appear optimistic and hopeful. I think the trip this year will be a far greater success and of more benefit to Milwaukee than any previous trip."

Death of G. D. Bartlett's Mother

Misfortune visited George D. Bartlett, the genial secretary of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, last week, in the death of his mother, Mrs. Abbey S. Bartlett, after a long period of illness from pneumonia contracted during the past winter. Funeral services were held on Monday at Mr. Bartlett's home, 200 Queen Anne Place, and the remains were taken to Minneapolis, Mrs. Bartlett's former home, for interment. His sudden bereavement prevented the state secretary from delivering an address he had prepared for the meeting of Group 3, W. B. A., at Shawano this week.

For Crop Improvement

An appropriation of $75,000 for crop improvement has been made Wisconsin from the $1,000,000 fund of the crop improvement committee of the North American Council of Grain Exchanges. Secretary Bert Ball of the committee made the announcement this week at the crop improvement meeting held under the auspices of the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce on the trading floor. One of the provisions of the agreement by which counties may secure a part of the appropriation is that each county raise a sufficient fund to employ a permanent scientific agriculturist and farm demonstrator.

HORNBLOWER & WEEKS

The firm of Hornblower & Weeks, bankers and brokers, was established in 1887 in Boston and later opened offices in New York and Chicago. The nine members of the firm are prominent in financial circles and, through their active interest in public affairs, especially so are John W. Weeks and Henry Hornblower. Mr. Weeks is a member of congress from Massachusetts and has served on the Monetary Commission. He is first vice-president of the First National Bank of Boston and ranks among the leading bankers of the country. Mr. Hornblower is president of the Boston Stock Exchange and is one of Boston's ablest citizens.

The Chicago office was opened five years ago in the Central Trust Building with Edward Clifford as manager. Under Mr. Clifford's management the business has increased to such an extent that it was necessary recently to move into larger quarters on the ground floor of the New York Life Building, 37 South LaSalle Street. This firm, members of the New York, Boston and Chicago Stock Exchanges, with private wires and correspondents throughout the country, offers unexcelled facilities for the buying or selling of all kinds of listed or unlisted securities for investment or on margins.

Minnesota Convention

Agricultural College, St. Anthony Park, Minn., June 15.—For the past two days the members and delegates of the Minnesota Bankers Association have been enjoying the hospitality of the agricultural college, a department of the University of Minnesota located in this beautiful park midway between Minneapolis and St. Paul. Most of the delegates took advantage of the opportunity to take rooms in dormitories and to have their meals served by the college attendants. The charges were very moderate considering the kind of service rendered, and everyone seemed to enjoy the outing to the fullest extent. Minnesota long having been considered a leader in agricultural and educational matters, gave over most of its program to speakers on topics relating to it. President D. S. Culver of St. Paul called the convention to order on Friday morning and delivered his annual address to the members. Secretary Charles R. Frost and Treasurer A. G. Wedge, Jr., reported for their respective departments, and J. W. Wheeler of the Capital National of St. Paul spoke on behalf of the committee on agricultural development and education. Some of those who spoke on educational topics were Dean A. F. Woods of the University; Hon. James Wilson, secretary of agriculture at Washington; Dean C. F. Curtis of the Ames (Ia.) Agricultural College; Thos. Cooper, secretary of the Better Farming Association of North Dakota; John Monroe, principal of the Cokato associated high schools; P. H. Konzen of Halleck, and C. P. De Laittre. At four o'clock a recess was taken and the delegates were conducted through the building and grounds of the agricultural college. Special demonstrations were given in steer feeding, farm management, farm planting, control of insects, diseases, etc. There was a long list of speakers for the second day also. Among them were H. J. Maxfield, commissioner of immigration for Minnesota; Joseph Chapman, Jr., of Minneapolis; George A. DuToit, of Chaska; A. G. Wedge, Jr., of Bemidji; L. A. Huntoon, of Moorhead, and W. F. McLane, of Minneapolis. Following these addresses the routine business of the association was concluded and the new officers elected and installed. Successors were elected to the retiring members of the executive council of the state association, and one to succeed J. W. Wheeler, who is retiring as a member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association.

Much of the work of the Minnesota Bankers Association is done by committees. The committee headed by J. W. Wheeler on agricultural development has done a great deal of work during the past year. Other committees which rendered important service are the committee on registration and commercial paper, headed by George A. DuToit; the committee on surety companies, headed by A. G. Wedge, Jr., and the committee on farm mortgages, headed by L. A. Huntoon. The entertainment features consisted chiefly in the kinemacolor pictures of the Indian durbar, or coronation ceremonies, given in the college auditorium, and a talk by Hon. W. I. Nolan on "Remarks Wise and Otherwise." A very large attendance was the result of the splendid program and entertainment offered by the clearing house banks of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

At La Crosse, Wis., 2,334 children are depositing money in the penny savings bank account conducted in the schools.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also

St. Louis, June 12.—The past week is characterized by local bankers as ultra slow. Locally things have not picked up among borrowers, and in the country activities in that direction are spotted. In Arkansas and southern Missouri banks are pretty well loaned up, and are borrowing here to some extent. In the cattle and stock feeding regions, notably in Texas and Oklahoma, the movement of their products to market is well under way, resulting in good, large payments. Generally the outlook in the country continues to improve. The government crop report, while evidently a disappointment to Wall Street, is to the student of the situation, satisfactory. It shows a total yield of wheat only slightly under that of a year ago, while the pessimistic reports and statistics of a month or six weeks back indicated little short of a calamity. There is little doubt that the May condition given by the Crop Reporting Bureau was too high, so that the 74 per cent on June 1st looked sad. That, however, is about the true condition, and since the books closed, there has been steady improvement, owing to rains and generally ideal weather. The prospects for spring wheat are the best in years, and will go far to offset the shortage in the winter crop. Corn is undoubtedly promising; a heavy hay crop is assured, fruit will be a success throughout this region, and small crops of all kinds will be abundant. Among business interests at large there seems a more hopeful undertone. There is a disposition to cast off the influence of politics and go ahead regardless. The worst that can happen is known, or accurately guessed, and has been largely discounted. While there will be plenty politically to sustain interest during the next few months, it has not the terrors of uncertainty of a few months ago. The business elements are getting used to it. While not rushing, banks here are doing good routine business, most of them earning dividends and a little more. Clearings are holding up very well, each week showing big gains over the corresponding periods in 1911.

Watts Comes to Third National

The Third National is soon to increase its staff of vice-presidents by the addition of F. O. Watts, president of the First National of Nashville, Tenn., and former president of the American Bankers Association. Negotiations have been under way with Mr. Watts for some weeks, but his final decision to accept the vice-presidency was only received on Tuesday. The move, it is stated by officials of the Third National, was due to the absence of Charles H. Huttig, president, and George W. Galbreath, vice president, of the institution. Mr.

Huttig is building up his health after his recent illness, and Mr. Galbreath is on a four-months leave of absence in California, recouping after the strain of double duty since the departure of Mr. Huttig. Mr. Huttig has announced to his associates that he will resume his full duties at the bank in September, and Mr. Galbreath will return to the city some time in August. Thomas Wright, vice-president, has been acting in the absence of the two officers during the past few weeks. He says the acquisition of Mr. Watts does not mean any other change in the present staff.

Watts Well Known Here

Mr. Watts will not come to St. Louis as a stranger, he having a wide acquaintance among the business men and banking fraternity here. His career in banking has been a remarkable one, and the unanimous opinion among St. Louis bankers is that the Third National has made a most fortunate stroke in securing his services. He is forty-four years old and as fresh in body and mind as when at the age of twelve he began as a messenger boy in the First National of Union City, Tenn., at a salary of $5 a month. Before reaching his majority Mr. Watts was cashier of that bank. Going to Nashville fifteen years ago he was made cashier of the First National. Three years later he was promoted to the presidency, which he has since held. Now his bank has a business five times larger than when he entered it, and it is said that among eastern financiers he is regarded with greater confidence than any other banker in the South. One of his great feats in finance was the recent sale of the Nashville Railway and Light Company. He is ex-president of the Tennessee Bankers Association and now a member of the Executive Council of the American Bankers Association.

St. Louis Union Changes Day

The St. Louis Union Trust Company has changed the date of its annual meeting of stockholders from October to the second Thursday in January. The purpose of this change was to have the meeting at a time when most of the shareholders are in the city and so that the statements to the holders can be made to correspond with the calendar year. A majority of the financial institutions in St. Louis hold their meetings in January. The eight directors whose terms expire next October will hold over until January for the annual election. The company has twenty-five directors, the largest number possible under the law, and a third of the board is elected each year. Other changes in the by-laws were to incorporate in them the offices of assistant trust officers and one or two other officers to which appointments have been made by the boards at various times. No new offices were created.

Mercantile Insures Employees

The Mercantile Trust Company, through its president, Festus J. Wade, has taken out a general blanket life insurance policy for its 232 employees, whereby each is insured in the Equitable Life Insurance Company for an amount equal to two years salary of the individual employee. The amount of the policy aggregates $700,000, the largest of its kind in Missouri. This kind of employers' insurance has become popular in certain eastern cities, and has been in force in London for several years, but the Mercantile policy is the first taken out in St. Louis. The policy applies to every employee in both the trust company and the Mercantile National, from the scrubwomen up to Mr. Wade. The premium is paid monthly by the company. In discussing the action of his company, Mr. Wade said the directors felt that the good-will of the institution toward its employees could best be shown by such a step, taken in recognition of their interest in the company's welfare. Each employee is given the privilege of naming the beneficiary of his policy, which terminates when he severs his connection with the company.

New Banking Enterprises

Business men in the vicinity of Jefferson Avenue and Olive Street have called a meeting to consider the advisability of organizing a new bank with a capital stock of at least $100,000. L. J. Albert, Jr., treasurer of the Commercial Trust Company, which is located at the corner of Jefferson Avenue and Olive Street, is among the promoters of the enterprise. Mr. Albert says it is not the plan to absorb the Commercial Trust Company in the new bank. Until recently that institution maintained a banking department, but it sold its banking accounts to the Union Station Bank. The proposed new bank is the second project of the kind announced for Jefferson Avenue within the last two months. A party of South St. Louis business men are

Commonwealth Trust to Move

Commonwealth Trust officers have announced that the work of moving its money, books, papers and other effects now in the corporation's vaults on the northeast corner of Broadway and Olive Street, to the temporary location, at Broadway and Locust Street, would begin at noon on June 15th. It is expected to have everything ready to open for business next Monday morning. The removal is made necessary, owing to the razing of the bank's present building, preparatory to erecting the new nineteen-story building on its site. The contractors are James Stewart & Company, who expect to begin demolishing the present structure before the end of this month.

Real Estate Companies Merge

The real estate department of the Commonwealth Trust Company and the Joseph P. Whyte Real Estate Company have merged, and Mr. Whyte has become real estate officer of the trust company. W. H. New York Convention

Buffalo, N. Y., June 14.—The two strong drawing cards which brought everybody to Buffalo who could get there were George M. Reynolds of Chicago and Sir Edmund Walker of Toronto. Mr. Reynolds spoke earnestly in favor of the National Currency Association's plan for improving the banking and currency laws. Sir Edmund spoke on banking as a public service, and entertained his hearers greatly.

The headquarters were at the Lafayette, and each guest on registering, was presented with the courtesy of all the various clubs in Buffalo. Golf tournaments were provided at the country club for the ladies as well as for the gentlemen. Automobiles were provided to convey the delegates and guests to and from the various clubs free of charge on application at the desk of the committee. Howard Bissell was chairman of the committee on sports and made everybody happy by his courtesy and attention. Mayor Louis Fuhrmann of Buffalo welcomed the visitors, and the response was included in the annual address of President Walter H. Bennett. There were reports by Treasurer Elmer L. Milmine and by Secretary William J. Henry. Mr. Reynolds opened the first day's session and was followed by William E. Knox of the Bowery Savings Bank, New York, who spoke extemporaneously on "Our Common Service and Our Mutual Interest." All other remarks and addresses at this session were limited to five minutes each. The afternoon was given up to amusements. The second day's morning session opened with Sir Edmund Walker, and concluded with a talk on agricultural development and education by George E. Allen, educational director of the American Institute of Banking, and member of the New York state committee on agriculture. The election of officers concluded the session. The balance of the time was given up to amusements. There were among other things a trip on Lake Erie by a specially chartered steamer, on board of which luncheon was served. There also was a banquet at the Lafayette with oratorical fireworks in charge of Arthur Brisbane, the celebrated newspaper writer; Dr. Andrew V. Raymond and George Caleb Moor. On Friday afternoon there was a trip to Niagara Falls, including the famous gorge route and a reception and dinner at the Clifton House. It will be noted that fewer speakers are provided at a New York state convention for the entire two days' session than usually are provided for the morning or afternoon program at one of the farther west conventions. A great deal more time is given up at the eastern conventions to entertainment features.

NEW ILLINOIS BANKS

There is to be a new state bank at Palmer, Ill. The new institution will take over the business of the private bank of R. F. Best, and will be capitalized at $25,000. It will be known as the Palmer State Bank. R. F. Best has been elected president. The Farmers State Bank of Divernon, with a capital stock of $25,000, will open for business some time in June. David L. Haire is president, and Frank H. Lowe, cashier. The First National of Waterloo has been organized with a capital stock of $25,000. A. C. Bollinger is president, and J. F. Schmidt,

IMPROVED BANK SUPERVISION

Every reader who believes in improving present methods of bank supervision and in amending imperfect state banking laws should read in this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER the short but brilliant address of Bank Commissioner E. H. Doyle at the Kalamazoo convention of the Michigan Bankers Association. In concluding his address Mr. Doyle said:

"Bank supervision must improve to meet new conditions. It cannot remain at a standstill nor continue in a rut. It either must advance or retrograde. I believe with the periodical verification of assets and liabilities by directors, and with proper legislation giving the department the machinery to retard the over-extension of credit, and to keep unsafe, unfit, and inexperienced men out of the banking business, bank failures can be kept at a minimum."

Other portions of his address are quite as illuminating of the general subject, and he speaks strictly from experience in a state where the vast majority of bankers are in favor of better laws, better banking methods, and of increasing the quality of state supervision.

NEW YORK PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

President William H. Bennett in opening the Buffalo convention did not consume much of the time of the delegates, yet he omitted nothing of importance in his annual address. He told successively and tactfully the social advantages of such a meeting and the two new features of activity taken up during his administration. He referred to and asked for support of the state's committee on currency reform and of its newly constituted committee on agricultural development and education. New York is not distinctively an agricultural state, yet it is believed by all those who have looked into the matter that the field is as deserving and will be as remunerative as that presented in any of the sister commonwealths. President Bennett devoted a portion of his remarks to the present political agitation of false doctrines and openly questioned the sincerity of some of those at present in public life. He counseled the bankers to do whatever they can, with certain restrictions, to help the present investigation of the congressional committee on banking and currency. He believes that the outcome of the investigation can be directed generally in aid of a proper and wise reconstruction of our monetary system. The association had its attention directed to the opportunities presented in New York state for education and the accumulation of a competence in homes outside of the crowded and congested districts of the city. Mr. Bennett believes that efforts made by the association in this direction will give good results and make much easier the conservation of the state's natural resources. He touched lightly upon New York's mooted committee on inland exchange, so prominently in the public eye to-day, and which is expected to make some new arrangement about collection charges at that important financial center. Being a prudent and careful banker, the speaker called the attention of the membership to the fact that the association is called upon either to cut down its expenses or to increase its revenues. It is believed that this able association can by a slight readjustment of its affairs obviate the necessity of becoming a debtor. President Bennett has given up a great deal of his time to the affairs of the association, and has distributed its benefits and honors over every portion of the state with the utmost fairness and justness to all. He is a believer in the doctrine that every member is entitled to recognition and that neither preference nor personal gain should be allowed to interfere with the equitable distribution of the duties and responsibilities. His address will be found in full in this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER, and is well worth the attention of those interested in association matters.

NORTHERN MINNESOTA RESOURCES

At the Minnesota convention this week a speaker who resides less than twenty miles from the Canadian border spoke on the prospects and possibilities of this northern end of the state. He presented an array of facts testifying to conditions and results which will be surprising to any except those who have looked into the matter carefully. Northern Minnesota contains thirty-six thousand square miles, about 10 per cent of which is taken up by five hundred small lakes, leaving thus open to settlement and tillage about twenty million acres of "the richest and most productive soil to be found anywhere in the world." The latitude is the same as for North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and northern Wisconsin, and, crossing the ocean, would include England, Belgium, the Netherlands, all of Germany, and parts of France, Italy and Austria. From these conditions Mr. Konzen argued that geographical conditions are the most favorable and that the greatest advancement of the human race has occurred between the forty-sixth and the forty-ninth parallels of latitude. Statistics were presented showing what can be done in the way of production of foodstuffs, meat, vegetables and dairy products, also in the raising of corn, clover and alfalfa. Mr. Konzen yet expects to see Duluth recognized as a seaport, from which monster vessels will depart for all the countries of the world in need of flour, grain and other foodstuffs. In comparing the possibilities of northern Minnesota with other countries in the same latitude, Mr. Konzen showed that a population of at least five millions could be supported in comfort and happiness, and that, without exceeding the population of Belgium per square mile, Northern Minnesota would support more than twenty-four millions of people. The crying need of Northern Minnesota at present is people—good, strong, healthy, ambitious, industrious workers. The improvement association is doing all it can to induce immigration from the proper classes in Europe. There are innumerable opportunities in the way of public lands and lands which will be furnished with a good title by the railroad companies at merely nominal prices. Mr. Konzen did a great deal to dispel the popular notion that southern Alberta, and other portions of Canada with the prefix "southern," are any warmer or have any better climatic conditions than northern Minnesota. He thinks that the mere use of the word "northern" has been prejudicial to the interests of that location. It is quite likely that the address of Mr. Konzen, if circulated in the proper places, will induce immigration to this apparently favored spot, from agricultural, educational and geographical points of view.

GROWTH OF THE NEW SOUTH

The new secretary of the Georgia Bankers Association—Haynes MacFadden—was called upon to speak at the Mississippi convention at Gulfport touching on the general subject of the growth of banks and banking in the South. Mr. MacFadden is a newspaper man and not a banker, hence he marshaled his facts in a way that will appeal to the public at large as well as to the members of the craft. For the purpose of comparison he chose a thirty-year period, which of course satisfied his newspaper instinct more largely than could a less startling array based upon a shorter period. Thirty years ago there were in the South less than fifteen national banks per state, whereas at the present time the average is above one hundred and fifty—and still growing. Multiplying the number of national institutions by ten leads to other comparisons which tell more vividly the advancement which has been made in the South, where now there are two thousand national banks in successful operation. This is only ninety-five less than the number in existence in the entire United States in 1880. The resources of these banks have been multiplied almost ten times, and their capital more than four times, while deposits have increased 1,300 per cent. State institutions were not idle duris justly proud of the record it has made in forty years of service to the public. A steady but conservative growth during this time has placed it in the first position in its territory with a capital and surplus of $5,000,000.00. In addition to strengthening its own resources it has paid to its stockholders

ing this period. Generally speaking, their deposits have been multiplied by ten. Figures were presented by Mr. MacFadden showing that the national banks of the South to-day contain eighty-four millions more deposits than were shown by the national system thirty years ago. The new South can show in her national banks almost one billion on deposit, while the state banks and trust companies have about one billion two hundred millions. This shows an increase of over a billion dollars in one generation in the state institutions, and almost as large in the national banks. In the earlier days national banking charters were not so much in demand in the South as they are at present, and for this reason the rate of increase during the past thirty years has been three and one-half times greater in the South than it was in the North. Great as have been these banking gains, it was claimed by the speaker that they represent little more than 7 per cent of the increase of the true wealth of the South, which leads to figures which are quite staggering in their immensity. During this period under consideration the population in the South has not quite doubled, so that this increase of wealth per capita must measure up something like 600 or 700 per cent. In the matter of its physical assets, such as cotton mills, the growth in the South has been twice as rapid as has been its gain in banking power. This is true of her production of coal, pig iron and lumber, and gain in farm products. The increase of expenditures for schools has been less rapid, but truly phenomenal. Government statistics show that property value in the South has advanced from nine billions thirty years ago to nearly twenty-eight billions at the present time. This array of figures coming from authentic sources and touching upon so many subjects, must leave it clear in the mind of anyone that the South has been the section of the greatest prosperity in the country, and of the greatest increase in wealth over a period of twenty-five or more years past. The capital invested in manufactures in the South has increased about 1,000 per cent. The value of her products has been increased more than 500 per cent by making them ready for the market at home. Mr. MacFadden gave much of the credit for this southern progress to the bankers of the South and to the bankers of other parts of the country willing to assist in developing the natural richness of the southern soil and the southern coal and iron mines. It requires no dreamer to see a splendid future for the South. Conservation and development are going forward hand in hand, and capital seems to be present in abundance. Strong, able men are in demand. The South has asked the government to fix certain southern ports as ports of entry for immigrants, believing that no other section of the country can present them with such opportunities, and that they are less needed elsewhere than there. In reality, the one demand of the South at the present time is for able, willing workers to help her take the position to which she is so well entitled.

PRIVATE BANKING IN ENGLAND

The reserved judgment of the higher courts of England has just been passed upon the claims of depositors to be preferred creditors against the assets of the failed Birkbeck Bank. It came out in the trial that the Birkbeck institution while doing a private banking business in reality was incorporated as a benefit building society. When this case first came to trial Justice Nevill decided that the depositors had no priorities over other classes of creditors in the distribution of the assets of the society. He classed the bank simply as a borrower of funds advanced by different individuals, who for convenience were regarded as depositors. His Lordship decided that the assets ought to be applied first, in payment of the costs of winding up; secondly, in paying debts properly incurred by the society to satisfy creditors otherwise than in respect to moneys advanced or deposited; and thirdly, in paying the unadvanced members of the society the amounts properly due to them, and that the balance of the assets might be distributed pro rata among the (deposit) customers of the society, known in this country simply as depositors. From that decision the depositors appealed to the upper court and the decision now handed down simply affirms that rendered by Justice Nevill. The upper court held that the society was carrying on a business altogether beyond that for which it was chartered. The court held that if the society with no borrowing powers preferred or pretended to borrow (which is the English for accepting deposits), the banking business carried on was illegal and that no equitable debt was created by the transaction. The upper court said that it felt bound to negative any legal or equitable debt to such depositors. It was not therefore necessary to go any further, nor give any more relief than was contained in the order of Justice Nevill. Thus it would seem that the fate of the depositor in a private bank in England is not much different from that which comes to him in America, where the affairs of the private banker must, at his death, pass through the probate court and the depositor takes whatever he can get after the legal obligations of the estate have been settled. In case of failure the loss in most instances has been total.

Relation of Banking Department to the Bank

The relation of the banking department to the banker, or in a broader sense, the supervising department to a bank, is too well understood in its general application to need extended discussion at this time. The law-making bodies of the United States, and of the several states, have laid down certain restrictions and limitations as applying to the business of banking and have provided for the establishment of departments charged with the duty of enforcing such laws and to see that banks transact business in a safe and authorized manner. These laws have for their object the dual purpose of guaranteeing payment of depositors' funds, and also the operation of banks at a fair rate of profit to the incorporators.

The supervising department also serves in the dual capacity of administering the law with equal justice and fairness to stockholder and depositor. It also has the peculiar relation as between the honest, conservative, and well managed bank and the institution that is managed in a reckless, illegal, and unbusiness-like manner. The chief asset of the former is the confidence reposed by the people of the community in which the bank is located, realizing that failures, even somewhat removed from its field of operation, tends to destroy the value of its principal asset. The department, therefore, has a double responsibility and two-fold relationship as between bank and depositor.

Notwithstanding the fact that conservative banking and the depositor are dependent upon the department to correct unsafe conditions, the department must, in turn, rely upon them for their assistance in obtaining the necessary legislation with which to improve conditions as experience and changing conditions warrant and demand.

Notwithstanding the fact that state supervision of banks in the United States has not obtained for any great length of time when compared with the life of the nation, yet it is an admitted fact that incorporated banks in the United States are more rigidly supervised by public authorities than those of any other country. Bank supervision, as enforced in this

Commissioner E. H. Doyle talks shop to the Michigan bankers at Kalamazoo and urges measures for the general good and safety of banking. Strongly for supervision and points out dangerous laxity in present Michigan law country to-day, has reached its present status through the medium of experience, resulting largely through disastrous failures. Gradually a system of checking and reconciling has been evolved which makes any protracted manipulation of accounts, other than forging customers' notes and concealing liabilities, almost impossible. The only remedy against forged notes and concealed liabilities, in my opinion, is the actual verification of all assets and deposits annually by the directors. It is obvious to the initiated that the expense would be too great if these verifications were made by state examiners.

In its early days, and in some sections during recent periods, supervision was considered by many bankers to be a system of examination and inspection absolutely limited to the specific authority conferred by law. I believe it is needless to say that the department where supervision ends with the exercise of only such authority as conferred by law is a farce. If experience teaches that additional authority is needed, and legislatures refuse to confer same, wherein lies the remedy and to whom shall attach the odium of insufficient supervision? The majority of bankers invite the closest scrutiny of their affairs, and appreciate the introduction of any methods by examiners or department tending to safeguard their institutions against losses. In some instances the right of an examiner or banking department to use methods or provide safeguards not specifically authorized by law are questioned at every turn and attempts made to frustrate any advances in this direction.

We do not need to go out of Michigan for illustrations of disasters that have resulted where authority has been exercised or methods used only which come within the confines of the law. It is comparatively recent that the Michigan department was criticised as exceeding its authority by a prominent lawyer for the closing of a bank, on the grounds that it was absolutely solvent when the department took possession and had transacted business strictly within the law; yet the receiver's report showed a loss of over thirty per cent to depositors.

It is a current and just criticism of nearly all supervising departments that a bank is not closed until it is hopelessly insolvent. There is no reason why the majority of such failures could not have been prevented; but I venture to say that this could only have been brought about by the exercise of authority and use of methods not then or now contemplated by law. Michigan has a good banking law, but any commissioner who permits certain of its provisions to be followed to the letter, and who does not take to himself additional authority, will make possible a repetition of the disastrous failures in the past. It is to be deplored that a supervising department cannot acquaint conservative bankers with the methods employed by those who openly (though legally) evade the law. If some of the conditions were known to bankers in general there would, I am sure, be no ground for complaint as to lack of sufficient authority.

I feel it is my duty at this time to call your attention to the lack of specific authority in one or two directions which has hampered the department, and will continue so to do until the law is amended, conferring adequate power.

A menace to communities, or for that matter to banking interests, and one that causes examiners and banking departments nine-tenths of their troubles, is the officer or director, or the coterie of officers and directors, who gain absolute control of a bank's directorate, and then proceed to loan the full legal limit to each, individually (without collateral, and a like amount to one or more corporations, the stock of which is all owned by them or members of their families or employees entirely within their control; the aggregate of such loans many times exceeding the capital stock, surplus and undivided profits. Especially has this been true in banks with small or medium capitalization. This can and has been legally done in Michigan, though with eventual loss to depositors in well-remembered instances.

Individuals dominating banks in this manner lose sight of the fact that the funds which they obtain belong to the depositors and require conservative distribution. The danger must be apparent to anyone who will give the subject proper consideration; and the department enlists the aid of all honest bankers to the end that some means or some legislation may be devised whereby such conditions in the future may be prevented. During my administration instances have arisen where financial statements of condition from such persons or their companies have been refused, and the parties were either unable or unwilling to furnish proper security or collateral to their loans. The department has proceeded in these cases on the theory that there is no time like the present to relieve the situation, and has succeeded in correcting several such conditions; but it has been after much delay. In one case the parties, while admitting the existence of dangerous conditions, openly questioned the department's authority to act in view of their being within the letter of the law.

This department must rely on information received from banks concerning financial responsibility of borrowers; but where a borrower is known to be obtaining large extensions of credit elsewhere, what other course can be pursued than to ask for financial statements, either from the banks themselves or from other sources? The department has followed this custom, and in some cases it has been resented. It, however, furnished the only means of exposing the manipulations of a certain official which caused loss to the bank of $40,000 or $50,000. The condition had existed for some little time, and might have continued until the bank was hopelessly wrecked.

As a rule, a bank examiner is not acquainted with local conditions, or local credits, and banks should obtain statements from borrowers which can be furnished the examiner when requested. I call to mind several instances where statements have been furnished and the department has been able to show that same were absolutely false by reason of its knowledge of loans secured from other banks, unknown to the bank furnishing the statement.

I am of the opinion that at no distant date legislation will be had whereby all loans of a certain magnitude, as applied to capital and surplus, will be reported to the department twice or more each year in order that the exact liabilities of the borrowing public may be determined.

I heartily recommend the passage of such an act, and would go farther and give the banks the right to this information; that is, the right to be advised as to the total loans of any individual, firm, or corporation, without divulging the particular banks making the loans.

I believe it is safe to venture the statement that some system will eventually be adopted by the banks themselves with the view of curtailing, or eliminating, the over-extension of credit.

The old maxim that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" applies to department methods as well as to other lines of endeavor. The time to kill the weed is ere it reaches such proportions as to become dangerous to useful vegetation. The only way to eliminate unsafe men from banking is to prevent, if possible, their entrance in it. It is elementary that bankers should have all the qualifications of character, aptitude, experience, financial responsibility, and knowledge of local conditions. I believe the department should be charged with the duty of ascertaining that all of these qualifications are fully met in every instance where application is made to charter a state bank, rather than placing it in the position of assuming this power.

In the future banks will be notified of all such applications, together with the names of all applicants, and we shall appreciate any information bearing upon the desirability or undesirability of anyone connected with the organization of a state bank. We have succeeded in keeping out several undesirables by rejection of application based on information gleaned from various sources. We have pursued this course in the organization of banks for the reason we believed it was a duty owed to the community in which the banks were to be organized; and further, that we were performing a service to the honest bankers of the state.

Bank supervision must improve to meet new conditions. It cannot remain at a standstill nor continue in a rut. It either must advance or retrograde. I believe, with the periodical verification of assets and liabilities by directors, and with proper legislation giving the department the machinery to retard the over-extension of credit, and to keep unsafe, unfit, and inexperienced men out of the banking business, bank failures can be kept at a minimum.

Massachusetts Convention

Springfield, Mass., June 13.—Delegates and members of the Massachusetts Bankers Association met for their annual convention in this city yesterday morning. At the close of a very interesting program on the first day there was a banquet given by the clearing house banks of Springfield at the Hotel Kimball, followed by a business meeting and musical entertainment for the ladies. This morning there was an automobile trip through the country and around Springfield, visiting the United States armory, Forest Park, Long Meadow, bringing up at the country club, where dinner was served. In the afternoon there was a trip up Mount Tom. The full privileges of the country club were extended to the visitors for the two days. President E. Elmer Foye presided; George W. Hyde is the secretary.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

James T. Bradley, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, is a veritable Mark Tapley when it comes to discussing financial and industrial conditions in this part of the country. Perhaps after all it is a little incorrect to call him a Tapley, for the Dickens prize optimist was noted for his ability for seeing the bright side of dark things, while there isn't any dark side to the situation, from Mr. Bradley's point of view.

"The outlook for all lines of business, banking included, in this part of the country and throughout the United States for that matter, is exceedingly favorable," said Mr. Bradley the other day. "All necessary lines of business are enjoying a stability which is unusual at this season of the year and especially during a presidential campaign. It is rather quiet, however, in speculative and investment lines. I have made several brief trips recently into the territory surrounding Kansas City and have talked with many prominent bankers and business men. Wheat conditions in western Kansas and western Nebraska are excellent. The weather has been favorable for a very fair crop and that means prosperity throughout this section. The corn is doing well and the pastures were never better. The cattle are doing well and there is a general feeling of conservative optimism. I think that conservative optimism is much better than that exuberant kind which is so apt to fail to see anything which appears unfavorable. I do not believe in 'booming' without good reasons; therefore, when I say that financial interests are very much encouraged at this time I believe I state the exact sentiment of those who speak with full knowledge of the situation."

Clearing House Methods

The bankers in this part of the country are watching with a great deal of interest the progress of the so-called "money trust probe." In the matter of clearing house methods western bankers differ radically from those in the eastern financial centers. Wilson S. Webb of the Missouri Savings Bank of Kansas City, Mo., discussing this difference said the other day:

"The eastern system is, as a general proposition, one which discourages the small banks from becoming members of the clearing house. The general tendency is to center interest in the big banks and to restrict competition so far as possible. This is, as I say, a tendency and there are of course many instances where the smaller banks are not discriminated against and I do not think this tendency itself goes so far as to sacrifice the interests of small banks, though this has been done, as the evidence shows. But in the East it is the big banks that are fostered, rather than the federation of financial institutions. In the West this policy does not meet with any encouragement. We welcome every bank that is conducted along safe business lines, for we believe that in union there is strength, and not only that there cannot be too many banks in times of prosperity but that in times of adversity the banks in need of assistance will be able to get most of it when there is the greatest number of members of the clearing house association.

Impersonated a Cashier

A rather clever and unusual swindle was frustrated in Hutchinson, Kan., one day last week. A man giving the name of Carl Hartman passed a bogus check for $30.40 on a produce dealer. He claimed to be from Haven, Kan., and bought a small quantity of berries. The dealer, becoming suspicious of the check, went to the First National Bank of Hutchinson, on which the check was drawn, and learned that Hartman had no funds there. The inquirer had hardly reached his place of business when Hartman called up, and purporting to be the cashier of the bank, stated that the check was all right, that Hartman had made it good. Refusing to accept the information as authentic, however, the dealer went again to the bank, where the impersonation was detected. The swindler was not caught and "Hartman" is supposed to be an assumed name.

Western Notes

W. T. Kemper, president of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City, has gone East on his vacation. He will attend the Democratic national convention at Baltimore, to which he is a delegate. That may not be much of a vacation but it will at least be an incident.

Kansas City is the ninth city in the country in the aggregate of postal savings, the government figures showing that there is on deposit here $33,717.

E. F. W. Swinney, president of the First National Bank of Kansas City, went to Sedalia, Mo., last week where, as the receiver of the Sedalia Light and Traction Company, he sold the property to A. E. Spencer of Joplin, Mo., acting for Henry I. Doherty & Co. of New York.

Group 5 of the Nebraska State Bankers Association met at Central City, Neb., June 12th. The program included addresses by Judge J. R. Hanna of Greeley; Murray S. Wildman of the Northwestern University, Chicago; Ross L. Hammond of Fremont, Neb.; E. F. Folda, vice-president of the Stock Yards National Bank of South Omaha. The convention was presided over by G. H. Gray of Central City, district president of the state association. The banks were closed in honor of the gathering.

San Antonio bankers are taking the lead in the movement to guarantee a bonus of $250,000 for the construction of the San Antonio, Rockport & Mexican road from San Antonio to Brownsville.

The Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City will furnish the money required to handle the Austin, Texas, municipal bond issue of $750,000. Gerald Parker of the Commerce went to Austin last week and secured an assignment of the contract hitherto given to the Texas Trust Company of Austin.

Kansas City visitors during the past few days included the following financiers from the Southwest: W. R. Adair, Citizens National, Kearney, Neb.; B. F. Smither and M. T. Smither of the Woodston (Kan.) National; George S. Murphy, First National, Manhattan, Kan.; D. C. Kay, cashier Moreland (Kan.) State; H. R. Tull, First National, Ridgeway, Mo.; W. H. Morris, Security National, Caddo, Okla.

J. Z. Miller, president of the Western Exchange Bank and vice-president of the Commerce Trust Company, has returned from Texas, where he spent a week on business.

On the purpose of the A. B. A. committee on agricultural development and education at the Minnesota convention

Briefly stated, the purpose of this committee of the American Bankers Association is to encourage the bankers of the United States to make a study of agricultural conditions, and use their best efforts in all the states in the Union to bring about improved methods of farming, improved conditions of living in the country, improved social conditions in the country and improved educational facilities.

It rather is superfluous for me to talk in Minnesota on this subject at all. Minnesota bankers are taking the lead in this work, our members are enthusiastic about it and we have accomplished some very satisfactory results in the three years we have been engaged in this work in this state. It will be interesting to you to know that some twenty state bankers associations have appointed committees on "Agricultural Development and Education," since the eight states held a conference in Minneapolis and St. Paul last October. Twelve thousand copies of the conference report were printed and circulated among the bankers of the states represented and also among the leading railroad men, educators and business men throughout the United States.

The committee from the American Bankers Association is working with the associations of the states through the conference of committees of the state bankers associations, and will participate in a conference to be held in Minneapolis and St. Paul on the 7th and 8th of August, at which we expect a large attendance and some very interesting addresses and reports of work.

A silver loving-cup has been offered to the committee which shows it has accomplished the most results during the past year, in its own state. The press and agricultural papers have been most liberal in the space devoted to the work of these committees in the various states and have been of the greatest assistance in creating sentiment looking toward the accomplishment of the result we are after, namely: The placing of emphasis on the education of the producer instead of the consumer. For one hundred years all of our energy and all of the machinery of our educational institutions has been running over-time, turning out consumers. In order that we may have bread and butter for the enormous population now living in the United States, and the still greater population which will be here in a few years, it will be necessary from now on to confine our attention principally to the education of the producer, in order that we may be in line with such up-to-date countries as Germany, Switzerland, Denmark and France on this practical question.

It will be necessary for our men and women of wealth who wish to do something for the benefit of society, of the public in general and for the welfare of the people of their own country, to take into consideration when they leave vast sums of money to endow our universities and higher institutions of learning, that only 1.7 per cent of the school population attend these institutions and that 50 per cent of the nineteen and one-half millions of school children in this country drop out of school before they reach the seventh grade.

Is it not about time that sentiment was created in this country, whereby these good people who are so generous with their money will do something of lasting benefit for the 93 per cent of our boys and girls who never get beyond the grade schools?

The figures quoted show conclusively that our educational system is founded for the classes and not for the masses. There are many signs that the people of the country are awakening. The movement of the bankers in Minnesota along this line has been the most popular public work they ever have attempted. It has met with the most hearty response from people of all classes in all parts of the state. The results obtained by committees in other states on this subject have been most satisfactory. The majority of our farmers don't farm—they simply grub and hoe. Our expert mechanics have to be brought here from foreign countries, where they received their training in the schools.

In closing, I want to thank the bankers of Minnesota for the enthusiastic support they have given the committee in this state; I want to thank the educators of this state for the interest they are taking in solving these problems, and the broad-minded spirit they have exhibited at all times in the evolution which their profession has been undergoing during the past three years in this state; I want to thank the press of the state for the intelligent manner in which they have handled this great question, and predict that this meeting will be one of the most far-reaching influence of any bankers' meeting ever held in this country. The fact that we have eighty-five high schools in Minnesota teaching agriculture, forty consolidated rural schools in which the elements of agriculture are taught, and that the legislature at the last session appropriated $1,300,000.00 for agricultural education, is the best indication that the bankers, the business men, the school authorities and the legislature all are working harmoniously in solving this problem. This has all been accomplished within the last three years.

John R. Washburn

John R. Washburn, assistant cashier of the Continental and Commercial National, left the city this week for a trip to the Northwest. He plans to visit Portland, Spokane and Tacoma and will return to Chicago about the first of July.

OUT-OF-TOWN VISITORS

George Whiting Allen, president of the Florida Bankers Association, and delegate-at-large to the republican national convention, has been in the city all week. T. A. Marlow, president of the National Bank of Montana at Helena and who is a member of the republican national committee, also has been in the city. Ex-United States Senator T. C. Power, president of the American National at Helena; Frank L. Smith, president of the First National at Dwight, Ill.; John L. Hamilton of Hoopeston, Ill.; H. L. Remmell, president of the Mercantile Trust Company, Little Rock, Ark., and Elmer E. Hart, president of the First National at Council Bluffs, Ia., are bankers who are in Chicago for the G. O. P. convention.

John J. Sherman, cashier of the Citizens National at Appleton, Wis., was in the city this week on business. E. A. Hall, vice-president, and Albert H. Rankin, cashier of the Sangamon Loan and Trust Company, Springfield, Ill., called on Chicago friends the past week.

THE BUSINESS SITUATION

Business at the present time seems to be in a rather quiet condition, and is assuming somewhat of a waiting attitude. There is very little demand for commercial paper on the part of country banks.

Mr. Fernald was born in Santa Barbara, Cal., in 1872, and is the son of Judge Charles Fernald, who came to that state in 1849. He received his education in the public schools of Santa Barbara, and was graduated from Stanford University in 1895. Before coming to Chicago he was engaged in the cattle business. He entered the banking field at Douglas, Arizona, coming to Chicago in October, 1905, and entering the service of the Fort Dearborn as an assistant cashier. He spends a great deal of his time in California and the West in the interest of the Fort Dearborn National, and has an extensive banking acquaintance.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Returning from the East, George C. Power, president of the Second National, says he found the banking business and business generally rather dull owing to the coming election. He continued:

"Eastern bankers are interested in the prospects of a good crop in the Northwest. Those I visited questioned me closely regarding the crop situation in this section of the country, and I was glad to be able to tell them that the outlook is excellent. Of course it is a little early yet to be able to get a reliable line on the success or failure of crops in the Northwest, but present indications point to a bumper crop everywhere.

"I was glad to find that St. Paul jobbers occupy a high position in large Eastern financial circles. Their credit is A 1 and they are considered gilt-edged customers by all big New York brokers."

A. V. Ostrom Elected a Director

A. V. Ostrom, cashier of the Northwestern National Bank, has been elected a director to succeed E. C. Cooke, resigned. Mr. Cooke is president of the Minneapolis Trust Company. Mr. Ostrom recently succeeded F. E. Holton as cashier.

Attended Iowa Convention

George A. Lyon, assistant cashier of the First National; S. H. Bezoier, assistant cashier of the Security National, and Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president of the Northwestern National, attended the Iowa Bankers convention at Cedar Rapids.

Winnebago City Bank to be Liquidated

The State Bank of Commerce at Winnebago City is to be liquidated. It was recently closed and Kelsey Chase, state examiner, says it is insolvent. The bank was closed five weeks ago and the time has been utilized partly in collecting notes, converting assets into cash and getting other notes with mortgages, and in negotiating with men with money to try to rehabilitate the institution. Although Mr. Chase is ready to turn the business over to reliable persons, he has not found a taker. The deposits located to date are $238,536. Assets are as follows: Notes, $223,397; overdrafts, $3,876; office equipment, $1,941; real estate $5,394; on hand, $20,997; total, $255,517. The shortage found since the cashier disappeared is $19,706.

Minnesota Notes

E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, will be a speaker Tuesday at the convention of the National Association of Farmers Elevator Companies. It will be the first annual convention.

Bank clearings at St. Paul were larger for the first week of June than for any week of the previous two weeks. The total was $10,907,861, an increase of $845,000 over the same week of 1911.

Because the state bank examiner refuses a charter for a state bank at Medford, Minn., on the ground that it is too small for the distinction, Medford is resentful. The examiner is therefore to visit the field. The town has 300 persons, two general stores, two grain elevators, two railroads, a creamery, consolidated school, nursery, several small stores and mercantile establishments.

W. E. Lee, the Long Prairie banker, who is stumping the state in favor of his candidacy for nomination as republican governor of Minnesota, has made a keynote speech at Renville, in which he criticized the present state administration, advising his hearers that it is their duty to be in politics and to see that only the right kind of men are elected to office. Renville gauged the success of the affair by counting 402 automobiles outside the speaking place, proving the attendance of the largest crowd ever seen in Renville.

The State Bank of Fairfax, Minn., to recover the contents of its safe, $255,000 in papers, money and securities, had to take the safe to St. Paul to have it opened. The safe acted up for the first time in twenty years.

When Cashier Albert Carver tried to open the bank's safe one week ago, there was nothing doing with the time lock. The safe was therefore packed up and taken to the capital. The contents were finally gotten out and taken to the First National vaults. The safe is being repaired.

H. B. Humason, cashier of the American National of St. Paul, is combining business with pleasure in a trip to Portland, Oregon. Mr. Humason expects to be away two weeks and will stop at Denver and Salt Lake City en route.

John A. Oace, national bank examiner for the southern district of Minnesota, has been elected assistant cashier of the Merchants National. Mr. Oace is a graduate of the St. Paul high school, for thirteen years was employee of the Scandinavian-American National, and for the last eighteen months of the government.

Backed by bankers, the Provident Loan Society of St. Paul, competitor of loan sharks only in providing help for the needy borrower, has loaned in its first three months' existence $23,397 of $24,920 paid in as capital stock. Of the 500 loans the most were for families in need. The borrowers have paid back $3,778.

St. Paul banks are giving up information requested by the congressional committee studying the money trust.

CHICAGO BOND HOUSES OPEN MINNEAPOLIS OFFICES

The bond houses of Charles M. Smith & Co. and Farson, Son & Co. have opened offices in Minneapolis in the new McKnight building. Harry E. Hallenback will be the northwestern manager for the former concern and Harry C. Goddard for the latter. Mr. Hallenback formerly was cashier of the City National at St. Paul, and Mr. Goddard has been the northwestern representative of Farson, Son & Co. for a number of years.

Northern Minnesota, its Prospects and Possibilities

P. H. Konzen, speaking to the bankers of the state presents an array of facts which may be surprising even to the natives and which ought to induce increased immigration, both from abroad and from less favored states at home

Now, in order to be definite, perhaps rather than accurate, I wish to state that in the term Northern Minnesota I shall embrace all that portion of the state lying north of the 46th parallel of north latitude. You know, the word "southern" as applied to any country in the north always has a great charm; and sometimes, in speaking of the southern portion of a state we are apt to include in that designation all of the state except the northern boundary line. So, reversing the proposition, I do not wish to be understood as meaning by Northern Minnesota only the northern boundary line, although even that may be no disparagement to the state.

Within my limitations, therefore, as announced, you will see that I embrace a territory three degrees or approximately 180 miles long north and south, by the width of the northern portion of the state, being an average of approximately 200 miles, which means a total area of about 36,000 square miles. There are located in this portion of the state about 500 lakes, large and small, mostly small yet nearly all of sufficient size for motor boats and power launches, and which lakes, it is estimated, embrace about one tenth of the area, thus leaving about 32,400 square miles of land; or about 20,736,000 acres of the richest and most productive soil to be found anywhere in the world.

Northern Minnesota lies between the 46th and the 49th degrees of north latitude. It goes without saying that all of the Canadian North West, from the western boundary of Ontario to the Pacific coast lies north of any portion of Minnesota. I am inspired to this statement by a conversation I had but a short time ago with a real estate dealer, who handles both Minnesota and Canadian lands, and he told me it was a remarkable fact that in speaking even with intelligent men the mention of northern Minnesota seemed to throw them into a chill, while "Southern Manitoba," "Southern Saskatchewan" or "Sunny Southern Alberta," seemed terms to conjure with. Shakespeare asks "What's in a name?" There may not be much in a name but there certainly is strength and power in adjectives sometimes.

Then carrying the comparison farther, of course, all of the boundary states lying westward, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho and Washington, lie in the same latitude of northern Minnesota. Proceeding eastwardly we find that about one-third of Northern Minnesota lies north of the northern boundary of Wisconsin; about one fourth north of the northern boundary of Michigan, and nearly half of Maine lies within the same latitude. Crossing the Atlantic ocean we find that all of the British Isles, Belgium, the Netherlands and nearly all of Germany lie north of the northern boundary of Minnesota, while the central portion of France, all of Switzerland, the central portion of Austria-Hungary, and even the northern portion of "Sunny Italy," the Provinces or Cantons of Piedmont, Lombardy and Venetia, lie at least partly within the latitude of Northern Minnesota; and even the far-famed, historic and beautiful city of Venice is more than one degree north of the latitude of this city. These are the countries that our foreign travelers have gone into ecstasies over. The countries that have constituted the world's great stage of material, industrial, political and intellectual activities. The countries that are to this day, everywhere, studied with the imperishable monuments of the advancement of the human race through the ages, from the savage to the civilized state; the countries that mark the highest perfection and the greatest accomplishment of man.

Coming back then to our own beloved Minnesota, we have found from the comparison just made, that she is not, nor is any portion of her located too far north or too far south, but that she is located in the very heart of the zone which has in all the ages constituted the world's greatest stage of human activities, and which has in all ages of the world led the thought and the potentialities which have made for human progress and advancement in all the arts of civilization.

But, not only are we situated in the latitude of the world's great stage of industrial, political and intellectual activities, indicating that we are located in that latitude whose climatic and meteorological conditions are most conducive to physical, mental and moral headway and development in man, but I state it as an axiom and conclusion of industrial logic, and I challenge contradiction, that this northern portion of the state is located in the very heart of the zone which produces the world's great agricultural staples, the chief reliance of man: the food stuffs, the bread stuff, the meat, the vegetables, the dairy products, the corn and even the hardy fruits of commerce upon which the world relies after the namby-pamby luxuries of a more enervating climate are dissipated or cease to satisfy.

In fact, if one great and broad highway of commerce were to be constructed around the world upon a parallel of latitude, and I do not apprehend that anybody in this audience would be very seriously surprised if I should state it as a probability, that within our own generation we might yet behold our own beautiful Zenith City a seaport town, from which the largest vessels will embark upon their trans-Atlantic and trans-Pacific voyages.

What are the prospects of Northern Minnesota's future? will be asked. I answer: the prospects of any country at this age of the world must be measured and gauged by its possibilities and potentialities. Given 20,000,000 acres of land, with as rich and productive a soil as lies under the firmament, with climatic and meteorological conditions not excelled anywhere in the world, with conditions productive of the world's great agricultural staples and with the bowels of the earth teeming in their plethora of the most useful and necessary mineral deposits of commerce; with all conditions most conducive to man's health, welfare, comfort and happiness, it requires no prophetic vision to foresee that Northern Minnesota's future is destined to be great. It is difficult to foresee the extent and limit of that greatness.

Of this 20,000,000 acres of land there are yet several hundred thousands of free acres awaiting the homesteader. There are more hundreds of thousands owned by the state. There are still large tracts in the hands of railroad companies and other corporations and some in the hands of private persons, but all can be purchased at prices which a few years hence will make it appear like a gift in comparison with the prices the lands will then command.

The territory described has at present a population of approximately 550,000 people. A proper development of its agricultural and industrial resources would engage the brain and the brawn of 5,000,000 people. It is capable of furnishing happy homes and fortunes to 10,000,000 people. This may seem an extravagant statement but it must be remembered that Belgium, lying considerably farther north, and with less natural advantages, sustains a population of 570 people to the square mile. At the same ratio Northern Minnesota should be capable of sustaining a population of over 24,000,000.

Our crying need in Northern Minnesota is people; good, strong, healthy, intelligent, honest, ambitious and industrious people. But people who are in ignorance of our climatic conditions and of our agricultural possibilities seem to be under the impression that we cannot produce anything but the small grains, the cereals, and that our country does not admit of the necessary diversification and of that healthy rotation of crops necessary to the successful farming in any country. Even if that were true, a country that raises wheat, oats, barley, rye, spelts, flax and other small grains in abundance and of superior quality, is not to be despised. But besides these cereals of which we produce larger quantities and of better qualities than were ever raised farther south, I have no hesitancy in saying that we can and do produce anything in the line of grains, vegetables, grasses, fruits and garden stuff that they can raise anywhere in the states of Illinois, Iowa or Nebraska.

I paused, because I expected to hear some Illinois or Iowa farmer ask, with great glee and absolute assurance of my utter discomfiture, "Can you raise corn?" Yes, friends, we can and do raise corn. I have lived for the past 30 years within 16 miles of the international boundary line, in Kittson county, in this state, and I have seen that country undergo a transformation from exclusive wheat and small grain raising to diversified farming. For the last five successive seasons I have seen corn matured in our county. For the same period or longer, I have seen successive crops of clover, of different varieties.

But the impression has gone abroad that our climate is severe, both on man and beast. I have not had time to consult statistics but I think that they would prove just the opposite. I have shown you that this territory lies in the very heart of the latitude of the world's greatest nations, and of the world's greatest commercial and industrial activities. I have also shown you that our climatic and meteorological conditions not only make for the best and most staple agricultural products of commerce but that they are conducive to the best physical, mental and moral development of man. And as they are conducive to the best physical manhood and womanhood, so they are also conducive to the best health and development of all other animal life.

I not only venture the assertion on mere theory but I know from personal observation that cattle and horses will stand it better unhoused during our coldest winter weather in Northern Minnesota than they do in Illinois, Iowa or Nebraska. Stables and barns for stock are no more expensive to build in the northern part of Minnesota than in the state of Missouri. So it will be seen that those states south of us in which lands are selling at prices ranging from $100 to $250 per acre have really few advantages over us from any point of view.

In the matter of the uniformity of favorable crop conditions, year after year, Northern Minnesota practically stands in a class by itself; and as a matter of mere personal comfort the continent offers no rival to her conditions.

If any statements that I have made shall cause people to come here to investigate for themselves, or shall cause them to pause in their wild rush across the boundary line into Canada, long enough to ascertain the advantages the state has to offer to those seeking new homes, I shall feel that with all its shortcomings and imperfections my address has been a success.

NEXT TEXAS CONVENTION AT GALVESTON

Austin, Texas, June 8.—J. W. Hoopes, vice-president of the Austin National Bank and secretary of the Texas State Bankers Association, recently returned from Temple, where he attended a meeting of the executive committee of the association. He said the committee has fixed the dates for the next annual convention of the association at Galveston for the second Wednesday in May, 1913, for a three days session, which will be the second Friday of May next.

The question of a program was also discussed and work on the program will be started at once, as the Galveston meeting promises to be a most interesting one. He said the question of a negotiable cotton receipt was discussed and that 90 per cent of the cotton compress people of the state have expressed themselves as willing to co-operate with the bankers in providing a negotiable cotton receipt.

The Farmers State of Princeton, Texas has begun business with $20,000 capital. The incorporators are Ed West, W. R. Johnston, L. R. Dalton and others.

George M. Reynolds at the Buffalo Convention

Buffalo, June 13.—The addresses of George M. Reynolds, head of America's biggest bank, would in themselves constitute a complete text book on the American national problem of a new banking and currency system. In his talk here this morning he went over the needs of the country and how they are answered in the provisions of the National Monetary Commission bill. A complete array of statistics was presented in conclusive proof of what he had claimed for it, and, continuing, Mr. Reynolds said:

Now, since as I have already stated, ninety-five per cent of the business of the country is done through the use of credit, and since the money carried in vaults of banks and called reserves is held only for the protection of the credits extended by such banks, the value of the money carried as reserve is necessarily measured by the amount of credit that can safely be extended against that money. So the real power which would accrue to the National Reserve Association by accumulating several hundred millions of dollars in its vaults would be represented by the amount of credit it could extend against it. The plan provides that this credit shall be extended by the association to several thousand banks scattered throughout the country by giving them the right to discount paper with it, which seems to me to clearly demonstrate that the accumulation of reserves by it would really mean the creation of an avenue for the wide dissemination of credit, thereby greatly decentralizing the money power in the United States.

Confusing credit with money as they are related to business has caused much misapprehension of this subject, and has resulted in more or less honest criticism by those who do not fully realize that the "money power," as it is usually applied, relates to the power or control of credit. Thus, if we speak of the "money power" we really mean the power of credit, which is the vital force in business and which may be extended against either money or other tangible and liquid assets easily and quickly convertible into money.

There has also arisen much confusion and misconception through the use of the words

That distinguished advocate of the National Commission plan declares that the whole question of our banking and currency is our chief national problem —
Touches upon "Money Trust" inquiry

"money power" and "money trust," for frequently when the words "money power" are used by one person, another in undertaking to quote them, will, either through confusion or arbitrarily and premeditatedly, substitute the word "trust" for the word "power," making it appear as "money trust."

I feel certain there are present to-day those who will think it is heresy for me to say anything upon the subject of the so-called "money trust," but flagrant and unwarranted use of this phrase by those unable to discriminate between the words "power" and "trust," with a view of leading the public to believe there exists between the larger banks of the country a combination for the control and improper use of the money of the country and the credit it protects, causes me to feel I would not be true to the banking fraternity if I were not to take this opportunity to deny publicly any knowledge of the existence of such a trust, and to disclaim any connection, either directly or indirectly, with any such organization.

The word "trust" in this connection implies combination, collusion, manipulation or the improper banding together by those bankers who are carrying the reserves of the banks of the country, for the alleged purpose of withholding that to which the public is entitled, viz., credit.

The agitation of this question of the so-called "money trust" has gained such momentum it has been dignified by the appointment of a congressional investigating committee, and if the investigation by that body can be had along fair and impartial lines and not be made the football of politics, I, for one, will welcome it and will do what I can to assist in it, believing that it will entirely dissipate this illusion of the existence of a "trust," and thereby disabuse the minds of many well-meaning, but misguided, people who honestly feel that there now exists in the United States a "money banditti," seeking to pounce upon and destroy the unwary and unsophisticated. However, I do not think the proposed investigation should be of such a character as to cause the committee to try to force the banks of the country to divulge the confidential relations existing between the banks and their customers, for such relations have been regarded as sacred from time immemorial; indeed, I believe the committee can secure sufficiently comprehensive information to enable them to make a convincing and satisfying investigation of the subject without doing this.

Our present system of national banking, providing for the concentration in the banks of the three central-reserve cities of such a large proportion of the reserves of the country, naturally places those banks in a position to control the issuing or granting of credits against such reserves, thereby placing the money "power" or the power to extend credit in the hands of a comparatively small number of banks or bankers. Mark you, though, this power has not come to them through any process of usurpation, or as the result of combination, or manipulation, but by virtue of and under the law, and as a result of legitimate practices and the natural and normal trend of the business of the country; and whatever power they wield by reason of this condition is one forced upon them by law, and not one that has been gained by any evasion of or infraction of the law.

I believe the bankers of this country have handled this trust faithfully and well, and have extended credit to the extent of their ability to do so under all conditions. If for no other reason, the law of competition has forced them to do this, for if a bank in a western city carries a large balance in either a Chicago or New York bank and finds it convenient to ask its correspondent for a discount accommodation, the first thing the city banker does is to scrutinize the card showing the average balances carried by the bank mak-

J. A. BROADIE, City Treasurer
 PIERSON, IOWA

Des Moines, June 12.—It seems to be the unanimous opinion among Des Moines bankers that the convention at Cedar Rapids last week was the best ever held by the Iowa Bankers Association. The attendance was over 1,300, the weather was good on the whole, the entertainment was enjoyable and the program unusually interesting and instructive. The program was carried out exactly as printed with the exception of one number—the address of W. B. Joyce of the National Surety of New York. His place on the program was taken by Charles Burras of Chicago, attorney for the National Surety. The subject was "Bonds and Burglary Insurance." The election of officers resulted in the election of Charles Shade of Rock Rapids for president without opposition. Y. B. Yetter of Davenport was chosen vice-president. Charles R. Hannan of Council Bluffs won the hard fight for treasurer. P. W. Hall of Des Moines was chosen secretary for another term by unanimous vote. At the meeting to select members and officers for the American Bankers Association, B. B. Clark of Red Oak was nominated for vice-president for Iowa. J. L. Edwards of Burlington was elected member of the nominating committee. D. H. McKee of Davenport and H. M. Carpenter of Monticello were named on the executive council for the American Bankers Association.

Perhaps the most important step taken was the naming of an agricultural committee which will further the cause of improved farming in Iowa along the line laid down some time ago by the agricultural committee of the A. B. A. This committee was named as follows: C. H. McNider of Mason City, chairman; C. A. Larson, New Hampton; J. L. Edwards, Burlington; J. A. Dunlap, Keokuk; P. W. Hall, Des Moines. The members of this committee will meet other agricultural boosters at Minneapolis for a conference in August. The committee will also work diligently in Iowa, spreading the gospel of better farm methods and increasing the agricultural wealth. The committee will plan steps which will lead towards the establishment of rural high schools and for the teaching of agriculture in the high schools of the state.

The convention went on record in favor of removing the state banking department from the state auditor's office and placing it upon a footing of its own as a separate department. The convention also went on record in favor of a law at the hands of the next general assembly which will permit Iowa banks to loan money on mortgages on land in other states. The resolutions expressed satisfaction with the increasing demand for non-partisan revision of the national currency and banking laws. They further declare for co-operation of the state and national bank departments so that the state and national bank calls will be upon the same dates. The fight for location of the next convention was decidedly warm up to the time the convention adjourned. When the vote was cast most of the bankers had gone and there were only a few more than 200 votes cast. Des Moines won with Dubuque a close second and Davenport a close third.

Century Savings, Des Moines

The Century Savings Bank, Des Moines, sprung a surprise on its patrons. During Sunday of last week it changed its fixtures, installing new ones and adding materially to the beauty of the interior. The patrons who reached the bank Monday morning rubbed their eyes and were prone to believe they had reached the wrong place. The bank has taken a lease on its present quarters for five years. Under the presidency of Lee Stevens the institution has made a remarkable growth.

Cylinder Bank Robbery

Three of the men who robbed the Cylinder Savings Bank at Cylinder, Iowa, Friday night are under arrest and at this writing it is thought that the remaining two members of the gang will be in confinement before the end of the week. James Gleason and Frank Collins were arrested at Emmetsburg. To Gust Patek, of the Burns Detective Agency, these men confessed, implicating Charles Fisher of Sheldon, who was arrested the day following. Over $300 in mutilated currency was found in possession of Gleason and Collins. Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association is responsible for the arrest to a large extent.

Finger Print Method Being Adopted

Iowa bankers are considerably interested in the finger print method of identification which an eastern institution is introducing. The bankers of Davenport, Rock Island and Moline, who have formed a club, are studying the system and it is possible that it will be installed in one or more of the cities as the result of the agitation. The plan contemplates the taking of three finger prints of each depositor together with his name and age for permanent retention.

Death of M. H. Brinton

M. H. Brinton, president of the State Bank at Ellsworth and president of the American Life Insurance Association of Des Moines, died at his home at the age of 56. Mr. Brinton was one of the best known men in public life in central Iowa. The town of Ellsworth owes much of its growth to him and many a young business man got his start in life through aid from Mr. Brinton. The latter had often intended removing to Des Moines to become more actively identified with his insurance interests here but he always believed that his children could be more successfully raised on a farm and the change was never made. He was quite wealthy.

a million dollar railroad back of the golf game which was played in Des Moines some days ago by Joseph T. Talbert of the New York City National and S. M. Felton, president of the Great Western. These two men were ostensibly in Des Moines as guests of Homer Miller of the Iowa National, who pulls off a match game of this sort each year. But the dopesters have it that the two visitors were in reality planning to build a railroad from Minneapolis to Emerson in which the Great Western and the Minneapolis & St. Louis are jointly concerned.

Iowa Banking Notes

Fred L. Walker, cashier of the Mechanics Savings, Des Moines, has taken a two months' lay off and will go to his former home at Albany, Oregon, to spend some of the time on a fruit ranch. Mr. Walker's health has not been the best, and although President MacKinnon is still suffering from an attack of whooping cough, it was thought best that the popular cashier make an attempt to recuperate. Mr. Walker is one of the best known and best liked bankers in the city.

Al C. Miller of the Home Savings of Des Moines has returned from a visit to Washington, where he made his 'steenth visit in the interests of the project to make the Des Moines river navigable. Upon his return Mr. Miller reported to the Greater Des Moines committee that he has every hope that the plan ultimately will become a success.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

John L. Mitchell, since 1908 president of the LeMars Savings Bank, has retired from that institution to become vice president of the Live Stock National Bank, of Sioux City. He will shortly move to Sioux City and participate actively in the management of the larger institution. He has sold his interests in the LeMars bank to a number of substantial business men and farmers of the community. M. Kass, the principal holder of the stock Mr. Mitchell has sold, has been elected president of the savings bank. Mr. Kass was formerly connected with the German American Bank, of LeMars. The other officers under the new management are: H. A. Ahlers and G. L. Mammen, vice presidents; L. J. Lieb and John Beely are directors. Mr. Mammen is the only hold-over stockholder.

Mr. Mitchell has been in the banking business for many years. His first experience was in a minor position with the Primghar, Ia., Savings Bank, then with the First National Bank of Sheldon. In 1897, he organized the Citizens Bank, of Lester, Ia., and in 1908 he sold his interests to enter the LeMars Savings.

ST. LOUIS UNION DOWNS MECHANICS-AMERICAN

St. Louis, June 13th.—The boards of directors of the Mechanics-American National Bank and the St. Louis Union Trust Company fought out a golf rivalry in a match game on the links at the St. Louis Country Club this afternoon. The St. Louis Union team conquered. The game was the subject of much comment in banking circles this week.

The Mechanics-American team, through President Walker Hill, was the challenger, but the betting favored the St. Louis Union side, which was conceded to have an edge in older and more experienced players. The players were matched as follows, the first named in each pair being a Mechanics-American man and the last a St. Louis Union man; A. B. Lambert vs. John F. Shepley, Joseph M. Hayes vs. George W. Simmons, Warren Goddard vs. John D. Filley, P. V. Fout vs. John T. Davis, William H. Danforth vs. N. A. McMillan, Walker Hill vs. Thomas H. West, Hugh McKittrick vs. J. D. Bascom.

MARINE NATIONAL BANK, BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Marine National Bank of Buffalo now is erecting a seventeen story building and will occupy the entire first floor, which will be fitted up as one of the finest banking houses in this country. When completed, the building will be 233 feet above the sidewalk. This is 68 feet higher than any other structure in Buffalo. The four lower floors are to be made into one great banking room, the ceiling of which will be fifty feet above the street level.

The building will be absolutely fireproof. It will not only rest upon rock but nothing will be used in the structure or its finishings but brick, stone, marble, concrete, iron, steel and bronze. The elevator and stairs are closed at each story with wired glass fireproof doors, so that every office is a unit and practically as secure as a safe deposit vault from fire or smoke. The great banking room occupies the entire main floor, is 75 feet wide and 170 feet long and in size and magnificence is not exceeded by many banks. The foyer will be finished in stone, marble or terra cotta with terra cotta ceiling, the whole in a style artistic and grand, simple yet attractive.

To fitly describe this great building when completed it can be briefly stated, that it will not only be architecturally beautiful, of the best material and construction—an adornment to the street on which it is located and something for Buffalonians to point to with pride—but also a lasting monument to the Marine National Bank.

GROUP 2, INDIANA, AT GARY

More than 125 bankers from Indiana and Illinois gathered at Gary, Ind., on Thursday to attend the annual meeting of Group 2, Indiana Bankers Association. Luncheon was served at 1 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. building. A trip through the Gary steel mills followed the meeting.

Among the Chicago bankers present were W. G. Edens of the Central Trust Company, C. R. Hieronymus of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank, J. P. McManus of the First National, George H. Melvin of the Fort Dearborn National, E. F. Schoeneck of the Corn Exchange National, W. W. Lampert of the Continental and Commercial National and F. O. Birney of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company.

At the afternoon session Richard Miller of Indianapolis addressed the meeting on "Financial Parasites."

Michigan Teaches Young Men Science of Business

It often is said by the great leaders of industry that the young man in America now has a greater chance than ever before. This saying, which seems a hard one, when we consider our increasing population and the greater severity of competition, I believe, nevertheless, to be true. One of the important reasons why it appears to me to be true is that a young man may now, by systematic study of the literature available to him, gain a knowledge of the principles and practices of business such as it was not possible for him to do previously except through a long experience with affairs. He may therefore fit himself to carry important administrative and consultative responsibilities much earlier in life than formerly was possible.

I desire to allude briefly to several of these bodies of scientific knowledge and I can perhaps best do so by bringing in some of the historical circumstances which have led to the formulation and public discussion of them in this country since the Civil War. I use this means of introducing my subject the more willingly as I hope it will remove the impression any person may have that by the science of business I mean something which college men, or some other equally obnoxious class of theorists, have originated and are trying to force upon men of affairs. By the science of industry I mean the best practice; the garnered, sifted, and classified results of the life work of the best brains in business, together with the general principles which are seen to underlie these results. The laboratory of the economic sciences is industry itself; its experimenters are the captains of industry; the utmost that the college man has done in this evolution is to help, in a very subordinate capacity, as critic and systematizer.

Conservation

One great department of knowledge bearing upon industry has reference to the basic physical processes involved. I need perhaps only refer to the massive sum of knowledge which the physical sciences have compiled and which, if used, would increase the efficiency of human effort almost beyond our dreams. Much

How and why it is done outlined

Edward D. Jones, of the Ann Arbor University. Experience

saving period of this knowledge is now in such form that to understand it one must be trained in the appropriate scientific methods. This expert technical knowledge is utilized in industry through testing laboratories, through designing and drafting rooms, and everywhere through the services of engineers and chemists. But there is much knowledge with reference to the physical processes of industry which can be readily understood and applied without strict scientific training. The largest and most practical body of it we know by the word conservation.

During the Civil War, and for many years afterward, this country was devoted to the rapid introduction of agricultural implements, and the opening of new farming regions on virgin soil; devoted to skinning the forests with the very efficient aid of the circular saw, and to producing cheap coal by hacking at the choicest outcrops without proper drainage plans, haulage ways, or system of working. We lived for 30 years after the Civil War in a fool's paradise, by means of a reckless exploitive process. But at last free land of standard quality was exhausted, and the price of timber began to mount, and the amateur miner was driven to the surface by a general squeeze. The country became alarmed and the cry of conservation was raised. Fortunately for us the agricultural experiment stations, established in 1861, had ready to hand the knowledge necessary to correct our errors in agriculture. Fortunately also we were able to bring over from France and Germany a tolerably complete science of forestry which, after much suspicion and misunderstanding, we have begun to adapt to our conditions, and we could, as well, call upon our geological survey for knowledge regarding the proper means of exploiting mineral deposits.

Finance and Administration

Now let us turn to another line, and one which may seem more closely related to the work of a banker. We all can see going on under our eyes at this time the formation of a science of finance and a science of management. To these subjects the railroad and manufacturing businesses chiefly have made contributions. In the first couple of decades after the Civil War the advance in transportation chiefly was through new building. In manufacturing it was due to the appearance of great revolutionary inventions, or to increase in the size of individual plants, or to the simple extension into a new region of an industry previously established elsewhere. As examples of this sort of progress we may no-

Appraisals

Two businesses cannot consolidate without an audit of the accounts, to determine the book values involved, nor without appraisal, to go behind the books, and independently determine the value of the different classes of assets. During the years I have mentioned, when consolidation took place so rapidly, every experienced accountant and consulting engineer in the country was in demand to fix the values of physical assets and to set a price upon such intangible values as goodwill, franchises, unexpired patent terms, and going value. The theory of valuing property has, therefore, been rapidly developed, and this theory the young man who aspires to leadership as a financier should master.

Auditing and Cost Accounting

These great consolidations have developed administrative problems of a kind not before known. The owners are now more distant and scattered than formerly, and those who act for them as directors or responsible officers must rapidly review work of vast variety as carried on in many different places. The necessity has arisen for more exact methods of cost accounting and auditing by which the executive can at once and easily locate any inefficient performance. Cost accounting may be described as an instrument of precision for the business man. Since the safety of investments depends more upon income than it does upon assets the student of finance must know cost accounting as an instrument used by income producing types of management. He should know when it is a matter of indifference in a business whether expense is spread by one or another of the usual methods. He should know when factory burden cannot satisfactorily be divided as a percentage on labor time, when not as a per cent on labor cost. He should understand machine hour rates and their problems, and should be a sharp critic of the practice of setting appreciating assets as a sufficient offset against the depreciating.

Corporation Reports

Since the big corporations communicate with their stockholders, and the general investing public, by means of printed reports, it becomes the duty of those who handle investments in corporations securities to analyze financial reports, both interpreting the meaning of what is told and observing the significance of what is not told. Here will arise such questions as the following: On which side of a balance sheet do the falsifications usually occur? What are various tests for padded assets? What are wasting assets, and how should companies manage which have them? What circumstances determine the amount of working capital a business should have? What is the difference between the significance of current liabilities owing to a bank and those owing to trade creditors? What are the different kinds of things which in American finance are called reserves?

Investment

The consideration of these points leads us to another recent movement of the greatest importance. The investor of small means has, for some time, been making a radical change in the nature of his investments. Years ago he kept his money near him, preferably in real estate, or obligations secured by it. Now he buys bonds, and even the stocks of railroads and industrials. The banker is called upon to advise with reference to investments at a distance, and in corporations of national extent which neutralize local conditions but respond to general swings of the country's business from prosperity to depression, or the reverse. The financial advisor must, therefore, be a student of underlying conditions, or of the reaction of the money market, the commodity market, and the security market upon each other, to the end that, in some degree, he may be able to predict the sequence of events which makes up a trade cycle. He must follow the barometers which foretell changes and understand the limits of the value of the signs of any one barometer or of any given combination of them.

Time fails me to speak of the mathematics of finance, of which a young man should early gain control so that he may as clearly perceive the force of compound interest and discount as the schoolboy does of simple interest, and thus be able to deal with problems involving present worth, annuities, sinking funds and bond valuation.

Nor can I say anything of the principles of administration upon which so many business men have been thinking since scientific management was presented to the public by a talented group of engineers.

It has been, indeed, a wonderful generation in this country, which found business a strenuous but confused negotiation, a rule-of-thumb and rule-of-guess process, and which now leaves it equipped with scientific laboratories, cost accounting systems, planning departments, appraisers, auditors and system experts. A generation ago the basic principles of industry were known to the select few; this generation has added enormously to the sum of knowledge, has systematized it, and made it accessible to the public. So that it is now possible for the young man, at the close of the day's work, to open a text-book in his room and stand in the presence of the great financiers and administrators, follow their reasoning, and strengthen his mind by thinking their thoughts after them.

The study of the principles to which I have made these hurried allusions is not especially difficult: it certainly is fascinating when once fairly entered upon. The mastery of them will insure to the individual material and intellectual rewards of a high order, and to society coherence and tone from the fact that action is based, not upon the dictates of persons, but upon principles of universal and permanent validity.

ing the application for the discount. Finding that bank has maintained an average balance of $200,000 to $500,000, he knows full well that he must grant the accommodation or lose the balance. So, I say, this matter of securing discount accommodations is measured by the law of competition, under normal conditions, and by the ability of the city bank to extend credit during abnormal conditions.

The bankers of the country, having learned by bitter experience during previous panics that our system of banking and currency does not provide facilities for even their own protection, to say nothing of the protection of their depositors, when confidence is disturbed and fear is abroad in the land, during the panic of 1907 applied the principle of co-operation to the conduct of their business in a practical way, with the result that more failures in business and greater widespread loss and ruin were averted.

The introduction of this principle of co-operation in banking has marked another milestone in the progress of our business, for bankers, having found that working together for the common good of the cause proved so highly advantageous, have, since the panic of 1907, applied these principles to the affairs of their customers when the credit of a customer has been assailed.

The banks and other creditors, instead of pouncing on the crippled institution and tearing it into shreds, in the vain effort of each creditor to see how much of his claim he can secure, without reference to the claims and rights of other creditors, now call a meeting of all the creditors, fully investigate the real condition, and if it is possible to save the concern from failure by conserving the assets, they apply the principle of co-operation, appoint a creditors' committee to manage the affairs of the disabled concern, and very often through such harmony of action they put the affairs of the company or individual on a good basis financially; whereas, under the old order of things, when it was a case of each one for himself and "the devil take the hindmost," bankruptcy followed, and the return of but a small percentage to all the creditors.

Capital, like individuals, follows the line of least resistance. In contact with your friends and customers, you meet many with whom you differ upon the principal topics of the day, but you do not engage in an altercation with each of them. No more does capital concentrating in any city run counter to the traditions under which capital has been used in that city, for it is certain to follow the line of least resistance, and, like the water in the stream, follows the main current.

The application of this principle of co-operation by the banks as a basis of self-protection both to themselves and to their customers, thus conserving the assets and oftentimes the integrity of both, preventing failures as well as contentions between the creditors of concerns whose solvency is questioned, as was the case under the old order of banking, has caused many to misconstrue the real condition of affairs and apply the term "trust" to this harmony of action, which is always prompted, so far as I know and believe, by the highest motives born of a sense of fairness and justice and reflecting a desire on the part of bankers to conserve and upbuild rather than to tear down and destroy.

Therefore, I repeat, I do not believe in the existence of any such thing as a "money trust." Whatever the investigation of the so-called "money trust" may disclose, I venture to predict it will be found that currency legislation providing for the establishment in the United States of the National Reserve Association along such lines as in recommended by the National Monetary Commission will serve as a complete corrective of any unsatisfactory condition.

Considering that such a large percentage of our people recognize the weakness of our present system of banking and currency, and in view of the existing widespread demand for currency legislation, I must confess that I am amazed at the attitude of apparent indifference which some of the members of the congress of the United States show toward this, which to my mind and the minds of many people, is the most important subject of legislation before our people at this time.

It seems to me it is imperative that we should have immediate action upon this subject, but in view of the fact that our representatives at Washington seem so disinclined to seriously consider it, I sometimes wonder if it is going to be necessary for this country to be plunged into another panic, with its consequent loss and suffering to millions of our people, to bring our legislators at Washington to a sense of their duty in this matter.

It seems that we had to have the calamity of the Iroquois Theatre fire in Chicago, with its consequent loss of nearly six hundred lives, before we secured safe theatres in this country; we had to have the sinking of the steamer Slocum with its freight of hundreds of human souls before we had safe pleasure boats, and, more recently, the disaster of the destruction of the Titanic at sea, carrying with it to a watery grave some sixteen hundred people, before we could have safe ocean passenger vessels.

Is it possible that we must experience another panic before the members of the congress of the United States will awaken to the appeal to their sense of duty in this great crisis of needed currency legislation?

Had the thoughtful attention of congress and the vigorous action of its members recently given to an investigation of the causes which sank the Titanic been given to the formulating and passage of laws for the protection of passenger boats before this accident occurred, it is probable that many human lives would have been saved; and so if the members of congress will do their duty in this extremity of needed currency legislation, they will, now, before disaster has overtaken us, give such attention to the subject as will result in its proper solution, thereby saving the necessity later on of appointing a committee to investigate the causes of what will, if legislation is not enacted, prove to be our next serious financial panic.

The influence of a proper banking and currency system will reach the hearthstone alike in the mansion and the hut, and for this reason it should inspire in us a desire as well as a determination to treat so important a subject—the most important legislation since the Civil War—along broad lines of patriotism, and free from petty party politics and prejudices.

In some respects, the present is an inopportune time to secure desired legislation, for following so closely in the wake of tariff legislation, which left many scars, and preceding the close approach of what now seems reasonably certain to be a more or less acrimonious presidential campaign, party feelings and personal prejudice run high, but since the proposed currency legislation is calculated to serve alike all the people of this country, regardless of their political affiliations, we must depend upon the intelligence and sense of fairness as well as the patriotism and their love of their country to cause our business men to arise in their might and insist upon at least one important piece of legislation being considered free from party bias and party prejudice.

Credit is not partisan; currency is not partisan; personality, integrity and character are not partisan; then why consider from the standpoint of partisanship the question of the establishment of an institution that will deal in non-partisan qualities, calculated to serve alike and faithfully people of all parties and all creeds?

I appeal to the members of congress and wish that I might impress upon them the urgency of the duty they have to perform through providing for this country a proper system of banking and currency, and I would that they might be brought to a realizing sense of the necessity for early action—action on their part free from partisanship and bias and reflecting an honest, patriotic desire to truly be of service to their constituents and country.

All the post-mortem investigations in Christendom cannot restore to life a single one of the brave heroes who perished on the Titanic; no more can an investigation following and inquiring into the cause of our next panic make restitution of one penny of the loss that panic will bring to thousands of our people.

That our banking system is weak is well known; that there is wide-spread demand for legislation is equally known. The knowledge that banks are powerless to sustain the credits of the country under grave crises causes us to be cognizant of the existence of icebergs of fear all about us. We know we are in the midst of danger. Can we depend upon congress to protect us from the blighting effects of another panic, through the enactment by it of financial legislation, or must we, like those ill-fated passengers on the Titanic, close our eyes to all danger and seek consolation in the probability that if we are overtaken by a panic the cause of that panic may be the subject of congressional investigation?

WHAT has happened in two or three cases is that as soon as the purchaser obtained possession he substituted other securities for those on hand and resold the bank to irresponsible persons. Private bankers are warned that these alleged purchasers are dangerous individuals.

THE sales department of Coffin & Crawford has been consolidated with the office of C. H. Childs & Co., and W. R. Crawford of the former firm has been made manager of the municipal bond department of Childs & Co.

YORKVILLE is on the bankers map with a vengeance from now on. Best group meeting No. 4 ever held took place there on Tuesday. It is a one-bank town in the richest agricultural valley in the world, the deposits being at least fifteen to one of capital.

FROM the published reports one would think that Vanderlip, Hepburn, et al. either do not know much about the New York clearing house situation, or, that they are not overanxious to tell it all. The Pujo committee has a very insistent, impudent attorney handling the inquiry.

FARMERS STATE BANK, Chicago, has again enlarged its quarters to care for increasing business.

CHARLES B. WRIGHT, Crystal Lake, the new secretary of Group 4, has come honestly by the honors. Often he has been the only man from his county to attend the meetings, hence the boys were glad to show appreciation.

YOU hear a great deal at the Illinois group meetings about "W. G. Edens, father of the group system," but very little about those who were the fathers of the opposition, and for five years successfully strangled every attempt to have the plan adopted. Selah!

IN years to come they will introduce B. F. Harris as the "father of supervision in Illinois," and those who foolishly oppose that forward movement will, in future years, be quite as regretful as the former group opponents now are.

GROUP 2, down at Pekin, had a fine attendance. Secretary Wm. C. White was on the job and the program, a very fine one, was put through on schedule time.

ED. HULBERT, Chicago, told of the things which he didn't like in the National Monetary Commission plan and Dr. W. E. Taylor of Moline had the "soil cure" end of it. Luncheon was at the Tazewell Club and Chairman M. O. Williamson presided as toastmaster.

"COMMERCIAL Paper as a Bank Investment" is the title of a little booklet being sent out by Hathaway, Smith, Folds & Co., of this city. The text is by J. Herbert Case of the Franklin Trust, Brooklyn. They gladly will send you one.

YOU saw the picture of C. H. McNider, the distinguished Iowa progressive, in last week's paper? Well, it was another "Mack" but not McNider. The proper thing to do is to write him a joshing letter about it. Nearly everybody but you has done it.

THERE is talk at Mason City of suing THE CHICAGO BANKER for "pictorial libel," but the suit we're afraid of is when the real "Mack" finds McNider's name under his picture.

DEAN C. F. CURTIS, of the Iowa State College at Ames, who made such a hit at the Cedar Rapids convention on "Vocational Education," spoke on the same subject at the Minnesota meeting this week. He is an earnest, able speaker who pleases his hearers.

THE "Open Book" advertising of the Colonial Trust is very attractive, being a "series of convictions upon the principles of banking in which this institution believes," and addressed to the public in the daily press.

NOTHING Group 4 ever has done in its seven years of life reflects more credit upon its judgment and sense of fairness than its endorsement of W. T. Fenton for a place on the Big Council. His services to banking are of the monumental order, and clearing house examinations and the clearing house section will continue to sound his praises.

A COMMITTEE of the stockholders of the Mechanics Savings Bank at Toledo, recently closed by the state bank examiner, have asked the governor to insist upon the immediate reopening of the institution, on the ground that it was closed as the result of a conspiracy.

QUITE a lot of boom talk for George Woodruff as next chairman of the council, to be elected at Peoria, was heard at Yorkville on Tuesday. It was on this basis that he was put on the council by Group 4.

COL. J. S. AISTHORPE of Cairo has been put in the running again by his group. Two such splendid fellows will give interest to the situation. They are warm friends and will remain so.

THOMAS J. DAVIS, cashier of the First National at Cincinnati, has been "tipped" off quietly as a likely candidate for chairman of the Big Council at Detroit. He is a fine, able man and has many friends.

THE major talk continues to run toward Cogswell as the choice of the East, with a number favoring Joe Wayne of Pennsylvania. We hear there isn't to be any rough-work this year, nothing in the line of "personally conducted petitions" or pledges. Such plans must always fail in the aristocratic A. B. A.

HANDS across to F. O. ST. LOUIS, MO.

THOSE who have been at his beautiful home on the heights in Nashville and witnessed his popularity in his own city will be amazed that he could be tempted to leave it all. Such is life!

MR. HUTTIG will have another able, faithfully loyal and devoted assistant in his big, growing bank. Mr. Watts is destined to take high station in the higher circles of finance. His is an attractive personality, far beyond the common. He has been a blessing to Nashville in material and social ways, and the bankers of St. Louis will welcome him in no uncertain way.

CHARLESTON STATE BANK, of which John M. Glasco is cashier, recently has increased its capital stock and added the names of some influential stockholders, making its capital and surplus at the present time $140,000. The bank carries a good line of deposits. Mr. Glasco recently was elected chairman of Group 6, at the Tuscola convention.

T. K. CONDIT, cashier of the First National at Beardstown, Ill., announces that his institution will occupy its new home next December. The new building will be a great credit to Beardstown, and the First National will be one of the banking show places of that section. The bank has capital, surplus and undivided profits amounting to $243,000.

THE MINNESOTA BANKERS ASSOCIATION

Secretary Charles R. Frost reported at the state convention this week, at Minneapolis, 966 members, a net gain for the year of 47, leaving only 66 banks out of the fold. The income of the association from membership and commissions was $24,158.40, of which $14,531.74 was net. Secretary Frost says: "The insurance department continues to make progress in the amount of new business handled, but owing to the unprecedented decrease during the past year in burglary rates on the better class of safes and vaults, our commissions have been very much smaller; in some cases as much as 400% lower than they were two or three years ago. The rate on certain classes of safes now is 50 cents per thousand, as against $2.00 per thousand less than two years ago. During the past year we have been obliged to cancel a large number of burglary policies and re-write them on a much lower premium basis. To give you a specific illustration, a short time ago one of our members purchased a new safe and we were obliged to cancel a policy the premium on which was $205.00 and rewrite it for a premium of $22.50, a difference of $182.50."

The work of the protective department was highly commended.

IDAHO PROGRAM

The eighth annual convention of the Idaho Bankers Association will convene at Coeur d'Alene on June 18th. This meeting promises to eclipse all former sessions of that organization in every phase that goes to make up a profitable and pleasant convention.

Among the speakers will be E. W. Wilson, of San Francisco, on "International Banking and Trade;" F. A. Freeman, Portland, "Modern Banking Methods;" F. F. Johnson, Boise, "Analysis of the Bank Account;" William Thomson, Lewiston, "How the Proposed Currency Reform Will Benefit the Country Banker;" Motley Flint, Los Angeles, "Building Up a Bank;" George N. O'Brien, San Francisco, "How the Panama Canal Will Affect the Business Interests of the Pacific Coast States;" E. F. Larson, Nampa, "Local Bank Co-operation;" J. C. Blackwell, Parma, "Benefits of Group Organizations;" and W. J. Maxwell, Seattle, "Bank Advertising."

MORE THAN A BILLION IN DEPOSITS

Deposits in all the banks in Chicago at the beginning of business June 15th were virtually $1,009,000,000. This is an increase of about $3,150,000 over the deposits April 19th.

The state banks and trust companies reporting their conditions as at the beginning of business June 15th showed an increase of $5,388,000 in deposits, compared with the decrease of $2,239,000 reported by the national banks the day before. The state banks also increased their loans $6,000,000, and made a slight reduction in their total cash resources.

TITLE COMPANIES MERGE

A consolidation has been agreed upon between the Real Estate Title and Trust Company and the Chicago Title and Trust company, to become effective upon approval by stockholders.

Under the agreement, which has been approved by the boards of directors, the Chicago Title and Trust company is to increase its capital stock from 50,000 shares to 56,000 shares, 6,000 of which are to be exchanged for the 10,000 shares of the Real Estate Title and Trust Company. Prices for the shares are up from 190 to 222 with prospects of going higher. You will remember "our tip" a month ago to "get in" at 186.

Harry Grut

Harry Grut has been elected cashier of the newly organized Mercantile Trust and Savings Bank, to be opened soon in the new Burlington Building at Jackson Boulevard and Clinton Street. Mr. Grut has been with the Continental and Commercial National and its predecessor for the past fifteen years.

OUT-OF-TOWN VISITORS

F. M. Lawton, president of the City National Bank of Lawton, Oklahoma, was in the city recently. C. W. Crabtree is assistant cashier of this institution and is a brother of E. E. Crabtree of Jacksonville. W. B. McLaughlin, vice-president of the Houghton (Mich.) National Bank, and who attended the Michigan convention held in Kalamazoo, spent Saturday in Chicago. George E. Keyes, assistant cashier of the Farmers National at Springfield, looked in on the republican national convention this week. Jonce Monahan, president of the Citizens State Bank, Orleans, Indiana, is a hoosier banker who visited Chicago this week.

George S. Parker, president of the Live Stock National Bank, Sioux City, Ia.; John McHugh, president of the First National Bank of the same town and J. H. Hogan, cashier of the German Savings Bank at Des Moines, are three Iowa bankers who visited the Coliseum and the financial district this week.

F. Brandenburg, assistant cashier of the First National of Amarillo, Tex.; J. A. Jackson of the Gate City National of Kansas City, Mo., and J. W. Crabb, president of the Tazewell County National of Delevan, Ill., are out-of-town bankers, who called on Chicago acquaintances the past week. E. E. Mitchell, cashier of the First National of Carbondale, Ill., also visited the financial district. Mr. Mitchell is state treasurer for Illinois. W. W. McCormick of the Farmers Bank, Emden, Ill., and who is a candidate on the democratic ticket for state representative from the twenty-eighth senatorial district, also was in the city.

JAMES G. WAKEFIELD AT JAMESTOWN

James G. Wakefield, assistant cashier of the Corn Exchange National of Chicago, has been out of the city this week attending the sessions of the convention of the North Dakota Bankers Association, held at Jamestown on the 19th and 20th.

F. A. Crandall

F. A. Crandall, vice-president of the National City Bank of Chicago, is out of the city on a business trip. Mr. Crandall is in California and expects to return to Chicago about June 25th.

MRS. BATCHELLER ON BIG COUNCIL

Report from Jamestown is that the North Dakota bankers have elected Mrs. L. A. Batcheller, president of the First National at Fingal, a member of the A. B. A. executive council. Mrs. Batcheller has been an attendant at many conventions. C. A. Batcheller, her husband, was a member of the council retiring only three years ago. Mrs. B. is popular and well known among bankers. She will be the first woman to sit on the Big Council.

CHICAGO NATIONALS ANSWER THE CALL

The nationals in Chicago in reply to the comptroller's call, show slightly decreased deposits for June 14th, with a correspondingly small increase in cash resources. Compared with the figures of February 20th, however, there is a slight gain.

The larger banks made the most conspicuous changes. The Continental and Commercial was off about $1,500,000, compared with April 18th, but was up $8,400,000 compared with February 20th. The First National was off $500,000 compared with April 18th and off $3,600,000 compared with February 20th. The Fort Dearborn was ahead compared with both dates. The Interstate and the Jefferson Park showed gains over the last call. The La Salle was about steady. The National City Bank was up compared with April 18th, and also February 20th. The Washington Park, one of the outlying institutions, showed an improvement over both previous calls.

FOREMAN BANK OPENS TRUST DEPARTMENT

Foreman Brothers Banking Company, has taken the entire banking floor in the Stock Exchange building, and will open a trust department. The savings and real estate quarters have been enlarged.

The State Bank of Chicago expects to move into new quarters in the Otis Building, La Salle and Madison streets, about October 1st.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

IT'S your own opinion as to what sort of figure Hepburn and Vanderlip cut on the witness stand so long as you tell it not in Gath!

IF Chris Magee were alive to-day he'd have a fit to see Wm. Flinn coming forward as the "peoples" champion against the bosses.

B. M. CHATTELL of the Illinois Trust, who has not been well for a couple of months, has gone to Atlantic City to recuperate.

F. W. ELLSWORTH, Guaranty Trust, New York, came in on the train, Saturday, bearing the New York delegates. He was on his way west to speak on "Bank Publicity" at the Washington and Oregon conventions, and stopped off over Sunday to visit with his good mother.

DOUBLEDAY BROTHERS, Kalamazoo, had the foresight to present each delegate and alternate to the republican convention with a neat, flexible, leather-bound memorandum book in which to keep a record of offers and promises made.

H. E. YOUNG, editor of the "Farmers Review" has sent a man to Europe to investigate farming and farm loan conditions just so Edwin Chamberlain and Myron T. Herrick will not have the field to themselves.

EVERY one in Indiana is a poet or an author. We can prove this by any member of the Indiana Society of Chicago. Even the bankers have been inculcated and President Samuel M. Foster of the German American Trust, Ft. Wayne, is no exception.

WHEN that estimable bank put up a new building recently, Mr. Foster communed in spirit with James Whitcomb Riley and evolved the following, which made a big hit with the prudent and saving literateurs in that vicinity. Here's what Banker Foster wrote:

SAY, all you south side people,
Come down from off your perch;
There's a bank now on the corner
Where there used to be a church.
And this little bank was put there.
Like the church of former days,
To convert the thoughtless sinner
From the error of his ways.

WE want to get the dollars
You've been spending without thought.
Instead of laying them aside
For the future, as you ought.
The interest we will pay you
Will open up your eyes,
And soon you'll find your savings
Quite respectable in size.

A DOLLAR is sufficient
To open an account,
And every dollar added
Will increase the net amount.
And this, when drawing interest
At the rate of 4 per cent,
Will make you feel quite different
From the money that you've spent.

OF course this will make W. O. Jones, the ex-Kansas poet-laureate, jealous, but it is so good and to the point and such good advertising that we expect Fred Ellsworth to adopt verse as the best "medium" after all.

AFTER the election of D. C. Armstrong of Albert Lea, who is president of the Albert Lea State Bank, to head the Minnesota Bankers Association, succeeding retiring President Donald S. Culver of St. Paul, and the election of J. S. Pomeroy, cashier of the Security National Bank, Minneapolis, to the vice-presidency, the Minnesota convention named Francis A. Gross and Edgar L. Mattson, as Minneapolis members of the executive council.

JOSEPH CHAPMAN, Jr., was elected member from Minnesota of the executive council of the American Bankers' Association, succeeding J. W. Wheeler of St. Paul. Mr. Wheeler was elected to the executive council of the Minnesota association, also M. T. Dunn of Brainerd. The four retiring council members are Frank E. Holton and George F. Orde, Minneapolis, George H. Prince, St. Paul, and W. A. Shaw, Clearwater.

THE selection of officers was favorably commented upon after adjournment as reflecting the position to which the association has committed itself with regard to the greater extension of agricultural education. The new president is identified with country banking and is an advocate of work for farm life improvement, and the two Minneapolis members of the executive council are interested in the work, Mr. Matteson being also treasurer of the Minnesota State Agricultural society.

JOSEPH CHAPMAN'S election was understood as Minnesota's entry for the chairmanship of the Big Council, at Detroit, or at a subsequent meeting. It is conceded that he has it coming to him several times over for work done and goods delivered.

THE net results of the convention were less important from the standpoint of banking than any of recent years but vastly more important with relation to agriculture. With regard to banking the principal developments were:

REAFFIRMATION by the association of its support of the financial plan of the National Monetary commission.

DETERMINATION to bring the association membership over the one-thousand mark, the number of members being 966, against 920 a year ago.

PROBABILITY of the introduction under bankers association auspices of a "Blue Sky" law at the next regular session of the Minnesota legislature.

WITH regard to agriculture and its development and the need of greater attention to the education of the children of the farms, the convention went unequivocally on record as standing for practical work, and pledged its influence for further effort.

FROM January 1, 1902, to the present time, there have been but six bank failures in Minnesota. In one instance the depositors received 88 1/3 per cent in final settlement, in another instance 75 per cent, and as the record covers a ten-year period, it is considered a remarkable indication of the soundness of the banks of the state.

MINNESOTA is a bank supervision state and no other kind of banking can be done there. That's the real reason the bankers do not fail.

PRESIDENT DON CULVER said: "Our association was first to make a feature of agricultural education—we accomplished something and are still doing it. At the present time nearly every state bankers association in the Northwest has taken up the work, until to-day Minnesota and our sister states are establishing schools for scientific farming throughout their entire territory.

GEO. F. ORDE said "If real farm dinners are like those we got at the college, I can't for the life of me see why Chapman has so much trouble keeping the boys on the farm!"

"BLUE Sky" law is such a popular cry at all the bankers conventions that one is amazed that T. R. did not think to steal it away from Dolley and add it to his collection of "my policies."

J. W. WHEELER is one of those who do not like to see the Minnesota association robbed of her rightful credit. As chairman of the committee on agriculture he said:

"SINCE the appointment of the first agricultural committee of this association and its first report, the attention of the nation has been directed to the subject of vocational training and better agricultural methods as never before."

MANY big men carefully stayed away from their clubs and accustomed haunts this week, thereby giving the impression that they were habitating at the Coliseum.

"HOLD ON!" yelled the Colonel at the National committee, but they misinterpreted his meaning.

FOUR years ago there were 219 contests by anti-Taft delegates. Only three were

President A. J. Hazeltine to Pennsylvania Bankers at Bedford

The shortness of human life is brought most forcefully to our minds when we take a glance backward. It seems to me now but a very brief period since that 18th day of December, 1895, when in the assembly room of the Continental Hotel, Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania Bankers Association was formally organized. Nearly seventeen years have passed. Many of those who took a leading part in the activities of that day are gone from us. Of the officers elected on that occasion, President Rushton and Vice-President Day are gone. Secretary Frank M. Horn and Treasurer Wm. L. Gorgas are still with us as prominent and useful members. Of the eight group chairmen elected for the initial year of association work, Henry C. Parsons and Samuel R. Schumacher are dead. Of the committee of nine who were appointed on organization and publication, the following have passed on: Wm. H. Rhawn, who did more than any other man in the matter of detail; R. H. Rushton; J. H. Willock and John J. Foulkrod. Bishops Whittaker and Foss, who offered prayer at this first meeting of the association, have ceased from their work here.

Probably no year of the association's history will pass without more or less decimation of the ranks of its membership. Doubtless many of those who to-day fill messengers' positions will seventeen years hence take prominent parts in fostering the interests of this association.

The work of the American Institute of Banking is accomplishing a great good in stimulating the large force of junior officers and clerks in our banks to acquire a proper theoretical knowledge of accounting, and a broader view of banking management and problems generally. It is with much regret that I have to announce that the chapters decided not to have a debate at this meeting.

That state-wide organization of bankers in all of the states of the Union will come is unquestioned. It is commendable that continually greater interest is being manifested and every state has now its organized society of bankers, excepting only Delaware, Rhode Island and Connecticut. There should and must be unanimity of action among the financial institutions of this country, if the greatest good to the greatest number of its citizens is realized.

Legislative action on all great matters which affect the progress and advancement, hopes and well-being of our people is all important and none more so than in respect to banking and currency. The proposed plan by the non-partisan National Monetary Commission, which has been promulgated after years of research and careful study in all the phases of banking and currency, both in this country and abroad, is calling for a verdict by the bankers and business men of the country. As our lawmakers usually have enough discrimination to keenly regard their own self-preservation politically, this verdict naturally precedes the passage by congress of an act incorporating the National Reserve Association, should such legislation be enacted. The National Citizens League, bankers' associations, chambers of commerce, together with many other agencies at work, should soon bring about a public opinion much more favorable to legislation which will, at least, strengthen the present weak currency system and benefit all interests.

Doubtless uninformed and prejudiced people have condemned the National Monetary Commission plan because the members of that body have given so much attention to the investigation of financial systems abroad, and have reasoned from the experience of these foreign nations as to what would be beneficial here. We must reason from analogy, experience and by comparison. It is only in this way that we can safely arrive at proper conclusions. These comparisons, to be sure, must be made in a careful, comprehensive manner, making all due allowance for the difference in conditions abroad and in our own country.

Officers and directors of banks are not capitalists as such, but in reality trustees for other people, stockholders of their institutions and of the depositing public. There should be a fine balance between being safely conservative and progressive. The gathering up of the floating capital of the country and the employment of it in such manner as to develop the industrial, commercial and agricultural interests is certainly a highly honorable occupation and one calling for the highest order of talent, for which service as rendered, I believe, the American people should be profoundly grateful. As dealers in money and credits much depends on their honor, integrity and ability. As we all know, cases of maladministration of banks are rare nowadays and the speaker believes we can claim, without being charged with a lack of modesty, that taking into consideration the immense sums passing through our hands, the confidence of the public is warranted and the unfair charges of political demagogues who seek to gain popularity with the rank and file by throwing out insinuations as to the relationship between the banks and the people are refuted. That there are no antagonisms between legitimate enterprise and capital is known to all who are well informed and unbiased. Most of us have perhaps known bankers who became avaricious and sought to charge the highest possible rates of interest or discount. I imagine that there are few if any of this sort existing to-day. The rate to borrowers from banks in Pennsylvania is a fair one and I have no idea whatever that this is so because of any usury law on the statute books. Should avarice at some time or other possess a banker's mind he would soon become dispossessed of the idea, as the charging of an exorbitant rate is likely to be injurious in more than one way, there being a certain loss of good-will and a possible loss of the funds. Although within narrower limits possibly, the rate for money will fluctuate the same as for any other commodity, and is but natural, reasonable and to be expected.

With soundness in underlying conditions, a small indebtedness abroad, a cheering prospect for good crops, no serious labor troubles in prospect and less attention paid to politics than formerly during a presidential year, the outlook is bright, and at any rate no interests are subserved by taking a pessimistic attitude. The wise banker, however, is always noting the signs of the times and making preparation for trouble should it come.

Our people are to be congratulated on the increased exportation of manufactured products, but that the trend toward industrial enlargement may be altogether salutary, it is necessary to stimulate the "back to the soil" idea. We must not forget that our exports of agricultural products are on the decline, largely for the reason that we need such at home. The National Department of Agriculture is doing something toward dignifying the occupation of the farmer, and through its paid agents inciting him to a deeper study of scientific accomplishment by pointing out the importance of the analysis of his soils, good seed, rotation of crops, etc.

True statesmanship on the part of congress and our state legislatures would be indicated strongly by making such use of the public funds as would encourage reproductive enterprise rather than the support of unproductive projects. In other words the truest philanthropy is in assisting people to help themselves, and is reciprocity in the best sense of that term also. That great corporation, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, is doing a good work in assisting the farmers along its lines in organizing clubs. But this matter is to be discussed in full by Mr. Harris, the president of the Illinois Bankers Association, and I will not further enlarge upon it.

During the last one-half century the interdependence of nations, municipalities and business interests has grown until at the present time it is only the ignorant who suppose that hard times or disasters occurring in other countries denote greater prosperity to their own. As an instance, the recent coal strike in England if prolonged would have greatly demoralized our cotton growing industry. Trade relationships have become so close between nations by changed conditions in recent year that war between them would bring great confusion to commerce generally. International credit is so important to most of the great powers on account of intimate commercial relations that wars involving civilized countries are becoming less and less likely to occur. The point which I would like to bring out is that we are drawing nearer to a peace basis and that means greater stability to all kinds of business in the United States, and is especially important to that of banking.

You, gentlemen, as bankers of Pennsylvania, among others who have the organized control of the capital of the world, exert a great influence on the side of peace, as the belligerently inclined as they face each other must remember that without capital successful war cannot be carried on.

We have in Pennsylvania at the present time an efficiently conducted banking department. In my opinion, Commissioner Wm. H. Smith is doing all that anyone could do with the inadequate amount appropriated for his use. It goes without saying that building and loan associations should pay a reasonable fee for examinations the same as banks and trust companies are required to do. These additional fees would most likely make the department self-sustaining.

The savings deposits in state banks, trust companies and savings institutions are now about three hundred and thirty millions, the increase in the last six months having been approximately thirty millions. No reference is here made to savings fund deposits.

In a recent report from the office of the comptroller of the currency, I note that the national banks of Pennsylvania have $150,000,000 of deposits on interest, and this sum added to like deposits in savings banks, state banks and trust companies aggregates nearly five hundred millions, and shows great thrift on the part of the people.

General Secretary Fred E. Farnsworth, of the American Bankers Association, wrote me recently in answer to some inquiries that Pennsylvania has eight hundred and twelve members and is third in point of membership, New York being first and Illinois second. The total membership is about twelve thousand seven hundred, which comprises members from every state in the Union and a few from Alaska, Cuba, Hawaii, Porto Rico, etc.

Pennsylvania Convention

Bedford Springs, Pa., June 19.—The Pennsylvania Bankers Association has just concluded its eighteenth annual convention at this place, the sessions lasting two days. The headquarters of the council of administration were in the room adjoining Convention Hall, where delegates and visitors were invited to register. The convention was called to order at 9:30 on Tuesday, at which session President A. J. Hazeltine, of Warren, delivered his annual address, after which the annual report of Secretary D. S. Kloss and the report of the council of administration were read. The secretary reported that membership in the association now numbers 1,142, a net gain of thirty one during the past year, Pennsylvania thus continuing to lead all the eastern states in membership. The protective department of the association was called upon at various times during the past year, but only two cases were referred to a detective agency, and disposed of at a total cost to the association of but $59.11. Group meetings have been annual events of much importance in the several districts. Following the report of the secretary, reports of the treasurer and of the various committees were heard, also those of group secretaries and group chairmen. The first day's session concluded with an address on "The Use of Life Insurance in Bank Credit," by Edward A. Woods of Pittsburgh. A meeting of the trust company section, of which C. E. Willock is president, was held immediately after the adjournment of the first session. On Wednesday President William Livingstone of the A. B. A. talked to the Pennsylvania bankers on the American Bankers Association, and was followed by B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, who spoke on "The Banker and His Relation to the Public Welfare." Following Mr. Harris was Detective Burns of the Burns National Detective Agency, who chose as his subject "The Protection of Banks." At the conclusion of the speaking, officers of the association for the ensuing year were elected and installed, after which the convention adjourned.

The amusement features were well looked after by the entertainment committee. On Monday there was a musical at 8:15 p. m. On the following day the annual baseball game between the eastern Pennsylvania bankers and those hailing from the western part of the state was played at 2:30 in the afternoon, while a vaudeville and smoker were held in the evening. The usual golf and tennis tournaments were conducted, commencing on Monday. Prizes were awarded to those exhibiting the greatest prowess. Frank M. Waring of Tyrone had charge of the musical entertainment of visitors and delegates; Charles V. Thackars of Philadelphia looked after the interests of those who like to see the national game; Secretary Kloss had charge of the entertainment provided by the vaudeville and smoker, while A. S. Beymer of Pittsburgh and A. D. Swift of Ridgway, respectively were in charge of the golf and tennis tournaments.

F. W. VAIL ON "THE BANKER'S MISSION"

President F. W. Vail of the Milnre (N. D.) National addressed the North Dakota bankers at Jamestown on the subject of "The Banker's Mission." Mr. Vail is a very busy man, and told the bankers he regretted that he did not have adequate time to handle his subject as he would have wished. However, he made a very strong presentation without sermonizing, and was very warmly applauded at his conclusion. He described the banker as he is regarded by the rest of the world, and deprecated the fact that many people predict other than a happy future life for the busy banker of the day. In concluding his remarks Mr. Vail said:

"But we stray away from our subject, 'The Banker's Mission.' As we ask ourselves the question, 'Has the banker a mission?' and consider a moment. I think each one has rising up before him a sort of panorama of the various activities which call for his work in that little world in which he moves. As a matter of fact, in the towns of North Dakota, to an unusual degree, the business activities revolve around the bank or banks which exist in their midst. The position of the North Dakota banker is therefore unusually strong in fulfilling the mission in whatever form he may see it. Primarily the mission is one of assistance, to help every worthy individual get along, to better his client's position—to be in very truth a missionary of the gospel of good profits to all lines of business with which he may come in contact in the conduct of his institution—a little help here, furnishing funds to buy a needed extra team there, loaning money for the construction of a silo at a third place, advancing money to purchase blooded cattle for another customer, ever assisting legitimate enterprise, ever preaching the gospel of good profits, better conditions, a higher civilization. We have a sample of the opportunity for general usefulness in the aid given the better farming propaganda which has been taken up by the North Dakota Bankers Association.

"While it may be argued that the banker is but helping himself in taking up such work, that is only true indirectly. He helps his farmer-client primarily and himself only indirectly. In my references to opportunities for good I have held to North Dakota's conditions with which you are familiar and on which my hearers have a present and ever personal interest.

As Billy Sunday would say, 'It affects every damned one of you.' Your responsibilities lie in the opportunities which the Almighty has thrown in your way. There are few lines of business which throw so many opportunities for doing good to their fellows as come to bankers. Neglect those opportunities and you will have an awful load to carry in the final reckoning of accounts. As you depart to your homes pray take with you a resolve, not to figure the interest to the last notch—in the language of the railroad manager, 'to take every last cent the traffic will bear,' but give the other fellow a chance—a reasonable chance—for a profit; look about you for the many opportunities for aiding others—they are on every hand—and you will have fulfilled the true mission of the banker—that of human helpfulness."

F. W. ELLSWORTH AT OREGON CONVENTION

Gearhart Park, Ore., June 21.—Fred W. Ellsworth, the famous New York expert on bank advertising, was the hit of the day at the Oregon bankers' convention. In concluding his talk Mr. Ellsworth said:

"Some banks there are which do not believe in advertising—either good or bad. Such banks belong to the good old school, the members of which looked upon banking as more than a business—more even than a profession. They considered it a special 'calling' and felt that it was absolutely unethical to indicate in any way whatsoever any anxiety or desire for business. Well, those pleasant old days are about over. To-day modern business, even among banks, is extremely competitive, and the institution that sits idly by making no effort to secure customers will assuredly make less of a success than will its advertising competitor across the street, other things being equal.

"The question of bank advertising in the last analysis resolves itself down to this proposition: Does it pay a bank to advertise? The answer to this question may be found in the testimony of scores of banks all over the country who have advertised in an honest, straightforward, sensible, dignified, conservative manner, and have shown as a result a steady, healthy, continuous growth. True it is that there are many banks that have grown without the aid of advertising, but it is fair to assume that their growth would have been greater had they adopted the policy of talking to the people through the medium of advertising. Those institutions who are convinced that advertising does not pay have undoubtedly formed their opinions from the use of bad advertising. Those who assume the contrary view are, no doubt, advocates, not of bad advertising, but of the good.

"When all banks come to believe in the latter kind, and to practice that belief in a consistent manner, there will exist a far better understanding between the banks and the general public than there is to-day, and both the banks and the people will be the gainers thereby."

EDWARD A. WOODS BEFORE PENNSYLVANIA BANKERS

Edward A. Woods of Pittsburgh delivered an address this week before the Pennsylvania bankers at their convention held at Bedford Springs, choosing as his topic "The Use of Life Insurance in Bank Credit." Bank credits may be divided into two classes—those unaffected by death, and those which are affected by death. It is the latter class with which bankers are most deeply concerned. Mr. Woods firmly believes in the use of life insurance as collateral. The credit of a corporation or a partnership with which there is connected a number of prominent men, generally is good as long as the principal spirits of the enterprise are alive; but just as soon as death occurs the credit of the business is affected very seriously. If the bank is fortified against such a contingency by the possession of life insurance as collateral for loans made to the partnership or corporation, the difficulties and annoyances incident to the winding up of the estate of a deceased debtor thereby are obviated. Mr. Woods cited one instance of where the stock of a certain bank went up $8 the day that one of its most prominent and active spirits died, which was due to the fact that it was known generally that the bank would receive $250,000 cash from his life insurance. Then again the receipt of a large amount of cash from a life insurance policy often has the effect of carrying a wavering banking institution safely through the period of distress incident to money stringencies and times of financial unrest.

NORTH DAKOTA CONVENTION AT JAMESTOWN

Jamestown, N. D., June 20.—The program for the tenth annual convention of the North Dakota Bankers Association held in this city yesterday and to-day was of such an attractive nature that the attendance has broken all records for this state. Secretary W. C. Macfadden is being congratulated everywhere upon the successful completion of the meeting and the careful carrying out of every preparation which had been entrusted to him. The association has been doing a great deal of work along the line of promoting better farming, and has stood back of the Better Farming Association of North Dakota, issuing its bulletins regularly to the bankers, with a regular mailing list in the secretary's office. The first speaker on Wednesday morning was State Engineer T. R. Atkinson, on the subject of good roads. He was followed immediately by Thomas Cooper, who explained the practical working of the Better Farming Association of the state. Special reports from different parts of the state were read by directors of that association. Joseph Chapman, Jr., of Minneapolis spoke on "Financing an Agricultural Community," and was paid the compliment of having a crowded house to hear him.

LOUIS WAGNER
President Third National Bank, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

P. W. Ross of Grand Forks spoke on the American Institute of Banking, and F. W. Vail upon "The Banker's Mission." After this the convention got back to farm topics again and listened to the Hon. Henry Hale of Devils Lake on farmers' clubs and their advantages to the community. Chairman Arthur Reynolds of the A. B. A. executive council was present and made a short talk concerning the affairs of the big association. There were other addresses on such subjects as dairying, road-building, seed-testing, and an interesting discussion on the "Blue-Sky" law of Kansas for driving out fake stock sellers and manufacturers of crooked bonds. Some of the most interesting of the addresses will be found elsewhere in this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER. Secretary Macfadden reported a membership of 651, a gain of twenty-six for the year. Banking statistics of the state show that the association is nearing the mark of absolute membership, which is the ambition of the able secretary of North Dakota. The group system has been perfected during the past year, and nearly all of the groups held regular meetings at which the attendance was very satisfactory. North Dakota cares for the time locks of the members and maintains a number of active committees which do the real work of the organization. There was but one attempt at burglary in the twelve months between conventions, and the detective association is being congratulated for driving out a gang of crooks which operated in that territory for several years. The association maintains a paid attorney, and this year the opinions rendered by him will be indexed and published in the proceedings book, where they will be of great value to the membership. The net commission on the insurance placed this year amounted to $2,551.75, of which a little more than half was refunded directly to members using association policies. Secretary Macfadden showed conclusively that the reduction in insurance rates in connection with rebates on purchases of certain supplies makes membership in the North Dakota association quite a profitable investment for a banker. Quite an amount of attention has been devoted during the past year to the subject of bank taxation by a committee of which T. S. Hunt is chairman. His report shows conclusively that banks pay from 25 to 30 per cent more than their fair share of taxes in comparison with other interests in the state. The secretary's report shows that the organization is in good financial condition.

H. N. PHILLIPS BEFORE VIRGINIA BANKERS

H. N. Phillips, cashier of the Peninsula Bank of Williamsburg, Va., in speaking before the Virginia Bankers Association this week, touched upon two topics which are of vital interest to bankers, viz., the unrestricted organization and chartering of new banks, and the frequent establishment of banks at points where ample facilities already exist. In speaking of the first, he said:

"Under the laws of our state, any five men furnishing the minimum requirement as to capital, regardless of character, ability or local conditions, can ask for and will receive a charter to open and operate a bank at any place whatsoever that may suit their good pleasure, and there is no power given anywhere to anyone to say them nay. I doubt not that every banker before me can recall the establishment of some bank which, to say nothing of moral character, was officered and managed by men entirely unequipped for the conduct of a banking business. Unfortunate results must follow and do follow. Banking is more than a trade or mere occupation, and to its successful conduct in the broad sense of not only earning money for its stockholders, but serving well its community, calls for men of strict integrity, sound judgment on varied subjects, keen perception, broad sympathies and strong resolution. Without that equipment, no matter how many thousands of cash may be available, no charter should be granted any applicant."

In speaking on the second topic Mr. Phillips strongly urged that a bank should not be started in a community where banking facilities already exist, unless the volume of business of that community is sufficient to warrant the establishment of an additional institution.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

Banking Conditions in North Dakota

Perhaps I should tell you what I have done as president during the past year, and if this were all, my address would be short. The real work of the association has been done largely by our energetic and self-sacrificing secretary, Mr. Macfadden, and by our very efficient chairman of the executive council, Senator McDowell. To these gentlemen do we largely credit the splendid efforts put forth by our association during the past year, and we owe them a debt of gratitude which we have no other means of paying than by showing our appreciation in every way possible.

Personally I have attended every meeting during the year where my presence would seem to be required, except at the group organization meeting at Mandan. I attended the several meetings incidental to the forming of the Better Farming Association, at Fargo and at Minneapolis, and I am proud to state that this association, which promises to be of such great importance to our state, if not a child of ours, is at least very closely related to our bankers association, and it is the work we have done in helping to form this association and the assistance we have offered in starting it out on its splendid mission which marks our real achievement during the past year. I had the pleasure of attending the organization meetings of group associations at Grand Forks in February, and at Minot in April. At all of these meetings we found close to the firing line our very much alive secretary, and the genial smile of the chairman of our executive council was in evidence at most of them. And right here let me mention one thing which has interested us very much and which I think our state would do well to consider. I refer to the "Blue Sky" law of Kansas, with which most of you are more or less familiar, and which I believe was enacted through the efforts of the bankers association of that state. Under that law any corporation, before offering its stock for sale in the state of Kansas, must first obtain a license through a commission. We were told that since that law went into effect more than 50 per cent of the corporations applying for such licenses were refused—undoubtedly for good reasons. We all know the evils of unlimited freedom of stock-jobbing, which in many cases means peddling "blue sky" without a silver lining, and our legislative committee would do well in trying to get such a law on our statute books, thus affording some protection to our state against the unscrupulous sharks which infest every state whose doors are wide open.

But lest I occupy too much of your valuable time I must proceed to considering the real subject of my address, that which I believe to be the crowning event of the efforts of our association since its birth—the only time we have really gotten down to "brass tacks," as our friend Mac would say—I refer to our part in the creation of the Better Farming Association of North Dakota.

I would tell you if I could who is the father of the Better Farming Association, and his name ought to be indelibly inscribed upon our records and in our minds, but I am unable to do so. The need of an association of that kind was in the air and the call to action came from several sources simultaneously, not only from our own state, but also from the Twin Cities, which may be said to be a commercial part of North Dakota, being the centers to which a large portion of our trade gravitates. The time had come when it was evident that the best results could no longer be obtained by the crude methods of farming which proved quite satisfactory as long as we had virgin soil to sustain us, and inasmuch as we have little to depend on aside from agriculture it was evident that an educational campaign for the improvement of our farms should find a ready response, and it did. We knew and appreciated the good work done by the agricultural college and the experiment stations maintained by our state, and it was not the idea to set up anything in opposition, but rather to endeavor to add to the work done by these institutions and to co-operate with them. No one with ordinary intelligence can fail to appreciate that nature's laboratory is the greatest institution of earth; the farmer is a worker, and at the same time a stockholder, in this enormous factory, working on shares in a way, reaping his harvest in proportion as he works with or against nature, or rather as he makes nature work for or against him. Surely agriculture is the greatest science of all, and its possibilities are unlimited, and to elevate it to a higher standard—to make farming a profession instead of a drudgery, a profession worthy of the best men of our state—to make two blades of grass grow where there was formerly but one,—is the great aim of the Better Farming Association, and who would not be with us? Did someone whisper that we had better learn our own business before we attempt to teach our farmers how to do their work? My friend, we are not trying to; our aim is to encourage scientific education in agriculture, and to take a part in making it possible for all to get the benefit of scientific knowledge practically demonstrated.

In a speech at St. Paul last winter, Joseph Chapman, Jr., made the statement that although the great state of Minnesota is dependent largely on farming, only about two per cent of the funds appropriated for education in that state was given to agricultural schools—do you wonder that the flow of people from the farm to the city continues? How long will it be before we can so elevate life on the farm as to make the farmer's son prefer that noble work—yes, it can be made a noble study—to city life with all its uncertainties? It will come here as it has in the old world,—if time would permit I would like to talk an hour about what I have seen over there,—and we are engaged in trying to hasten the day.

A meeting was held at Fargo last December, where representatives of Minneapolis and St. Paul corporations met with the executive committee of the North Dakota Bankers Association, and offered to match dollars with North Dakota for agricultural education in our state, provided a proper organization were formed through which such funds could be properly expended, and as a result of this the Better Farming Association was formed, and officers elected as follows: E. J. Weiser of Fargo, president; P. L. Howe of Minneapolis, first vice-president; Clarke W. Kelly of Devils Lake, second vice-president; E. Y. Sarles of Hillsboro, treasurer; and Thomas Cooper, secretary.

The association at once proceeded to practical operation by offering to any county in the state which would by popular subscription contribute one-half of the cost of employing an agricultural expert as an advisor to the farmers, an equal amount to cover the other half of such expense, and I believe, so far, eleven counties have organized to make use of the proposition and have raised their half of the necessary funds, and eighteen field experts have been employed, and at present are working in fourteen counties.

NASHVILLE BANKS AGREE TO MERGE

Nashville, Tenn.—At an early date the Fourth National Bank of this city is to absorb the First National Bank, combining deposits and resources that will make the Fourth National the strongest in the South. This action has already been decided upon by the directors of both banks, and steps have been taken to secure the consent of the comptroller of the currency, following which James E. Caldwell, present chairman of the board of directors of the Cumberland Telephone and Telegraph Company, will be president of the Fourth National.

By the merger the bank's combined deposits will approximate $15,000,000 and its combined resources $20,000,000. The capital stock of the Fourth National is $600,000, and that of the First National $500,000.

Frank O. Watts, for a number of years president of the First National, only last week accepted the vice-presidency of the Third National, St. Louis.

NEW YORK BANKERS ADJOURN

H. Treman, Ithaca; treasurer, C. L. Schenck, Brooklyn; secretary, W. J. Henry, New York. The selection of the place for holding the next convention is left to the entertainment committee.

A new committee was appointed to be known as "Committee on Agricultural Development and Education" consisting of Charles M. NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

Preliminary program plans for the convention of the Wisconsin Bankers Association in Milwaukee, July 24th-25th, were announced this week by Secretary George D. Bartlett, following a meeting of the executive board in his offices. The principal speaker at the opening session will be Detective William J. Burns, head of the detective branch of the A. B. A., who will speak along the lines of his work under the general head of "The Protection of Banks Against Criminals." The afternoon of the first day will be devoted to a discussion of the mutual insurance of bank deposits, a report on which is now being prepared by a special committee appointed at the last annual meeting. The improvement of seed grains will be discussed on the morning of July 25th, followed by a reading of reports of the grain contests in eight sections of the state being conducted by the association. Principal speakers at this session will be Prof. K. L. Hatch, Wisconsin College of Agriculture; and Prof. John Munroe of the Cokapo School of Agriculture, Cokapo, Minn.

New Socialist Bank Elects Officers

Judge Richard Elsner was elected president of the new socialist institution, the Commonwealth Mutual Savings Bank, at a meeting of the directors this week. Other officials elected are: First vice-president, Emil Brode; second vice-president, Henry Campbell; secretary-treasurer, C. B. Whitnall; finance committee, Richard Elsner, Henry Campbell, Emil Brode, Carl P. Dietz, and Edward Kluckow. Carl P. Dietz was formerly city comptroller, and C. B. Whitnall, city treasurer under the Socialist administration.

Phantom Club Has Outing

The Phantom Club, of which L. J. Petit, president of the Wisconsin National Bank and J. W. P. Lombard, president of the National Exchange Bank are members, held its annual outing at Oconomowoc Lake on Saturday and Sunday. Chief Justice John B. Winslow of the Wisconsin supreme court was elected to membership at the annual meeting which followed the outing.

Large Bond Issue

The Marshall & Ilsley Bank, Wisconsin Trust Company, First Savings and Trust Company, and Edgar Ricker & Co., are co-operating in the introduction of the Wisconsin Public Service Company, $1,150,000 issue of first mortgage and refunding 5 per cent gold bonds on the Milwaukee market. The bonds are dated January 1, 1912, and due January 1, 1942. The Wisconsin Public Service was the Green Bay Traction Company before reorganization.

$2,000,000 Building for Milwaukee

The largest building permit ever issued by a Milwaukee building inspector was taken out this week by the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company for its $2,200,000 building on upper Wisconsin Street near the Chicago & Northwestern passenger depot. The building will be seven stories high and 280 by 170 feet ground measurement. The inspectors' fees alone were more than $500 and the specifications constitute the most bulky document in the inspector's office at the present time.

Milwaukee Notes

That farmers will have to put more business into farming or business men will find it necessary to put more farming in their business was the prediction made by J. C. Murray, chairman of the crop improvement committee of the council of grain exchanges, addressing directors of the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce this week. Mr. Murray expressed his doubt as to the efficacy of literature and lectures in teaching farmers to adopt scientific and business methods in their work.

An expert appraisal of land in the Kinnickinnic valley, will be made this week as the first step toward the installation of septic tanks and a new low level sewage disposal system for Milwaukee that, when completed, will represent an investment of several million dollars. Mayor Bading intends to make the installation of the new system the chief concern of the present administration.

Group 3 Elects Officers

The meeting of Group 3, W. B. A. at Shawano last week resulted in the election of the following officers: President, F. F. Becker, Kaukauna; vice-president, P. Schommer, Ran-

THE CONTINENTAL TRUST COMPANY OF BALTIMORE

The Continental Building, a picture of which is shown on this page, was built and is owned by the Continental Trust Company. It is the tallest office building in Baltimore, and one of the most modern structures of its kind in the country, being designed by Messrs. D. H. Burnham & Co., the architects of the Chicago World's Fair. The building has a number of distinct features, including a safe deposit vault which is said to be the strongest of its kind in the world. This vault is built of harveyized nickel steel armor plate of the type used in the construction of modern battleships. The building, besides being the home of the Continental Trust Company, with its various departments, is occupied by a number of large railroad, financial, commercial and manufacturing corporations. It is located in the heart of the financial district of Baltimore and is one of the show places of the city.

Identified with the Continental Trust Company are some of the best known business people in Baltimore. This company has been active in the development of the South. It has a capital of $1,350,000 and surplus and undivided profits of $2,400,000, and is one of the strongest financial institutions south of New York. The president of the company is S. Davies Warfield. The banking department of the company is in charge of the treasurer, F. C. Dreyer, who received his training in two of the leading national banks in Baltimore. The assistant treasurer, Maurice H. Grape, is also a national bank man.

CHICAGO CHAPTER WINS DEBATE By CRAIK MILLS.

As a result of a debate between Chicago Chapter of the American Institute of Banking and the Booster's Club of the Bloomington, Illinois, Y. M. C. A., Chicago has added another bay-leaf to its crown. John W. Gorby of the People's Trust and Savings Bank, and J. H. Ashley of the Corn Exchange National Bank supported the affirmative of the question: "Resolved: That the Adoption of the Proposed National Reserve Association Plan will be for the best interests of the United States," while Joseph Boehmer of Bloomington assumed the negative.

The debate was the program feature of a banquet given by the Bloomington Y. M. C. A., Friday evening, June the 14th. About one hundred and twenty-five of the representative men of Illinois' fairest city were in attendance, and all seemed to enjoy the discussion thoroughly. The debate was won by Chicago Chapter. A word of praise, however, must be given to Mr. Boehmer, whose colleague, Mr. Carl Vrooman, was unfortunately called to England a few days before the debate, thus throwing upon the shoulders of this most efficient gentleman, a double burden. Messrs. Gorby and Ashley report that in the line of entertainment, the citizens of Bloomington cannot be excelled.

—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, June 20.—St. Louis bankers declare that rarely has there been such a long stretch of time bringing so few developments in the money market as at present. Apathy exists among all borrowers, and the hand to mouth policy of merchants continues, so that, as one banker put it, the hand must be growing weary of the monotonous motion. Politics this week furnished some diversion, but only diversion, as there was no perceptible hardening nor softening in rates, and the demand for credits failed to show change. General business seems to be waiting, without exactly knowing what for. No one can point out anything in the horizon which looks particularly bad, but the waiting feeling cannot be overcome. It is believed that with the conventions out of the way, regardless of their results specifically, things will become more settled. One banker said: "We find all things healthy. Crop prospects are good, the people have money, there are not many idle workmen and otherwise conditions are bright, but activity seems to lack the needed momentum and confidence to become acute. There is a good routine business, and certain lines have been so long dormant that they simply have to wake up, and are doing it, but the spark is still lacking to set off the train of real prosperity. In St. Louis collections are good, and clearings are running well over a year ago, and when the awakening does come, we will be the first affected by the dawn. Banks here are clothed with ample reserves and are otherwise equipped to meet most urgent needs. I fully believe the next three months will bring great things."

Railroads Beginning to Buy

One hopeful spot is the movement to buy among the railroads. This is shown in many ways. Operations of the plants of the American Car and Foundry Company in St. Louis, St. Charles and elsewhere, are now being carried on at about 75 per cent of their full capacities. Orders are large, and there is much new business coming in every day. The roads are only waiting for greater certainty relative to crop prospects to cut loose some of the huskiest orders placed in many years. Since the first of the month the railroads have appeared as borrowers in local banks.

Movement to Aid Farmers.

The agricultural committee of the Missouri Bankers Association, appointed at the Joplin convention, is beginning to bestir itself in a right active manner. Plans are being formulated to encourage scientific and intensive farming in Missouri. Among other things it is proposed to offer cash prizes to farmers with the greatest yields of certain products on an acre of ground. The work of the Missouri bankers is being promulgated by W. C. Gordon, of the Farmers State Bank of Marshall; W. S. Wells, Platte City Bank of Platte City and Sam E. Trimble, Union National of Springfield. The committee is assisted by the officers of the state association, and data is now being gathered, both in Missouri and other states, to use in the work. An active campaign for scientific farming will be launched at the various group meetings in September and October, and it is hoped the plan will be available for farmers for the 1913 crops.

German Savings Disappointed.

Refusal at the last minute of Mrs. Minna Gehner to sign the final papers, caused the collapse of the deal by which the German Savings Institution hoped to secure the southeast corner of Broadway and Pine street for the erection of a modern banking building. Negotiations are under way now to lease the corner diagonally opposite the site abandoned. The plans of the German-Savings Institution for building contemplate a one-story and mezzanine floor structure of white marble, and up-to-date in every detail.

Mercantile Gets Certificates.

George L. Sands, Jesse McDonald and W. S. Holt, receivers for the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad, have issued $1,250,000 of receivers certificates, authorized by the Federal court, to be used in securing funds to meet expenses of the road. A bid from the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis of 99 cents on the dollar for the certificates was accepted and approved by the court.

American Bankers Assurance

There are more and more vicissitudes and rough sledding for the American Bankers Assurance Company. Advices from Wilmington, Del., state that a lengthy report has been filed in the court of chancery against that corporation. This concern, chartered under the laws of Delaware with $10,000,000, capitalization, $600,000 of which was paid in, will have to retire from business if the chancellor sustains the report. The report was made by C. L. Ward, the master, and is the concluding chapter of sensational litigation between the Landon and Christensen factions for control. The trouble started a year ago when at the request of the insurance and banking commissioner of Delaware, a bill was filed asking for the appointment of a receiver. The last report is on a bill of the attorney-general asking for a permanent receiver. The master recommends that the insurance business of the company, it insured bank deposits, be closed by means of perpetual injunction. He declares that the concern has been fraudulently conducted, that its assets are insufficient to carry on business and that its condition renders further proceedings hazardous to policy holders and the public.

Actual Assets Insignificant

The master places the actual assets at $182,000 and actual liabilities at $41,595. Twenty-five thousand dollars of the assets are held by the state treasurer of Idaho. The master tells about transactions of the company with the Federal Trust Company and the Federal Union Security Company of St. Louis and the erstwhile Planters Bank. A deal with the Missouri Farm Colonies, identified with the Federal Trust Company, is criticised and the conclusion is reached that it placed the assurance company in a hazardous condition. The discharge of the receiver pendente lite is recommended by the master. He urges that the assets held by the insurance department of Delaware be restored to the concern, after bonds, for which the company is liable, are protected. The report covers some 100 pages, and goes into matters most thoroughly.

New Trust Company for Memphis

Advices from Memphis, Tenn., state that application for a charter for the Citizens Bank and Trust Company has been filed in the office of the county register. The capital stock is placed at $250,000. The incorporators are J. H. Creath, William Pritchard, J. M. Toohey, W. R. Cross, W. I. Moody and James Stark.

Kobusch Case to Referee

Jesse McDonald has been appointed as referee to try the suit of George Kobusch to recover $300,000 from the Mississippi Valley Trust Company. A regular trial was commenced before Judge Muench and a jury, but after it had progressed about an hour, the judge wisely decided that it was far too complicated an action to put up to any twelve laymen. He said no jury could carry the enormous

BANK FOR TOWN 133 YEARS OLD

St. Louis, Mo. June 18.—Portage des Sioux, the oldest town in Missouri with the exception of Ste. Genevieve is to have a bank for the first time in its history. The town is on the Mississippi River eight miles above Alton, and was founded by the French in 1779. It has a population of 500. The bank is being organized by a local banking company with a capital of $10,000, 80 per cent of which has been subscribed by the residents of Portage des Sioux.

CONNECTICUT BANKERS CONVENTION

The Connecticut Bankers Association held their thirteenth annual convention at The Griswold, Eastern Point, New London, June 18th and 19th. President Joseph H. King presided at the opening meeting and delivered the address of welcome. Addresses were then delivered by the Rev. Chas Francis Carter, John Kendrick Bangs, and Frederick I. Kent of the Bankers Trust, New York. The second day's session was given up mainly to a discussion of the currency plan of the monetary commission. President Joseph H. King delivered his annual address, after which the secretary and treasurer reported. On Tuesday evening a banquet was served to the delegates and their guests in the dining room of the Griswold. After the business session on Wednesday the visiting bankers and their friends were given a sail on the Sound in a large steamer, returning to the station in time to take the afternoon train west.

THE COMMERCE COURT

The agitation recently started in congress demanding the abolishment of the commerce court seems to have been the result of a mistaken idea that the court originally was intended and had become a weapon of the railroads against the shippers. No doubt if the first few cases to come before the court had been decided in favor of the shippers this impression would not have prevailed. The supreme court of the United States has decided that the commerce court has exactly the same functions as has a United States circuit court, thereby leaving the shippers and the railroads in the same position as they were in before the creation of the new court. There is no doubt but what a commerce court is needed, to which appeals may be taken from the orders of the commerce commission, as the same conditions which were instrumental in the establishment of such a court originally still exist, viz., the great mass of rate litigation, and the crowded condition of the federal court calendars.

Editorial Comment

ON HELPING THE FARMER

In his talk to the New York bankers at Buffalo, President W. C. Brown of the New York Central Lines, himself a practical farmer, gave valuable advice on how to increase the crop yield. President Brown went into the matter scientifically, and compared the figures for acreage and crop output in our principal cereals with similar statistics from foreign countries, much to our own disadvantage. The argument, which he based upon these figures went to show that the growth of the population has been so great that the price of corn and wheat has advanced in this country 80 per cent, while the crop products have increased only from 23 to 36 per cent. A part of this disadvantage in the way of prices to the consumer Mr. Brown attributed to the increased gold output, and advised the bankers that if they believe in protection, and have profited by it they might see future benefit in restricting the gold production. This idea was furnished by the speaker to the bankers for their future consideration. Comparing the average yield per acre during the ten years ending in 1910 with the previous ten-year period, Mr. Brown showed an increase of only 8 per cent in the average yield per acre in the United States. This he contrasted with 14 per cent in Russia and Sweden, 19 per cent in the Netherlands, and 23 per cent in Germany. As a reminder he prescribed a systematic and persevering campaign of education, and declared it to be his belief that the situation now for the first time is in proper hands, since it has been taken up by the bankers. As a practical farmer, President Brown urged greater care in the selection of seed, scientific drainage, more intelligent fertilization and thorough cultivation. He believes that these things when done will increase the average yield per acre very largely, and possibly may double it. He told how railroads in both the East and West are co-operating with the state agricultural colleges and other institutions and how almost every railroad now has its department of agriculture, running trains and arranging meetings for farmers in country villages and country school houses. On these trains, and at these meetings the railroads and departmental men are preaching the great gospel of better methods, and more profitable farming. He endorsed the work which now is being done by the general government, and hopes to see the time when each state will be co-operating, and when every board of trade, chamber of commerce and bankers association will be organized and equipped for the work. President Brown thinks that for too long a period the country boy has been led to believe that the farmer's work is unimportant and unprofitable. First of all he believes that the youth of the country districts should be taught that farming is an important occupation, and that with education and scientific efforts it can be made profitable. He told the bankers what they already knew, that the farm loan is about the best loan they can carry on their books, and that it is money for the bank and the community to carry it at a low rate. He closed by urging farm drainage, fertilization, seed inspection and cultivation as certain to double the prosperity of any community, and to increase its bank deposits. He believes that the most important feature of the work to be done is the personal counsel and advice from those who understand the question, and who have the confidence of the farmer. Again he declared that the banker is more admirably situated and equipped for the position of stimulating better agricultural and better educational provisions than any other class of men. He said that he could not conceive of any higher duty, any truer patriotism nor any more far-reaching philosophy than for the banker to take part in this vitally important work.

NEW SURROUNDINGS FOR MR. WATTS

Scarcely had the announcement been received that Frank O. Watts, ex-president of the American Bankers Association and president of the First National at Nashville, had accepted the vice-presidency of the Third National Bank at St. Louis than it also was made known that the progressive Fourth National at Nashville would take over all that was left of the First National after Mr. Watts had withdrawn. This will give Nashville, a natural financial and manufacturing center of a large district, a bank fully equipped, and equal to its demands. The elimination of such a potential factor as Mr. Watts otherwise would have left a very large vacancy to be filled in the capital city of Tennessee. In St. Louis Mr. Watts will have very much enlarged opportunities, and those who know him best expect him to fully demonstrate that President Huttig has chosen wisely in selecting a new assistant to carry on and develop his influential and powerful banking institution. Mr. Watts is one of the youngest men, who have reached the presidency of the American Bankers Association, and during his process through the chairs he made hosts of friends, who will have many opportunities of showing their confidence in him in his new location. St. Louis is a central reserve city, and her bankers profit largely by her splendid banking reputation. The wide acquaintance of Mr. Watts will assist very materially in bringing still larger balances to that point from a section of the country which, heretofore, has been considered as tributary in part to New York and Chicago.

THE CHICAGO CLEARING HOUSE

Among similar organizations in all of the leading cities the Chicago Clearing House stands out prominently as the original advocate of clearing house inspection and examination. Two-thirds of all the cities have followed her lead in this important matter. Another advance step has been taken by this famous organization in taking a position favorable to the investigation now being conducted by the congressional committee on currency and banking. While clearing houses of other cities and leading bankers from various points were hurling defiance at the Pujo committee, the Chicago organization met and decided to answer as fully as possible the inquiries sent out from Washington. This has had a very pacific effect upon the general situation. During the heat of a political canvass when political demagogues are attempting to stir up their followers it is easy to create public sentiment against the leading banking institutions of the country. This particularly is true as far as banking is represented in the phrase known as "Wall Street," and the result of the hearings in New York was not entirely favorable to banking as conducted at that point. Now comes the Chicago Clearing House with unanimous decision to comply with the request of the committee and to forward a series of answers to the questions recently received. At the same time the committee designated President George M. Reynolds of the Continental and Commercial National to act as its official representative before the Pujo committee in the event that that committee requests someone to appear before it representing the Chicago banks. The clearing house committee decided to answer as fully as may be possible all of the questions propounded. It is not known at present when the Chicago hearings may begin—probably not until after the summer vacation, which it is expected the committee shortly will decide upon. It is understood that the principal attorney for the committee and several of its members had arranged for summer trips to Europe, which will not be interfered with. An additional reason for postponing the hearings is that the testimony taken may not be made available for campaign purposes by either of the parties seeking issues to create public sentiment in its favor. Bankers everywhere must feel proud of the decision of the Chicago Clearing House to meet every possible legitimate inquiry which may be made

INDIANA GROUP MEETINGS

C. Frank Spearin, secretary of the Gary Bond and Mortgage Company, and formerly of the Corn Exchange National of Chicago, was one of the Gary crowd who helped to give the bankers a good time at their group meeting held in that city on Thursday last. The meeting of Group 3 at Hartford City on Friday, June 14th, was a great success. Farmer A. G. Lupton and the citizens of Hartford City provided automobiles and the entire party was transported to the Lupton pony farm. A splendid dinner was served under the trees, after which Prof. Skinner, of Purdue University, and Dick Miller, of Indianapolis, orated. By the time the audience was turned over to William G. Edens, of Chicago, a rain storm broke loose and the crowd repaired to the pony stables. Mr. Edens said it was an appropriate place to finish his speech, as he intended to talk on agricultural subjects any way. Everybody present voted Mr. and Mrs. Lupton most genial hosts and adopted resolutions of sincere thanks. The meeting of Group 2 at Gary afforded an opportunity for those in attendance to be shown through the steel mills. General Manager Gleason provided a special train and everybody had a chance to see these wonderful works. A bucket of ore automatically taken from a lake steamer was followed by the crowd until it came out at the rail mills a perfect "T" rail. It was tag day in Gary and not a visitor escaped. It is said that some of the Indianapolis boys were tagged several times by one good looking young lady.

NAPPANEE, IND., BOOMER

Harvey E. Coppes, cashier of the Farmers and Traders Bank, Nappanee, Indiana, called on Chicago banking acquaintances the past week. Mr. Coppes, who also is connected with Coppes, Zook & Mutschler Company of that city, is enthusiastic in his description of Nappanee as a growing business center. Coppes, Zook & Mutschler Company are manufacturers of furniture, and run in connection with their business a flour mill and a saw mill. They employ four hundred people, and their factories are running full time. They turn out from three hundred to five hundred barrels of flour a day.

FRED I. KENT BEFORE CONNECTICUT BANKERS

Fred I. Kent, vice-president of the Bankers Trust Company of New York, delivered an address this week before the Connecticut bankers, his topic being "Some Phases of Banking." In discussing matters immediately following the panic of 1907 Mr. Kent said:

"Then a monetary commission was appointed by congress with instructions to study the banking systems of the world, to study our own financial history and to formulate a plan, if possible, that would prevent a recurrence of a similar panic. This commission went to work intelligently. It consulted the best known and most successful bankers in the world. It worked with the great students of finance as well. It compiled all banking and currency statistics that seemed pertinent. It caused to be printed and widely distributed throughout the country all of the information gathered. It then drew up a plan based on the findings of the commission and submitted it to bankers and business men all over the United States. After discussion this plan was changed here and there to meet the opinions of the majority of practical men who had been studying it from all points of view. Then, and not until then, was it submitted to our congress in the form of a bill and a recommendation. Did congress pass it? No! Did congress even consider it? No! What did congress do? It passed a purely political measure ordering an investigation of the banking business of the country, presumably to obtain information on which to base legislation when the monetary commission, also a creation of congress, had just made a report covering the whole matter after having spent years of hard work and much of the people's money. Now why should congress ignore the report of a commission which conscientiously and intelligently had obtained the information asked of it, even though it had been done quietly and without inconvenience to business, and then demanded the same information of another committee under instructions which make possible and probable injustice to many and satisfaction to none? The answer is, of course, politics. It is so called by the newspapers of both great parties, by the orators of every political belief, by the business men and by the politicians. We have mental pictures of the men in our legislative halls brought forth by such actions as have just been described, in which we see them with their ears to the ground listening to the votes of the people at home, but is not this just what the people wish, and is not the real trouble with the public itself? Have not the people allowed themselves to be misled by accepting without proof miscellaneous statements of writers and speakers, whose only object is to play upon the feelings of the people for profit, instead of endeavoring to analyze intelligently what they read and hear without allowing envy and jealousy to guide their thought? Every banker is of the people, and it is our duty, not alone to ourselves, but to the community, to stand up for the right in our institutions and demand recognition of principles which our natural training peculiarly fits us to understand. If we stand by and allow the muckraker and demagogue to go on his way unanswered, scattering discontent and dishonesty, we must expect to suffer from our negligence, but if we do our part toward counteracting the vicious influences which have been fostered, the public soon will come to realize that in matters of credit it requires the advice of those trained in its use, and the recommendations of the bankers of the United States then will be accepted by our lawmakers, because they will realize that the people will profit through their acceptance and will demand that they be given recognition."

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

The executive committee of the Kansas State Bankers Association met in the office of the bank commissioner in Topeka last week. This was the first meeting of the officers since the state convention of the association in Wichita last April. The president, in introducing the business of the day, requested each member present to respond to roll call by giving an account of conditions in his locality both agricultural and financial. It was the unanimous expression that business in the state was in a flourishing condition. The main business of the meeting was then taken up with a discussion of bank co-operation with agricultural interests looking to a better and greater crop production, and a committee of nine was appointed with Otto H. Wulfekuhler as chairman to discuss ways and means for carrying out the desires of the association. The publicity committee was instructed to have printed and distributed some addresses of particular interest at this time on national financial legislation.

Elect Officers

The National Currency Association of Kansas City and St. Joseph, Mo., which was organized in 1908 under the Aldrich-Vreeland act, met in Kansas City at the New England National last week and elected officers for the ensuing year. The association was formed following the panic of 1907, the object being to borrow money from the government on collateral and commercial paper. Thus far no members of the association have been forced to this extreme. The officers elected were: President, J. F. Downing, Kansas City; vice-president, Graham G. Lacy, St. Joseph; secretary, Jerome Thralls. The following are directors: J. F. Downing, G. G. Lacy, R. T. Forbes, P. W. Goebel, George S. Hovey, C. S. Jobes, F. P. Neal, J. W. Perry.

Arrange for Trains to A. B. A. Convention

Bankers composing the joint committee of the Missouri and Kansas State Bankers Association met in Kansas City last week to arrange for official trains to carry the members of the two associations to the meeting of the National Bankers Association at Detroit, September 9th to 14th. It was arranged that bankers from Kansas and the western half of Missouri will use a special train over the Santa Fé, while bankers from eastern Missouri will leave St. Louis over the Wabash.

Central West Notes

The Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City has just closed two big financial deals, one at Waco, and the other at Austin, Texas, in which bonds of the two cities aggregating $1,170,000 were purchased at par value. J. Z. Miller, vice-president of the Commerce Trust Company, who is a native Texan, negotiated the deals in person, assisted by Gerald Parker, assistant manager of the bond department of the Commerce Trust Company.

E. F. Swinney, president of the First National Bank of Kansas City, vice-president of the Chicago and Alton Railway, went to Richmond, Va., last week where he delivered an address to the graduating class of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute on suggestions for business success. Mr. Swinney graduated from that institution in 1876 and started out practically penniless to make his fortune in the west. He returned the other day to Richmond in his private car.

Officers and directors of the Nebraska Bankers Association met in Omaha last week to discuss the fall meeting of the association which will be held in Omaha probably in September, the exact date to be decided upon later.

The St. Joseph, Mo., Commerce Club spent last week on a trade trip in the territory adjacent to that city in Kansas and Nebraska. R. T. Forbes, president of the Commerce Club, Judge W. K. James and B. R. Martin were spokesmen for the party. The following bankers were among the boosters: John Broadus, German American National Bank; S. C. Cook, First National; R. T. Forbes, First National; J. A. Greenfield, Stockyards Bank; B. R. D. Lacy, Tootle-Lemon National; Walter L. McLucas, Merchants Bank.

St. Joseph, Mo., is preparing to vote on a $1,000,000 bond issue for roads and other public improvements. It is likely that the offering will be made on a basis of 3½ per cent.

J. S. Corley, who recently sold his controlling interest in the State Savings Bank of Wichita, Kas., has purchased stock in the Bank of Nevada at Nevada, Mo., and has been elected president of the latter institution. Mr.

Corley was in the banking business in Wichita for seven years and built up the State Savings Bank from a small concern to one of the strongest state banks in that city. He has been identified with several banks in Texas and Oklahoma and before going to Wichita for several years he was president of the City National Bank of Kansas City.

One million dollars in receivers' certificates will be sold within the next few days by the receivers of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railroad. This issue follows a similar one of a million and a half dollars issued several weeks ago.

The Bank of Huntsville, Huntsville, Ark., was robbed the night of June 14 by a band of four cracksmen who escaped with booty said to amount to $14,000. Officers who pursued the band followed a clue which led to the northwest corner of the state and it is supposed that the robbers made their escape into the mountains of eastern Oklahoma.

Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and Brenham banks have agreed to advance about half of the money required to rebuild the burned buildings of the Agricultural and Mechanical College recently destroyed by fire at College Station, Texas. About $250,000 will be required.

Topeka, Kan., investors did not quite succeed in equaling the record of the French peasants who subscribed $3,280,000,000 for an issue of $41,000,000. But the Topeka investors did subscribe $170,000 for an issue of $149,000 and all the proceeds will stay right in Topeka.

The Missouri banks which hold the state's funds have a larger aggregate at this time than ever in the history of the state since the bonded debt was wiped out. According to the report of the state treasurer, the state had to its credit June 1st a little more than $4,500,000. The distribution of school money in August will be the largest in the history of the state, $1,800,000 being available for this purpose.

The building formerly occupied by the National Bank of the Republic at 10th and Walnut streets, Kansas City, Mo., has been razed to make room for the skyscraper which the bank is to occupy as soon as constructed. When completed the new building will be one of the handsomest financial homes in the city.

OREGON CONVENTION

The seventh annual convention of the Oregon Bankers Association opened yesterday, and the last session is to be held to-day. Headquarters were at the Gearhart Park Hotel. The sessions, however, were held in the Auditorium, which is but a few minutes' walk from the hotel. An excellent program had been provided, among those who were to talk at the convention being the following: John Perrin, chairman of the board of directors of the Fletcher American National of Indianapolis on "The Sound Money Question;" E. W. Wilson, of the International Banking Company of San Francisco, on "International Banking and Trade;" George N. O'Brien, of the American National of San Francisco, on "The Panama Canal and its Relations to the Business Interests of the Northwest;" Prof. Kerr, of the Agricultural College of Corvallis; Prof. Alderman, superintendent of public instruction, on "Industrial Education;" and George P. Edwards of San Francisco, who talked on territorial development as contemporaneous with banking development. A great portion of the convention was given over to the discussion of agricultural subjects.

GROUP 8, INDIANA

Group 8 of the Indiana Bankers Association held a very successful meeting at Princeton, Indiana, June 7th (Friday). At one o'clock a special train took the visitors and delegates on an inspection tour through the Southern Railway shops. The party was under the personal supervision of G. W. Brown, superintendent, and G. N. Howson, master mechanic. These two gentlemen exerted themselves and succeeded admirably in showing the visitors a most delightful trip through the extensive plant of the Southern Railroad at Princeton. The special train then took the delegation to the Fair Grounds, where the meeting was opened by Chairman J. L. Bayard, Jr., of Vincennes. A most interesting program was given by W. G. Edens of Chicago, Prof. Scott of the University of Wisconsin, Dick Miller of Indianapolis, and Prof. Christy of Purdue University. The meeting elected the following as officers for the ensuing year: Chairman, S. T. Fisher, cashier Peoples National, Princeton; Secretary, C. B. Enlow, cashier City National, Evansville. The delegates were then returned to Princeton, where a banquet was served in the Elks' Club rooms, after which a pleasant evening was spent in stories and songs. A great deal of enthusiasm prevailed at the meeting and the bankers returned to their homes after spending a most delightful and profitable day at Princeton. Great credit for the success of the meeting is due Mr. Fisher, secretary of the group, with the able assistance of the other bankers and business men of Princeton, together with the officials of the Southern Railway Company, who donated the special train for the use of the bankers.

ROMANCE OF A STATE SECRET

Dana, Estes & Co., of Boston, has issued a new book by W. Trafford-Taunton, author of many fine novels, including "The Silent Dominion," "The Threshold," and "Igdrasis." This latest work of Trafford-Taunton is a historical romance of the time of Charles II, replete with excitement and of absorbing interest. The principal character is the handsome and clever, if dissolute, Earl of Rochester; the heroine, the beautiful Elizabeth Malet. The story is chiefly concerned with the appearance in England of a son of the king, said to have been born of a lawful wife—married during his exile—many semi-authentic accounts exist of such a union. That the young heir should come to England but to fall in love with Rochester's sweetheart, and that the succession to the throne should depend upon Elizabeth Malet's love, is the theme of this charming tale, written with dramatic force, and will not fail to hold the reader's attention to the end.

The book is beautifully bound in purple and gold and sells at $1.25.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Comments on the Minnesota convention are made by a leading banker, as follows: "Certainly the most enjoyable and interesting meeting the association has held since I began to attend," said Joseph Chapman, Jr. "The courtesies shown us by the agricultural college faculty, the evident care that has been shown in affording us accommodations at the dining hall and in the dormitories, and the way in which exhibits of agricultural interest have been set up, has won from every delegate a well-earned thanks. The work of the college, and the efficiency and enthusiasm of its faculty has impressed every one of us. Up to this time, many of the delegates did not realize the immensity of this great state institution."

Edward J. Gallien, of New York, on Good Roads

Edward J. Gallien, Irving National Exchange bank, New York, had something to say before the convention about good roads. He remarked that: "As a result of the movement to build better roads, scores of farms in Pennsylvania and other states where hills are numerous, that had been abandoned because of lack of thoroughfares to markets, have been re-occupied within the last few years. Farmers can now have three times as much produce hauled to market and the result is that vegetables and fruits can be had at much less than formerly."

Visitors at Convention

Some outside bankers at the state convention were: C. C. Albeck, of the National City bank, and Edward J. Gallien, of the Irving National, New York; C. W. Rowley, of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Winnipeg; E. J. Hughes, First National, Milwaukee; W. F.

Rowe, Drovers Deposit National; R. F. Newhall, First National; J. R. Washburn, Continental and Commercial National; Henry Meyer and S. P. Johnson, National City, and W. W. Gates, Central Trust Company, Chicago. In the later arrivals were T. F. Newcomer, Fort Dearborn National; N. M. Hanson, Merchants Loan & Trust Co.; R. G. Danero, Continental and Commercial National; and Henry D. House, of Allen, Green & King, Chicago.

Montana and North Dakota Crops Good.

"Good rains and good crops in Montana and North Dakota promise an active fall business," said R. S. MacGregor, assistant cashier of the Northwestern National bank, on his return from the western country, where crop observers go to see how the grain stands. Mr. MacGregor said that Montana looks especially good. J. E. Phelan, president of the First National bank of Bowman, N. D., in Minneapolis, reports that in the vicinity of Bowman both the grain crop and pasturage conditions are excellent.

Do Not Want Supervision

In the opinion of Kelsey S. Chase, Minnesota state superintendent of banks, an effort is being made by certain real estate and investment companies to discredit the efforts of the department to carry out the law passed in 1911 for supervision of these concerns.

This law gives Mr. Chase authority to examine into the accounts and investments of investment companies in much the same way that his department supervises the business of banks. Certain companies, he said, were anxious to be placed under the jurisdiction of the state bank examiner, intending to use his department for advertising purposes, but when they found it put certain restrictions upon their methods of doing business they wanted to throw off the yoke.

N. F. Hawley Entertains Dr. Shaw.

N. F. Hawley, treasurer of the Farmers & Mechanics Savings Bank, was host to the Saturday Club at his Lake Minnetonka home last week in honor of Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of the Review of Reviews. Dr. Shaw was formerly a member of the organization, now succeeded by the Six O'clock Club. He was a bachelor then and "handsome". One of the effusions read at Mr. Hawley's party was a valentine sent years ago to Dr. Shaw by the women of the club.

Soil Survey by Townships

To study ways and means for obtaining a reconnaissance soil survey for Minnesota by townships, half to be paid by the state and half by the national geological survey, representatives of several state organizations met last week at the Minneapolis Commercial Club. Joseph Chapman, Jr., and J. W. Wheeler represented the bankers. A. G. Wedge, Jr., also a banker, from Bemidji, represented the Northern Minnesota Development Association. It was decided to get a bill through the next legislature, if possible, covering the exigency and providing the appropriation. The state university will assist.

Minnesota Chamber of Commerce Seats High

Seats in the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce, grain headquarters, have reached $4.025. The $25 was costs. This is a high price. The seat was bought by F. J. Seidl from I. L. Corse. The chamber considers buying the floating memberships to establish a fixed value of $5,000. An annual assessment of $30 is proposed to go into a special investment fund with the proceeds of sales of memberships.

Take First Certificate Under New Law.

The Minnesota Loan & Trust Company and the Wells & Dickey Company took the first certificates issued under the new Elwell state law permitting improvements at once by the sale of 15-year certificates, or in the case of counties, ten-year bonds. The bonds amounted to $123,349.77. The interest is 5 per cent, and the money goes to the park board to open a mall along the Pacific coast line of the C. M. & St. P. road in the city limits.

Play Golf

The Chicago Industrial Club, including several bankers, visited Minneapolis two days last week and studied the golf situation from the Minikahda and Lafayette club links. Several bank directors were in the entertainment committee and the following officers: President F. A. Chamberlain, of the Security National; Vice-President M. B. Koon, of the Northwestern National; President E. W. Decker, of the Northwestern; Vice-President C. T. Jaffray, of the First National.

Minneapolis Trust Company.

The Minneapolis Trust Company cannot be assessed as a banking corporation according to a decision by Judge H. D. Dickinson in district court. It can be taxed only as a trust company, according to the moneys and credits system. This decision means about $15,000 less to the county in taxes. An appeal will be taken.

MARYLAND BANKERS AT BLUE MOUNTAIN HOUSE

Blue Mountain, Md., June 20.—Delegates and members of the Maryland Bankers Association have convened here to-day for their seventeenth annual convention. The program is of unusual interest and includes such speakers as Dr. A. C. True of Washington, on "Agricultural Education;" C. Baker Clotworthy of Baltimore; Hon. Wm. J. Fowler, deputy comptroller of the currency, on "Payment of Interest on Deposits," and Hon. Charles A. Korbly, member of congress from Indiana, an orator of considerable renown. President Waldo Newcomer presided. Among the entertainment features will be a trip by trolley over the mountains to Hagerstown, and the annual banquet Saturday evening at which Omer F. Hershey of Baltimore will be toastmaster. Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Smock will entertain the visitors and their friends.

NATIONAL CITY BANK CENTENARY

New York, June 17.—The National City Bank was 100 years old yesterday. To celebrate the occasion the City Bank Club held its annual outing to-day at Beechwood, the Scarborough home of Frank A. Vanderlip, president. There was a circus and an open air performance of "She Stoops to Conquer." At the outbreak of the war of 1812 nineteen banks had been chartered by the state of New York. One of these, the City Bank of New York, received its charter on June 16th, two days before war was declared. One of its first acts was the purchase of bonds from the United States government to assist in the financing of the war of 1812.

Following a run of two weeks the People's of Ironwood, Mich., suspended. S. S. Curry is president. The suspension is said to be due to the closing of the Bank of Ironwood, another private bank formerly the property of Fred Karste, of Sheboygan.

NEW FEATURE ON OPTIONAL BONDS

A new feature has been adopted in connection with the offering of Denver Park Bonds by Henry L. Doherty & Co. of New York.

It assures the purchaser that his income yield shall not be less than the basis rate at which his bond is purchased.

The bonds are callable at any time, but only in numerical order, thus making them in effect bonds having serial maturities.

Doherty & Co. have carefully estimated the serial dates of payment, and if any bonds are called for payment at dates earlier than those given in their circular—1917 to 1927—they agree to refund to the bond holder the amount needed to adjust the purchase price to the original basis of income yield.

This agreement is protected by guaranty of National Surety Co. attached to each bond.

The principle or policy of assuring the bondholder that his income rate will be protected has previously been adopted by bond houses in selling bonds of optional maturity, but the plan of protecting the agreement by surety company bond is thought to be entirely new, and surely will appeal to many bond buyers.

IDAHO BANKERS MEET AT COEUR D'ALENE

Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, June 19.—One of the most successful and interesting conventions ever held by the Idaho Bankers Association convened here Monday. The meeting was called to order by President G. E. Bowerman promptly at 10 o'clock. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Mayor T. Wood and Boyd Hamilton. A. H. Keller, vice-president of the association, made the response, after which committees for the ensuing year were appointed. At the afternoon session President Guy E. Bowerman delivered his annual address which was followed by the reports of the secretary, J. W. Robinson, and treasurer, H. H. Nuxoll. Addresses were then delivered by E. F. Larson of Nampa on "Local Bank Co-operation," printed in full elsewhere in this edition, and by J. C. Blackwell of Parma on "Benefits of Group Organizations." At the close of the afternoon session all the visiting bankers and their wives were taken for a very enjoyable automobile ride, starting from the Hotel Idaho.

Features of yesterday's program were addresses by E. W. Wilson of San Francisco; F. F. Johnson of Boise on "Cost and Credit Accounting of Country Banks;" F. A. Freeman of Portland on "The Bank as a Constructive Force." Motley H. Flint of Los Angeles and Wm. Thompson of Lewiston spoke at the afternoon session. At 2:30 the delegates and their guests were given a boat ride to St. Maries with dinner at Kootenai Inn. Returning at 7:30 there was dancing on a barge which was picked up at Chatelet. All reported a most enjoyable time.

To-day there will be speeches by Geo. N. O'Brien of San Francisco on "How the Panama Canal will Affect the Business Interests of the Pacific Coast States," and J. W. Maxwell of Seattle, who will address the convention on "Bank Advertising." The convention will close with the election of officers. In the afternoon all the delegates and their friends will be the guests of the Coeur d'Alene Racing Association for the races at Alan, Idaho.

J. A. BROADIE, City Treasurer
PIERSON, IOWA

Des Moines, June 20.—Secretary P. W. Hall, of the Iowa Bankers Association and Detective Gust Patek, Iowa representative of the Burns agency, set a new mark in Iowa in the neatness and dispatch with which they captured and convicted the robbers of the Cylinder Savings Bank at Cylinder. Within a few hours after the robbery, James Gleason and Frank Collins had been arrested and had confessed. Less than a week after the robbery, they had pleaded guilty and had been sentenced to ten years apiece at hard labor in the Fort Madison penitentiary. This comes perilously near to setting a record for quick justice in Iowa. In the meantime, Charles Fisher at Cherokee and Hale Kinsey at Sheldon have been arrested suspected of complicity in the affair. Kinsey is in jail ostensibly for holding up a train crew. It is the theory of Detective Patek however that he held up the crew because he was frantically endeavoring to get to Sheldon where he hoped to force the city marshal to release Fisher. Secretary Hall is confident that the men were working under the direction of "Jim" Daly, organizer of the Daly gang.

Charles Shade

Charles Shade, of Rock Rapids, newly elected president of the Iowa Bankers Association, was in Des Moines last week conferring with Secretary Hall and outlining plans for the coming year. Mr. Shade is enthusiastic over the Iowa association which he says is growing much stronger each year. He believes that the agricultural improvement campaign which the association has taken up is a good thing and should be pushed along. Mr. Shade and ex-president Curtin were at Minneapolis last week attending the Minnesota convention which was held at the Agricultural College half way between the Twin Cities.

Transfer of Bank Stock

An important change in ownership of bank stock in the German Savings, Des Moines, will occur July first when Jesse Wells, president of the institution, takes over the stock held by the estate of the late president, James Watt. President Wells has been dickering for the stock for some time and negotiations have been completed. The transfer, while important as affecting the controlling interest of the bank, does not mean a change in the offices of Vice-President James O'Donnell or Cashier John Hogan.

Money Market.

The money market in Des Moines is moving somewhat slowly because of the unseasonable weather. The crops are about two weeks behind time due largely to the cool weather and heavy rainfall in some parts of the state. Corn is several per cent lower than it was on this time last year although soil is in fine condition with only more hot weather needed.

Railroad in Hands of Receiver.

The Leslie M. Shaw syndicate which was thought to have the money in sight for the purchase of the Atlantic North & South Railroad, seems to be unable to deliver the goods and the road will be advertised by the receiver once more. The Shaw syndicate purchased the property for $402,000 with the purpose in view of extending the line from Omaha to Des Moines. Mr. Shaw then began negotiations for the money in the east. He next went to London. Reports were that he had been successful in landing the money but when the date for paying up the money arrived, there was nothing doing. The impression prevails in western Iowa that the Rock Island and Burlington railroads who would be in competition with the new road succeeded in blocking Mr. Shaw's plans.

Iowa Banking Notes.

J. P. O'Malley, president of the People's National at Perry was stricken with appendicitis while visiting at Audubon and was brought to a hospital at Des Moines, where an operation was performed. At this writing, Mr. O'Malley is doing well. He is a prominent central Iowa banker and was defeated by Clint Price, of Indianola, as nominee for congress on the democratic ticket at the recent primaries.

The Waterloo Loan & Trust Company held its annual meeting and declared the regular five per cent semi-annual dividend. Benjamin J. Howrey was elected president; F. J. Eighmey and J. W. Arbuckle, vice-presidents; R. A. Dunkelberg, treasurer; A. E. Smith, cashier; E. A. Barber, assistant secretary. The company expects to remove about October first to new quarters on the second floor of the First National bank building.

S. R. Graham, assistant cashier of the Orient Savings and E. T. Dufur, president of the First National at Diagonal, were Des Moines visitors this week.

Dubuque voted $110,000 for bonds for a new school building, but found that amount insufficient and will vote for an additional $40,000.

The contract has been let for the interior work of the Teachout Building in East Des Moines which is to be occupied by the Iowa Trust & Savings. The contracts call for beautiful interior finishings and fixtures of the very latest pattern.

Lewis Shields has been chosen cashier of the Unionwood Savings succeeding James Shaff, resigned.

G. D. Ellysen, formerly president of the Commercial Savings, Des Moines, has returned from Indianapolis, where he attended a meeting of the American Association of Pharmaceutical Chemists.

Receiver W. R. Lee, of the First National at Carroll, has paid another five per cent dividend to the creditors making 40 per cent paid in all.

The Farmers Security at Sexton has decided to go out of business. The institution is owned by L. E. Krantz and Ed Johnson. The bank is solvent and every depositor will be paid in full.

Stockholders in a bank at Traer and officials for the First National at Hudson have been in Cedar Falls this week inspecting the structures owned by the banks in that city. Cedar Falls has the distinction of having three handsome new bank structures erected within the past five years, any one of which is a distinct credit to the city.

The Commercial National at Council Bluffs has started suit in the district court at that place for $8,000, which, it is alleged, the city collected upon unjust and illegal levies. It is alleged that the assessors in 1907 secured a list of the stockholders of the bank and assessed the shares of each. For four years the bank paid the taxes but finally made a written request that the supervisors remit the taxes. The latter refused and the case has been taken into the court.

C. C. Harvey, for several years cashier of the Citizens Savings at Iowa Falls, has resigned and will take a position with the Pollock Bank at Flagstaff, Arizona. Mr. Harvey was formerly in a bank at Marne.

J. P. Jordan of the University State Bank in University Place, Des Moines, made a gift of $3,000 to Drake University as one of the donations which are being made to the institution which wishes to raise $200,000 by July 1st.

T. D. Lockman, who went to Missoula, Mont., some eight years ago, has decided that Iowa is best, after all. He has returned to Albia, his old home, and has purchased the controlling interest in the Albia State. Mr. Lockman is a well-known southern Iowa banker, and his return has been received with gladness among his old friends.

B. G. Ensign, president of the State Bank of Neola for the past five years, has sold his stock to James Shaff, who recently resigned as cashier of the Underwood Savings. Mr. Ensign has resigned as president and J. S. Hermesen, former cashier of the institution, succeeds him. Mr. Hermesen has been with the bank for eighteen years and is well and favorably known. It is thought that Mr. and Mrs. Ensign will remove from Neola.

The Union Savings at Davenport has launched something new in the installation of a public drinking fountain. The fountain will be located in front of the bank and the water will be kept cool by means of a refrigerating system in the basement of the bank building.

It is reported that the Milton State, which recently closed at Milton, will be reorganized and will reopen shortly with a capital stock of $32,000.

C. E. Buckley has resigned as cashier of the Prairieburg Savings, Prairieburg. J. J. Dolan has been elected to succeed him. Mr. Buckley had an interest in the bank and it is understood this has been disposed of.

The controlling interest in the Newell State at Newell has been sold by the Norton estate to R. H. Parker of Des Moines, J. R. Neill of Cherokee, and Lorne F. Parker of Cherokee. It is stated that the Harvey interests have also sold to the same purchasers as the above.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

Notwithstanding reports of worm troubles and bad stand that are more or less discouraging, local bankers have reason to believe that the corn crop, like all the other crops of the growing year in this territory, will be up to

MANY bankers, from time to time, have need of a special or secondary reserve fund. This reserve fund they carry in bonds or as an inactive account at interest with a metropolitan bank. We make a specialty of handling such inactive reserve accounts for banks and bankers, and of supplying carefully selected bonds for investment, circulation, emergency currency, government deposits or postal savings fund purposes. To banks intending to establish a secondary reserve fund unexcelled facilities are offered.

We have prepared an exceptionally informative leaflet on government bond data in concise enough form to be practical to every banker, — just the thing to have close at hand for ready reference. We shall be pleased to send these leaflets free upon request.

the standard, or better. This is the opinion of W. P. Manley, president of the Security National, who is not only a banker but a "farmer," owner of a large ranch in this county. His reports indicate that corn is about two weeks later than usual, owing to the extremely cold weather for the time of year, and there has been considerable replanting, due to poor seed, but this is about done. Rains have been plentiful, and the advent of warm weather soon is all that is needed to make corn come out as usual. This condition applies not only in this section of Iowa, but in Nebraska and South Dakota as well. Some complaints are made around the country that cut worms and wire worms are doing more than the usual amount of damage. This is probably true, but at that they are not a serious factor. The Illinois Central railroad crop report for this section is optimistic. All small grains bid fair to yield phenomenal returns. Hay is good.

Catch Forger

While E. R. Gurney, vice-president of the First National bank of Fremont, Neb., entertained D. A. Clevenger, a visitor at the bank, with tales of his recent trip east, Cashier Knapp slipped out a side door and summoned the chief of police, and a few minutes later Clevenger was admitted behind the bars of the city bastille, there to remain, pending charges of forgery which were placed against him. He had cashed several checks at the bank, aggregating about $100. One of them, bearing the name of J. W. Tenbrink, was repudiated as a forgery.

FRED E. NOLTING, 2nd Vice-President

President Walter Newcomer to the Maryland Bankers

Advises taking up agricultural and educational issues and refers to conflicting convention dates in contiguous states

In my address last year, upon my election to the presidency, I asked of you three things, namely, suggestions, toleration and co-operation. As to co-operation, one of my duties was to appoint committees in various counties to consider the question of the payment of interest on balances, and I am glad to say that no one declined to serve and only one man has since resigned, and that for the very good reason that he was moving away from the county to a distant part of the state. It is not necessary to detail here the work of these committees, as their reports upon the floor of this convention will show you the splendid progress made by some and explain why others have not been able to do likewise. We also met with hearty co-operation and assistance in the matter of the bank tax bill, for since our last meeting the state of Maryland has been afflicted with another session of the legislature at which a bill was presented and most earnestly worked for by the great majority of the banks. It is sad to chronicle another defeat for this bill, but it is far easier to get through a bill calling for largely increased expenditures by the state and the city, whether necessary or not, than it is to pass one causing any decrease whatever in revenue, even though accompanied by prospects of great future advantage. In addition to this difficulty and to the opposition of a few banks, we found the legislative halls so crowded and the legislature's time so completely occupied with discussions of the local option question and the woman's suffrage that there was very little time for proper consideration of other questions. A second defeat is so discouraging that it is difficult to keep on hoping, but if those of us who advocated the bank tax bill are correct in our views that it is a wise measure, there is still hope that another legislature will pass it, for we had this year most encouraging support on the part of merchants, real estate men and others from whom we had no right to expect endorsement, and we may, therefore, hope that another two years' growth in this sentiment will be sufficient to bring success, a success which we believe would be of the greatest benefit to the whole banking situation in the city of Baltimore and throughout the state.

I am inclined to take this opportunity to lay before you a matter which some of you will be surprised to hear proposed by a city man, and that is the question of encouragement by our banking fraternity of steps looking to the improvement of conditions on our farms, in the hope of actually making the lands more productive than they are to-day, and at the same time improving the attractiveness of the farms to those who remain upon them. This matter was first brought to my attention at the time of the meeting of the American Bankers Association last November at New Orleans, when Joseph Chapman, Jr., of Minneapolis, made a most interesting report to a gathering of bankers, showing the progress and the accomplishment of similar movements in Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois and other western states.

At that time I promised to bring the matter before this convention, and since my return have received a circular on the same general lines from the crop improvement committee of the chamber of commerce of Baltimore, and only recently the matter was formally presented at Briarcliffe to the executive council of the American Bankers Association and heartily endorsed by them. You will see, therefore, that it is of far-reaching importance and that it is high time Maryland was in line to take some steps to the same end, for we have essentially a farming state. We all realize that the foundation of the wealth of the country is in our farms and that any improvement, however slight in itself, if sufficiently far-reaching to spread over the broad area of this country and produce a few dollars a year more in revenue per acre, means a tremendous amount, not only to the farmers but to the transportation companies, the merchants and the bankers. Our agricultural colleges do a certain amount of work in this line in the way of educating farmers' boys, but only a very small proportion receive the benefit of this, and in nine cases out of ten, although their work is carried on to the very best of their ability, it is largely theoretical without the practical training that is needed. They are doing as much as their limited resources will permit, and an increased appropriation from the state sufficient to enable them to give demonstrations and make practical suggestions direct to the farmers, and conditioned upon their so broadening their work on these lines promises most valuable results.

The bureau of agriculture of the United States government is exercising considerable influence in this direction, but those who have worked with this problem believe that a great deal more is to be accomplished by work done in each of the states separately. I do not wish to trouble you with a detailed report of what is being done in each of the various states. As a start in this matter I would recommend the appointment of a small committee, preferably from the agricultural districts of the state, to co-operate with the crop improvement committee of the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce, and to report to our next convention with suggestions for practical work on these lines. It would also be most valuable and instructive if at least one delegate could be sent to attend the second annual conference of the various state agricultural committees, which conference will be held at Minneapolis or St. Paul during the second week of August of this year.

It is most unfortunate that our convention almost always conflicts with that of some neighboring state, which our bankers would like to attend and whose representatives we would so warmly welcome at ours. Last year it was with New York, this year it is with Virginia. At present each state convention arranges its own date according to its own convenience, considering at the very outside only those dates which have been previously announced, so that the very ones who decide last, because most limited in their scope of dates, find themselves unable to avoid conflicting with some other convention. Our own choice of date is restricted to a very narrow period by several unavoidable and ever-existing conditions, and the conventions of some other states are similarly restricted, but I would suggest that the secretary be instructed to correspond with the secretaries of several of our neighboring associations before any dates have been fixed for next year and see whether it is not possible by co-operation and a frank explanation of the situation to arrange a schedule which will prevent many conflicts unavoidable under the present system and which will permit representatives of the New York and Pennsylvania banks who desire to attend all these state conventions to do so without unnecessary traveling, gaps of lost time or performing the very difficult feat of being in two places at one time.

During the past year death has dealt leniently with our membership so far as mere numbers are concerned, but in personality our loss has been heavy. The official report shows only two deaths of members, but those are names that stand forth in the annals of this association, as well as in their own communities. Robert Shriver, the grand old man of Cumberland, and the friend of all of us, and H. H. Haines, of Rising Sun, than whom no other member was more faithful in attendance at our conventions or more loyal to this association.

In conclusion, may I express my sincere appreciation of the faithful and efficient services of our secretary, Mr. Hann, and our treasurer, Mr. Marriott? This is not merely a form of words to be repeated year after year, but grows out of a sincere recognition of the fact that these men, with their experience, willingness and energy, have relieved the president of all care and worry and have made possible the successful administration of his office. To my fellow members I am grateful for the compliment conveyed in conferring this high honor upon me, for their cordial support and kindly words, and in returning to private life I shall carry with me most delightful memories of my many friends among the bankers of Maryland, and trust that even as an ex-president in a state of innocuous desuetude I may still retain their friendship and respect.

Bank Co-operation as Perfected at Nampa, Idaho

E. F. Larson of that city tells the story of its success to the Coeur d'Alene convention. The newer philosophy works well

Coeur d'Alene, June 17.—Cashier E. F. Larson of the Citizens State Bank at Nampa told the convention to-day of the new gospel of bank co-operation as perfected and practiced by the banks of his city. Among other things he said:

This subject of local bank co-operation is a most important and serious one. The success or failure of many matters of importance to the community, depends upon the harmony existing between the banks holding, as they practically do, the key to every important business enterprise in the town. But as important as this matter is to the public, it is even more so to the banks, and it is upon this latter phase of the matter that I wish to elaborate. I happen to be an officer of one of the banks of Nampa, a town of about five thousand people, and of which I believe it can be said with pardonable pride, that it is one of the most up-to-date and progressive towns in the whole intermountain country.

In banking circles of southern Idaho, Nampa stands unique, in having what has been so often conceded to be the most practical and sensible bank co-operation to be found anywhere, and I trust I may be pardoned in taking the Nampa Plan as an illustration of what can be accomplished through earnest and conscientious effort. Not that there is anything wonderful or unheard of about it; on the contrary it is extremely simple.

I have been asked many times by bankers of this state how we managed to get all the banks into an agreement that each one is so anxious to keep, and frequently after explaining it, I notice a look of disappointment on the face of my friend, who seemingly expected to hear of some closely guarded secret, heroic action or great sacrifice. The very basis and fundamental principle of co-operation must be faith and confidence in your competitor, a sincere regard for your stockholders, and generally speaking a desire to pursue a "live and let live" policy. In considering this matter, let us for a moment leave the customer in the background, assuming that every good bank is run from the inside of the counter and most poor ones from the outside.

Practical co-operation between competitors covers substantially every phase of the business. In the Nampa Plan we cover overdrafts, exchange, advertising, donations, printing of special customers' checks, interest paid on deposits, safety deposit box rentals, escrows, farm auction sales, the drawing of legal papers, and while we have an understanding on rates for loans, we leave it optional with each bank, believing that the circumstances surrounding each individual loan are so different, that it is better to leave the matter of rate open.

Referring hastily to the matter of public donations, we all know how cunningly the solicitor calls our attention to the fact that the "other bank" or perhaps all of them have subscribed "so much," inferring, of course, that it would be suicide not to follow suit or go them one better. The funds of the banks at Nampa can be used for such purposes by special agreement only.

We have eliminated all calendars, booklets, purses, trinkets of every kind, in fact all advertising novelties. The only advertising allowed is in our home newspapers, and in them the size is limited. This has of course brought us into bad repute with our traveling men, who rarely fail to assure us that we have made the mistake of our lives in putting the ban upon their particular line of advertising, and that it will only be a matter of time when we would resume it. Be that as it may, it is working very satisfactory. We are experimenting. We do not contend that we will always pursue this policy. Perhaps our experience with over-advertising and not advertising at all, will eventually show us the happy medium.

On March 1st, last, we eliminated overdrafts. Every experienced banker knows full well the task we have undertaken. We mailed every patron a notice that on and after March

G. E. BOWERMAN
St. Anthony
President Idaho Bankers Association

1st no overdrafts would be allowed, and so far it has worked better than we had hoped for. How often we have heard the remark that Mr. Smith's check is always good at a certain bank, regardless of the size of his balance. The common custom among banks in allowing overdrafts has made such remarks possible. To overdraw is simply forcing a loan upon your banker. He should loan the funds of the institution instead of the depositor. I know of nothing that will so certainly and so quickly put a banker in bad grace with a depositor as to refuse the payment of his check. I know of no other privilege extended by banks that is half so dear to the customer.

It is largely the banker's fault, purely a matter of custom and indulgence, nothing else.

Our bank co-operation at Nampa has caused a great many remarks both favorable and unfavorable, humorous and disagreeable. We have been censured, we have been told that we have lost our individuality and influence, we have been accused of forming a trust in the restraint of trade. It kept some of our street corner philosophers working overtime, picturing in lurid colors and wild gestures the calamity that was about to fall upon the community. A few there were who were seriously afraid that we were inconveniencing the public. Others spurned the idea of such an agreement, and ridiculed the possibility of its lasting over night. This kind of talk has died out. The muckraker and street orator have turned their attention to the political situation. The facts of the matter are that three-fourths of our people do not know the existence of any special agreement, aside from that of overdrafts.

It is needless to say, that our agreement would have been canceled long ago, had we found it impractical or injurious to our business, or in anyway affecting the patronage of our banks. We weighed each point carefully before going into it, knowing it would result in better banking and ultimate satisfaction. The bankers of Nampa are young, ambitious men, and if in the past any lack of faith or confidence in each other existed, it certainly has not been exhibited during the past eighteen months, during which time it has been put to the most searching test. The remark has often been made that the banks of Nampa might just as well be under one management in one office, for everything was practically the same at all of them. This would naturally be the consequence, were it not for the fact that by a consolidation new competition might be encouraged.

To bring the several bankers of a town together on a general agreement is usually a very delicate matter. So frequently we have grievances against our competitor for some fancied slight or injury, and he may have the same. To discuss these matters without widening the breach is truly a very difficult matter and often results in failure, unless all concerned are broad and large enough to grant that possibly they might be mistaken. If a town has the misfortune of having a banker whose word is questionable, it complicates matters very seriously, and it is doubtful if any agreement would last long. However, I believe there are exceedingly few cases in which the bankers of a town cannot be persuaded to see the advantage of co-operation.

Confidence is essential in all business transactions and we must have it from our patrons. No bank can prosper without it. A banker is looked upon, as a rule, as the very personification of confidence. Why, then, should we hesitate to trust our fellow banker? Why should not competitors have as much confidence in each other as customers have in their banks? Cultivate the acquaintance and esteem of your competitor as you would a patron. Prove yourself trustworthy and you will gain his confidence. Here is a good place for the application of the Golden Rule.

I believe the best way to get together on co-operation is to discuss frankly all matters of importance that affect the service rendered and the Profit and Loss account. Carefully consider every point and before agreeing to it, make sure that you can and will stick to it.

And should your competitor break the agreement, instead of running up the red flag and declaring war on him, remind him of the violation. He may have done so without intention or without knowing it. We all make mistakes. Talk to him as you would to a customer and the chances are ten to one that he will thank you for the consideration and courtesy shown him and assure you that it will not happen again. If within your heart is nursed that feeling of superior virtue over that of your competitor, that makes it impossible for you to have anything in common with him, it will seriously affect any agreement that you might enter into. You may be a better man, with more virtue than your rival, but the chances of his believing it are against you.

Perhaps the greatest service that the banks of Nampa render each other, is the checking over of all loans made to parties who owe more than one bank. Our method of checking these over is to let one bank call off its list of borrowers, and where two or more banks have made loans to the same party, the amount and usually all the facts are discussed. Nothing is said regarding borrowers confining their line to one bank. We have talked some of rating every bank patron, but this has not yet been done. This would be a valuable guide, for frequently all the facts are not known to the loaning bank, that might seriously affect it.

I wish to dispel any impression you may have received in the course of these remarks that we have stifled competition at Nampa. This is neither practical nor desirable. Take competition out of the banking business and the chances are that the service rendered would be less satisfactory. Take sentiment and pride out of the managers of a bank and the probability is that the business will decrease and become less profitable. Now and then we see a banker whose head has become gray in the service, and contented with the spoils of many years of close application to business, rests on his oars, unmindful of the young men across the street, who are alive and quick to take legitimate advantage of every opportunity. We must not lag in this day and age of the world. It takes snap, energy, vigor and keen interest to cope with the competition, resulting in many positions of the greatest responsibility being filled by young men of ability, and with old heads on young shoulders.

EFFECT OF PANAMA CANAL ON PACIFIC COAST STATES.

George N. O'Brien, vice-president of the American National Bank of San Francisco, in a talk before the Idaho bankers at Couer d'Alene this week, was enthusiastic in his portrayal of the benefits which likely will accrue to the Pacific Coast states as a result of the completion of and opening for traffic of the Panama Canal. Mr. O'Brien prefaced his remarks by a brief summary of the various historical events leading up to the starting of work on this gigantic enterprise, and how it finally fell to the lot of the United States to inaugurate and to carry out one of the greatest engineering achievements known to science. It is estimated that ships of all the nations of the world will be able to pass through the canal two years hence. Mr. O'Brien believes that the completion of the canal will cause large numbers of immigrants to flock to the Pacific Coast, which ultimately will be reflected in increased business activity and prosperity. Another thing to be considered is the great saving in the cost of transporting freight, it being estimated that this alone will be more than sufficient to pay the cost of carrying out the project. By traveling through the Panama Canal ships going from Europe to California will travel 6,200 miles less than they do at present.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

The First National Bank of Richmond, Virginia, with capital stock of $1,000,000, earned surplus of $1,000,000 and undivided profits of $275,000, is the largest and most progressive bank in the Virginias and the Carolinas. The original capital in 1865 was only $100,000, but this has been increased from time to time as the business needs of the community required. During its existence of forty-six years the bank has paid its stockholders $2,552,245, never having missed a dividend.

The First National Bank is strictly a commercial institution and uses its funds to foster worthy enterprises throughout the South. With its large resources it is in a position to extend its correspondents and depositors a banking service which it confidently believes will meet every legitimate requirement. It maintains a large force of competent clerks who are trained to handle the business of its patrons promptly, carefully and courteously. The officers are men of experience and keep in touch with commercial conditions throughout the section which the institution serves. The directorate is composed of eighteen representative business men of Richmond—men who have made a success in their private enterprises and have always stood well in the community both socially and financially. They represent practically all the lines of trade for which Richmond is famous.

WILLIAM C. CORNWELL BEFORE VIRGINIA BANKERS

William C. Cornwell of New York, editor of the "Bache Review," issued by J. S. Bache & Co. of that city, addressed the Virginia bankers this week at their convention held at Old Point Comfort. Mr. Cornwell chose for his subject "Country Banks' Control of the National Reserve Association and Benefits Derived." Mr. Cornwell pointed out that the impression generally prevails that country banks are under obligations to their city correspondents on account of money which they borrow from the city bankers in times of financial stringencies. Under the plan of the monetary commission they themselves can be relieved so easily through the reserve association that it will have a tendency to cause them to encourage rather than to discourage borrowing on the part of the country banks, thereby establishing the independence of the country banks. In advocating the adoption of the plan as suggested by the National Monetary Commission, Mr. Cornwell said that he believed that the sense of security because of the knowledge that the vast resources of the Central Association were back of every bank would have a tendency to inspire confidence in depositors in times of trouble. He said in part:

"The Central Reserve Association, with practically unlimited privilege of issuing currency in time of need, would be so great and powerful a remedy that the situation never

The fire would be put out before it had begun to blaze. And this would be the great benefit, surpassing all others to country banks and to all banks and to all business men if we should adopt this plan for reform of the currency and banking system of the United States."

Virginia Convention

The nineteenth annual convention of the Virginia Bankers Association was held on June 20th and 21st, concluding the sessions today, at the Chamberlain Hotel, Old Point Comfort. On the first day a committee on resolutions was appointed, after which President E. P. Miller of Lynchburg delivered his annual address, which was followed by reports from the treasurer, secretary, attorney, the executive council and of committees and groups. In the afternoon H. N. Phillips, cashier of the Peninsula Bank of Williamsburg, delivered a very able address on "Two Suggestions—not Popular, but Important," which was followed by a talk on "Agricultural Finance and Farmers' Viewpoints," by D. M. Gannaway of Buckingham county, and one on "A Higher Plane for Banking," by J. B. Perry, cashier of the Floyd County Bank. On the second day officers for the ensuing year were nominated, after which there was a talk on "Co-operation in Banking," by J. H. Peters, cashier of the Peoples National Bank, Gate City, and one on "Control of the National Reserve Association by Country Banks and the Benefits They Derive," by W. C. Cornwell, of J. S. Bache & Co., of New York, editor of the "Bache Review." In the afternoon Carroll Pierce, vice-president of the Citizens National Bank of Alexandria, spoke on "Two Problems of Interest to Virginia Bankers." The major portion of this session was devoted to a general discussion of matters relation to banking. At the session to-day E. St. Elmo Lewis, publicity manager of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company of Detroit, is to deliver an address on "Advertising to the Man in the Mirror," after which there will be a report of the committee on resolutions, the transaction of unfinished business and the election and installation of officers for the ensuing year.

Amusement features were not overlooked by the Virginia bankers. On Thursday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock a parade was given on the government drill grounds directly opposite the Hotel Chamberlain through the courtesy of Col. F. S. Strong of the coast artillery corps. In the evening there was a moonlight excursion. On Friday afternoon there was a trolley ride, making a trip to the Newport News Ship Yard, which proved very interesting to all those participating. On Friday evening the annual banquet of the association was held at the Hotel Chamberlain.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF PITTSBURGH

One of the oldest, strongest, and most progressive banks in Pittsburgh, Pa., is the First National Bank. This institution which was established as a state bank early in 1852, and celebrated its sixtieth birthday last January, was nationalized in 1863, being the first bank in Western Pennsylvania to obtain a national charter. There are not many older national banks in the whole United States, for its charter number was 48. For more than six decades the First National has been a vital factor in the business life and remarkable growth of the Steel City. The attainment of sixty years of honorable existence was celebrated by the completion of the tallest and newest skyscraper in Pittsburgh, at the corner of Fifth Avenue and Wood Street. At the intersection of these two most important thoroughfares of the city, the First National has stood during the most of its existence, and has been not only an architectural but also a financial landmark of the city. The First National Bank building is 26 stories high, and covers a ground area of 9,600 feet. The main banking room is a magnificent, hall 75 feet square, whose graceful vaulted roof rises to a clear height of 50 feet, supported by a series of arches resting upon eight hexagonal columns of statuary marble. The walls also are of this choice stone, artistically ornamented with gold and blue, while bronze is lavishly used throughout the building.

In its long and uninterrupted career the First National Bank has extended its facilities in every direction, and is now in constant touch, through its direct correspondents, with the whole civilized world. In addition to providing every modern facility for domestic banking, it buys and sells foreign exchange, finances exports and imports, provides steamship reservations, letters of credit and travelers' checks, and makes translations of commercial correspondence for customers. Every department is in the hands of experts, and a staff of over one hundred trained employees is at the service of customers.

As a state bank the institution's capital was $150,000, and this was increased to $500,000 when the bank was nationalized. Successive increases followed and its capital is now $1,000,000, with $1,122,693.08 surplus and profits at the date of the last statement April 18, 1912. At that date its deposits were $18,161,881.73 and its resources were $21,313,434.47. The active officers are: Oscar L. Telling, president; F. H. Richard, cashier; T. C. Griggs, W. F. Benkiser and R. C. Masten, assistant cashiers. The Foreign Department is in charge of J. E. Rovensky, manager, and W. J. Frank, assistant manager. The directorate is composed of the following well-known financiers and business men: W. Harry Brown, Francis H. Denny, J. Rogers Flannery, James S. Kuhn, William S. Kuhn, Frank B. Nimick, George S. Oliver, L. M. Plumer, J. H. Purdy, Eugene S. Reilly, F. H. Richard, James R. Sterrett, J. J. Turner, and Oscar L. Telling.

A. C. TRUE BEFORE MARYLAND BANKERS

Dr. A. C. True, director of the U. S. office of experiment stations, department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., in speaking to the Maryland bankers this week urged the general establishment of agricultural education and vocational training as conducive to the welfare of the country. He said in part:

"It is the duty and it will be the great economic advantage of the state to provide a broad system of agricultural education for youths and adults. It should be the business of every good citizen, whatever his occupation, to foster and promote agricultural education, for agriculture is the fundamental industry on which human life and civilization depend. I therefore say to the Maryland Bankers Association, as I have said to the Southern Commercial Congress at Nashville recently and the great Commonwealth Club of San Francisco last summer, that the great economic forces of the country should unite to aid the farmers in the establishment of an effective American system of agricultural education."

NEW BANK FOR HOUSTON

The National Bank of Commerce, Houston, Texas, is being organized with a capital of $500,000. It will be located in the quarters recently occupied by the Commercial National Bank at Main and Franklin Streets.

A. W. Gutridge, manager of the St. Paul Provident Loan Society, backed by the business men to make loans to salaried people, is dead. He was manager through the four months since the society was organized.

left when the Roosevelt steam roller had passed along. This year the former "owner and operator," and his friends had it all handed back to them "with interest at 'steen per cent."

If the commerce court had decided its eight cases in favor of the shipper, this presidential year, would they be in their present predicament?

IN weeks like this, with the bank call out and seven state conventions, good addresses by home folks like S. E. Bradt and B. F. Harris necessarily "get the hook" for politeness if for no other reason.

"McWHO" is the name of the original of the picture which masqueraded in these columns as that of our good friend McNider of Mason City, Iowa. The first to guess it, inadvertently, was J. M. Dinwiddie of Cedar Rapids who writes:

"YOU say the picture was not that of McNider—but another 'Mc,' but you don't say McWho? Possibly it was McNudder? It not McNider or McNudder, then was it McNeeder? I am starting for a long distance Canadian trip but I am 'coming back,' sure.

"I BELIEVE you were built for your work. Surely your paper is universally liked, for go where you will you find a copy. It ought, for it's newsy, fresh and reliable, and—if it makes any mistakes—makes amends. I expect to see the next copy at Vancouver, B. C. I wish you success and increased usefulness.—J. M. D."

EVERY one in Iowa, and all over, will wish Col. Dinwiddie a pleasant and a safe journey. Yes, and he's likely to "come back" at those railing youngsters who "combined" him out of a place on the Big Council. They didn't know they had him beaten until it was counted off.

THE Colonel is as original and breezy in his bank work as in his side line of association politics. In enclosing some bank literature to prospective customers J. M. D. concluded thusly:

"If you were in receipt of as many letters and circulars from as many different banks as we are, you would at once notice a great similarity in all of them—a copying of each other's literature. At the same time you would notice an originality and freshness in all that comes from us that would appeal to you and impress you with our sincerity."

NOW you know why he likes THE CHICAGO BANKER so well. It isn't a tiresome reprint.

EXCHANGE BANK (J. S. Butler & Son) of Springville, Iowa, is a private bank with up-to-date tendencies. It lists (and pays taxes on) "$75,000 capital, real estate $100,000, and other resources $100,000." Little wonder it has $300,000 in deposits. It has "capital, resources and responsibility," and has been in business successfully for 33 years.

C. F. BUTLER is the president and Samuel James, Jr., is cashier. The president says: "Banks have been the means of making more successful business men than colleges. You may be a little too old to start to college, but you are just the right age to start a bank account with us."

WILLIAM McLEOD RAINES' story of cattle ranching, "Mavericks," has been issued in a neat illustrated duodecimo by the G. W. Dillingham Company. Both the hero and the heavy villain of this drama of the western plains are entangled in love with the same girl, and the war of wits between the two results in numerous exciting and ingeniously devised situations. It is a good story, well told.

GETTING back to Iowa! You know those two crusty old bachelors who run the Peoples at Cedar Rapids—Ely and Burianek? Well, the spell is broken. Ely's married to a school chum of his sister, and that's how it happened. Next!

HAVE you noticed "who's here" on the Big Council and on the A. B. A. nominating committee for Iowa? McKee, Carpenter and Lyman Edwards respectively. Iowa will have a "solid" delegation this year "for Arthur Reynolds and good government."

CASHIER.

COL. FARNSWORTH AT NORTH DAKOTA CONVENTION

Col. F. E. Farnsworth speaking before the North Dakota Bankers Association said, in part: When the Irishman said that "Every man should be loyal to his native land whether he was born there or not," he meant that a Michigan man, living in New York, should be as glad to visit North Dakota as I am to-day.

It is on somewhat the same patriotic principle that 226 North Dakota bankers have added to the strength of the American Bankers Association that effort and enthusiasm which has so splendidly developed their own state association. It is largely to such loyal support on the part of the various state associations and their secretaries, that the American Bankers Association is the largest federation of bankers in the world, with a membership of 12,657. The secretary is not on the witness stand, but it is known that the senatorial spy-glass is searching for the haunts of the octopus, and while the fact that our headquarters are now six stories nearer Wall Street has not yet directed suspicion to the association as a money trust, it seems best to remove all possible occasion for distrust by voluntarily, but briefly, telling something about the American Bankers Association, and what it is doing.

First and foremost it is not a close corporation of bankers, by bankers and for bankers. The business man needs the banker as much as the banker needs the business man, and what benefits one must affect the interests of the other. If there exists in the public mind any division between the two terms it is a misfortune, which can have been occasioned only by the selfish individualism of a few, and the impression is quickly corrected by a knowledge of what is being done by the A. B. A. to conserve the business welfare of the country.

It was to co-operation that you North Dakota people pledged yourselves when on July 4, 1889 you met in Bismarck to frame a state constitution, and it is by co-operation that you have made your state a synonym for success. The National Reserve Association is but a new charter of independence for the business interests of the nation, which must be safeguarded from all prerogatives of privilege by the financial few if the rights of the many to prosperity are to be secured and maintained.

So, in closing, I bespeak for currency reform that measure of your co-operation which has federated your state association and the A. B. A. with those efforts for the common good of the country, which it has been my privilege briefly to outline for you this afternoon.

Woodruff Trust Company

Joliet, June 24.—There was incorporated in this city to-day the Woodruff Trust Company with a capital of $250,000, of which George Woodruff, president of the First National of this city, is to be president; F. W. Woodruff, vice-president; E. R. Lewis, treasurer, and J. Merle Plant, secretary. These officers are identified prominently with the First National, and it is expected that the Woodruff Trust Company will be an allied institution. It has been organized expressly to handle amortised farm mortgages on the plan used by the credit foncier of France. The company will confine itself to the territorial limits of the state of Illinois and will not operate outside. This is the first strictly land credit bank organization in America, and the intention is to systematize the farm loan business of the state and to reduce materially the rate extended to farmers on farm loans.

This new bank seems to have complied in its plans with the requirements of the new committee appointed by the American Bankers Association at New Orleans to find a way by which farm loans may be had more cheaply and on longer time than they have been heretofore. At the present time Myron T. Herrick of Ohio and Edward Chamberlain of Texas are visiting the farm-loan sections of Europe collecting information for the great American Bankers Association with the view of offering a solution of the problem of financing the farmers at a lower rate. Mr. Woodruff is looked upon as a progressive in banking circles, and bankers all over the country will be interested in the success of the new trust company organized to handle farm mortgages.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS ON BUSINESS CONDITIONS

George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago, has the following to say in regard to business conditions:

"General business activity continues about the same as it has been during the past thirty days to six weeks; the volume in some special lines, notably steel and iron, having increased materially over sixty to ninety days ago. Many lines of business collateral to the iron and steel industry have shown more or less improvement, but business generally seems to be in about the same condition that has prevailed for some time. We have not as yet been able to notice any change in conditions which we can trace to political agitation, for the healthy physical condition and the generally good prospect for crops have been sufficient up to this time to overcome any bad effects which otherwise might have come as the result of such unusual political conditions. Every indication seems to point to a fair business during the fall months, with a probability that there will be some appreciation in interest rates during that period. People have become so accustomed to political contentions that they are not now paying the same attention to the present agitation in politics that would have been given under the same conditions five or ten years ago. I believe that we can look toward the future of business with considerable assurance."

One Way of Keeping the Boy on the Farm

AS duly recorded in the strictly financial department of this paper, Farmer Joe Chapman, Jr., and Farmer George F. Orde live on adjoining acres at Minnetonka Bay. After Farmer Chapman had pursued and captured an escaped junior Jersey his little daughter remarked: "How do you expect to keep the boys on the farm, Father, when you can't do as much for the calves?" Farmer Orde has answered this question, and a Minneapolis artist has told the story in black and white. Orde would tie the boy while Chapman chased the calf. Very simple!

Fourth and First

Nashville, Tenn., June 24.—Stockholders of the Fourth and First National banks voted here to-day practically unanimously in favor of consolidating the two institutions. The title selected by the directors is "Fourth and First National Bank." The capital, assets and deposits will be combined in one institution under the management of the officials of the two institutions, except Mr. Watts, president of the First National, who has accepted the vice-presidency of the big Third National of St. Louis, which position he will assume actively on July 1st.

Mr. Watts has been in the banking business all his life, and for the past fifteen years has been president of the First National, which has prospered exceedingly under his administration. His connection with the Third National at St. Louis will make no change in the bank's policy, which will remain strictly a commercial institution, serving the interests tributary to St. Louis. It is believed in Nashville that President Charles H. Huttig will resume his duties at the Third National about September 1st.

GROUP 1 AT MOLINE

William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, attended the meeting of Group 1 held at Moline on Thursday of this week. W. A. Scott, professor of political economy at the University of Wisconsin, addressed the convention on the recommendations of the monetary commission. Mayor M. R. Carlson of Moline made the address of welcome, which was responded to by Charles W. Boyden, cashier of the Farmers State Bank of Sheffield. Delegates were taken on board the steamer "W. W." for a trip down the Mississippi river, passing the site of old Fort Armstrong on Rock Island, now occupied by the government as an arsenal and small arms factory. The trip extended as far as Muscatine, where a stop was made, after which the delegates returned to Moline in time to catch the evening trains for home. O. F. Anderson, chairman of Group 1, and cashier of the Moline Trust and Savings Bank, acted as chairman of the entertainment committee.

BANK INCREASES DIVIDEND RATE

Directors of the Washington Park National Bank, at their meeting on June 25th, voted to increase the dividend rate of the bank to 7 per cent.

The Farmers State Bank of Perry, Texas, has been incorporated with $10,000 capital.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

HERE'S notice to Harris, Hamilton, and Edens that the rump convention at Orchestra Hall doesn't win the bet on the result of "the Chicago convention."

THE telephone and telegraph companies can tell you when the hall was rented and wires strung. It was no afterthought.

YES, and Roosevelt will run, too, if (with a big "if") Perkins, Gary and Munsey can finance the new party. That is the "feeling" the Colonel refers to.

HERE are three predictions written by George Harvey before the Chicago convention about the Colonel, and you are to say if they came true:

"IT is related of him by his long-time acquaintances that in his college days he loved to dance the whirling-dervish dance; loved it for two reasons: because it made him the center of the crowd, and because nothing else could happen in his immediate neighborhood while he was at it."

"HE has always liked that form of entertainment; liked anything that made him the cynosure of a crowd, the bigger the better, and suspended other proceedings while he was performing."

"IT is to dance the whirling-dervish dance that he has gone to Chicago. He will dance it for all he is worth, but whether he will succeed in suspending proceedings is not so certain."

FRED W. ELLSWORTH told the Washington bankers that "next to the question of exchange on country checks, I suppose there is no problem confronting the average banker that arouses more discussion than this one—'Does advertising pay?'"

ANSWERING his own question, Mr. Ellsworth said: "The city of Plainfield, N. J., in 1902, had a population of 15,000, with three banks, whose combined deposits were $2,000,000. A new bank was started whose policy was radically different from that of the older banks, in that it believed thoroughly in advertising. Its success, which was almost immediate, compelled the other banks to abandon their old policy of silence, and since 1903 all the banks in Plainfield have been consistent and continuous advertisers."

"THE population of Plainfield in the ten years has increased 5,000, or 25 per cent, while the deposits in the banks have increased to over $10,000,000 or more than 500 per cent. The vice-president of one of the banks in that city tells me that in his opinion 'this is conclusive evidence of the great value of good bank publicity.'"

N. E. FRANKLIN, president of the First National at Deadwood, uses pictures showing the prominent streets and buildings of his city on the reverse of the bank letter-heads, giving strangers a fair idea of what may be found in that thriving place. On the front of the sheet above the date line is a view of the heart of Deadwood, and along the left-hand margin is a panel view of Spearfish Falls, near Deadwood.

SEVERAL state associations have strictly modern and up-to-date secretaries, but it remains for Texas and Missouri to show forth with a pair of beauties that are away ahead of time. Keyser has pre-empted May 20 and 21, 1913, for his convention and Hoopes has filed a first mortgage on May 14th, 15th and 16th of next year. Thus these two secretaries give notice of the dates fixed upon so that neighboring secretaries can conduct themselves accordingly with a weather eye on conflicting dates.

IN reality, this is the modern way of conducting a state bankers association. There are a few "reactionaries"—to quote Brother Bryan—who still let the hotels of the town where the convention is going to be held fix the date and allow the convention to come along any time between the Fourth of July and Christmas. Every man who cares anything about conventions, and who wishes to attend as many of them as possible, appreciates advance information on the subject.

MISSOURI and Kansas bankers heretofore have united in organizing convention trains. This year they will not get together on their way to Detroit until they reach Joliet. The east Missouri bankers will come up over the Wabash to that point, and the Kansas and west Missouri bankers will reach Joliet over the Santa Fé. From that point they will take the short cut to Detroit over the Michigan Central, and will not touch Chicago.

THE St. Louis train will leave on Saturday evening, September 7th, and will arrive in Detroit on Sunday afternoon, September 8th. The Kansas City train will leave enough earlier to connect with the St. Louis train at Joliet. Stops will be made at all of the principal points along both railroads for the convenience of bankers.

THE Chicago committee on transportation to the Detroit convention has not organized fully as yet, but is considering proposals from both the Michigan Central and the Wabash. The present plan is to make it a day-light trip—probably on Saturday, leaving Chicago about 10 A. M., and arriving at Detroit about 4:30 or 5 o'clock.

THE most attractive proposition laid before the committee is that of the Michigan Central which offers to haul all the bankers on one train who wish to go, and to furnish at least three dining cars, with service in adjoining cars, if necessary, the one meal on board to be a regular "banquet on wheels."

THIS plan has appealed to all those who have been giving it consideration, and about all that remain to be decided upon are the fine points of the bill of fare, at a price fixed high enough to afford every delicacy of the season and strictly first-class service, with every guest having a seat at the first table, or as nearly so as possible.

A PLAN may be adopted whereby one ticket will cover transportation, Pullman seat and a place at the banquet table. In this case reservations will be made by tables so that those traveling together may eat together in comfort and without confusion. If you have any kick on this plan kindly notify the committee.

THOSE who already have agreed to serve on the transportation committee are Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines; W. G. Edens and J. Fletcher Farrell of Chicago; Nelson R. Greene of Moline; George F. Orde of Minneapolis; Oliver C. Fuller of Milwaukee; E. J. Bowman of Anaconda and W. D. Vincent of Spokane.

RESERVATIONS may be made on the Detroit train through any member of this committee or through any bank in Chicago.

CONTINENTAL AND COMMERCIAL NATIONAL, with its two allied institutions, now represents two hundred and thirty-five millions in deposits.

FIRST NATIONAL of Marquette, of which Louis G. Kaufman is president, has combined its statement in a handsome folder along with a short article on "The Value of a Checking Account." This would indicate that the folder is to be given a wider circulation than ordinarily.

GERMANIA NATIONAL of Milwaukee feels that "the growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods are in accord with the demands of present-day business needs," and says so prominently on its neatly printed folder issued under the last call.

UNION BANK AND TRUST COMPANY of Helena, under similar circumstances and for similar reasons, says: "The steady growth in the number of our depositors is evidence of public approval of our policy of safety and conservatism, which has been strictly adhered to."

HENRY S. HENSCHEN of the State Bank has returned from abroad, and will be pleased to note that the deposits kept climbing

THE LIVE STOCK Exchange National BANK OF CHICAGO

President M. M. Brown to South Dakota Bankers

Our gathering here to-day marks the twenty-first annual convention of the South Dakota Bankers Association. We are favored in having been invited to enjoy the hospitality of this thriving town of Belle Fourche, which is destined to become one of the most important points in this section of our state when it shall have achieved its destiny and become the center of a rich and prosperous community, living upon the fertile, irrigated lands watered by the magnificent ditch recently completed by the government at such a tremendous cost.

Our membership is steadily increasing and it is hoped that it will not be long before every bank in the state, which is not now a member, will join the association and aid in carrying on the good work which it is organized to accomplish. We have before us a bright future but it can only be realized by sustained effort and united action.

We bankers of this young state, still in its infancy, occupy a field which is rich in many natural resources, and which to be properly developed will require the active assistance of each and every one of us in our own particular locality, and we have it in our power to exert a greater influence in placing South Dakota upon a solid and substantial basis than any other body of men in the state.

Good, sound banks result largely from having good, sound customers, and to further the interest of such customers is an object which the bank should always have in view. With this in mind the association has appointed a committee on agricultural education and development, consisting of Isaac Lincoln of Aberdeen, W. S. Hill of Alexandria, and J. W. Campbell of Huron. Similar work has been undertaken by practically all of the bankers association in the northwestern states, and it is earnestly desired that the South Dakota association at this meeting shall appoint a standing committee, and see to it that such committee shall attend the conference of similar committees to be held in the Twin Cities during the month of August, and co-operate in every possible way in furthering and extending this excellent work.

Until within the last few years Western South Dakota, or practically all that section of the state lying west of the Missouri River, was known only as a stock country and was considered good for that purpose only, and entirely unfit for settlement. Conditions in this vast territory are now completely changed, and the transformation has taken place so rapidly that few people yet realize the new order of things and very many are not yet convinced that the change is of a permanent nature. All of the old time cattle outfits that used to run thousands of cattle upon the free ranges in this section have cleaned up and closed out their herds, and in place of the old open range the country is becoming thickly dotted with shacks, and in many cases with the more substantial improvements of the homesteaders who have cast their lot with us in the "Sunshine State," and who in spite of the drawbacks and hardships usually experienced by new settlers, and which were aggravated for the past two years by the unusual dry conditions prevailing, still have faith in the country, and there is every reason to believe that enough of them will remain on the land to make new conditions permanent.

Booms agricultural education and farm development. Bank guaranty sentiment strong in the state. Opposes high interest rates and the giving away of exchange

Alfalfa, that comparatively new and wonderful forage crop, will without doubt prove to be to South Dakota what corn has been and is to Iowa and Nebraska. Our soil and climate

M. M. BROWN
Sturgis
President South Dakota Bankers Association

are both favorable to the growth of this hardy plant, which enriches rather than impoverishes the ground in which it grows. Alfalfa seed raised in the Black Hills district is considered the best in the United States. One Meade county rancher received in the year 1911 $3,500 from the sale of such seed, and $500 from the sale of hay, making a total of $4,000 returns from a 100-acre field of alfalfa, and many other farmers in South Dakota did equally well in growing this same crop. Any rancher who secures a stood stand of alfalfa on his farm will increase the value of his land greatly, as it is conservatively claimed by recognized authorities that alfalfa will pay good interest on land values, ranging from $50 per acre up.

Political matters, both national and state, are claiming more than the usual share of attention this year, and in South Dakota one of the popular clamors is for the enactment of a law for the guarantee of bank deposits. The average politician is ever ready to advocate any measure which tends to attract votes to him, and the depositing public would naturally like to see all possibility of loss to them eliminated from the banking business, and undoubtedly this is an ideal condition toward which to work, but it is exceedingly doubtful if the desired end can ever be obtained wholly through legislation. I am inclined to think that greater and more lasting results can be obtained through intelligent and persistent efforts to elevate the standard of banking practices, coupled with a close scrutiny of those engaged in the business, and insistence upon the exercise of closer supervision on the part of the state and federal authorities.

Past experience has proved the state guarantee of deposits to be a failure in the East, where it was tried out many years ago, and if reports are to be relied upon the working of the law in Oklahoma is far from being ideal, while Kansas and Nebraska are still experimenting with the laws recently enacted by their legislatures, neither of which has yet been put to the severe test which is sure to come in time. Naturally, a banker cannot be expected to be disinterested in arguing the merits of this question, but let us remember that the best interests of the banker and the depositor are the same, and while their methods may differ it is a fact that they are both endeavoring to arrive at the same result, which is the placing of the banking business upon a safe basis.

Competition for business is one thing with which we all have to contend. A competitor who pays high rates of interest on deposits, gives away exchange, and in fact is willing to, and does, violate every principle of good banking for the sake of doing business is of no benefit to the community or to his own institution, but is a constant menace to the banker who realizes that in order to be successful, and sound, a bank must make legitimate profits, and who tries to conduct his business along safe and prudent lines. This is a truism which has been demonstrated so often in the past and has been brought to the attention of the bankers so frequently that it hardly seems necessary to repeat the warning. Volume of business properly obtained is all right, and under those conditions a bank may very reasonably take pride in the showing made, but if volume cannot be secured on a profitable basis it would be better to be satisfied to do less and do it right.

I want to urge upon the state association the advisability of insisting that group meetings be held regularly. While the provision has been made for these meetings, certain sections of the state neglect this matter. State meetings are beneficial but the greatest amount of benefit to the bankers in a given district will be obtained by annual meetings with brother bankers living in the same locality and doing business under practically similar conditions. Not only that, but group meetings held annually at centrally located points in the district comprising the group will naturally be better attended than will the state meetings where the distance to be traveled is so great and the expenditure of both time and money is such as to prevent many from being present who would like to enjoy the benefits which are to be derived from occasional association with men engaged in the same line of business.

Organization and co-operation is the tendency in all departments of business activity, and I want to urge upon this association that active steps be taken looking towards the establishment of a comprehensive and practicable group system in this state. I believe that benefits far beyond what most of us realize would result from a move of this kind and that many of the evils from which we are now suffering could be done away with by organizing the bankers of the state in such a way as to insure their getting together with the brother bankers of their section at least once a year.

BRITISH GOOD ROADS ENTHUSIAST VISITS CHICAGO

W. Rees Jeffries, honorable general secretary of the London International Road Congress, and secretary of the road board of the United Kingdom, spent four days in Chicago last week. Mr. Jeffries bore letters of introduction to W. G. Edens, president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, and other Chicagoans interested in this most important subject. The officers of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association entertained Mr. Jeffries at a luncheon at the Chicago Athletic Club, after which a drive was made over our boulevard system and interviews had with the different engineers in charge of the park and boulevard systems. To Engineer White of the South Park board, Mr. Jeffries said he was pleased to note that in Chicago those having in charge the supervision of the park and boulevard systems seem to understand that it is not only necessary to construct roads after an approved fashion, but that it is necessary to plan for their maintenance after their construction, and that this seems to be accomplished in Chicago as in no other American city which he has visited. Charles M. Willets, manager of Armour & Co., extended the courtesy of the general offices of that company, and a trip through the yards was greatly enjoyed by the distinguished visitor. Mr. Jeffries expressed the hope that the different states of the Union and the principal municipalities will send engineers or other road experts to the international congress to be held in London in June, 1913.

A new banking institution capitalized at $100,000 has been organized at Sioux Falls, S. D., with the following incorporators: Thos. Scanlon, W. C. Hollister, Fannie Hollister, Tore Teigen and W. H. Lyon, of Sioux Falls, Geo. T. Greeley of Chicago, and Robert Sohlberg, of Guthrie, Okla. Mr. Sohlberg is now president of the Guthrie National Bank, but will dispose of his interests there and make his residence in Sioux Falls.

South Dakota Convention

Belle Fourche, S. D., June 27.—The South Dakota Bankers Association has just concluded its twenty-first annual convention at this place. The convention was an unqualified success, and was very largely attended. The delegates on arriving on Wednesday morning registered with the secretary and secured their badges at the Kenefick Hotel. Convocation was held at one sharp at the Pearson Opera House, the meeting being opened by President M. M. Brown. After the invocation by the Rev. J. N. McCurdy, the address of welcome was delivered by Mayor J. S. Sauls of Belle Fourche, which was followed by the annual address of President Brown. At the conclusion of Mr. Brown's address the various committees of the association were appointed. The next event on the program was the report of delegates to the national convention, which was made by N. E. Franklin, president of the First National, and a member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association from South Dakota. F. C. Danforth, president of the Citizens Bank of Parker then read the report of the chairman of the executive council, and was followed by President John Clay of the Butte County Bank of Belle Fourche on "A Call From the Wild." H. H. Stoner of Highmore made a very interesting talk on "The Relationship Between the Banker and the Farmer." The rest of the session was given up to general discussion, selection of county vice-presidents and of group officers, and any question which the members might desire to propound. An evening session was held commencing at eight o'clock, at which there was an address on "Good Roads and Finance" by the Hon. J. W. Parnley of Ipswich. This talk was illustrated with excellent views and was one of the features of a very attractive program. This was followed by a smoker, the visitors being the guests of the Belle Fourche bankers. On Thursday there was an automobile trip to the government irrigation dam. A practical illustration of irrigation was given. Automobiles were provided for everyone and the return was made to Belle Fourche in time for luncheon. In the afternoon of the second day there was a talk on "Pahasapa—Nature's Park and Mint of Gold," by A. J. Plowman, an attorney of Deadwood, who was followed by H. B. Craddick of Minneapolis and N. E. Franklin, who talked on the "Imaginative Side of Banking" and "Commercial Paper" respectively. Reports then were heard from the group chairmen, and five-minute reports of the annual meetings of each group and an outline of crop and banking conditions. After the reports of committees, officers were elected for the ensuing year, after which a meeting of the executive council was held at the Kenefick Hotel. In the evening the visiting bankers and their ladies were the guests of the Belle Fourche Commercial Club at a reception held at the Pearson Opera House, dancing and cards being provided for in the entertainment. The local bankers spared no efforts in their endeavor to entertain their guests, and everybody present voted them the most genial of hosts. The amusement of the visiting ladies was looked after specially by the ladies of Belle Fourche.

Henry S. Henschen, cashier of the State Bank of Chicago, who recently has returned from a two months' trip to Europe, says that in Belgium and and Holland, where he visited first, there was every evidence of prosperity and enterprise, Holland, of course, being of old a very wealthy nation. Even in Sweden and Finland there are cities which in manufacture and other industries remind one of some of our thriving American cities. Mr. Henschen also visited Hamburg, which is a great big, thriving city, and was reminded very much of some of the large cities of the United States. In visiting Edam, Holland, which is noted for the celebrated Edam cheese, he noticed over one of the village banks the following sign: "Bank open every Wednesday from 10 to 3; 3 per cent interest paid on savings deposits."

OUT-OF-TOWN VISITORS

Hon. George B. C., and a former Illinoisan, whose father was state treasurer and a resident of Shawneetown, attended the republican national convention, being a guest of National Bank Examiner Reeves. Paul W. Byrd, cashier of the First National of Lawrenceville, Ill., and who comes from a distinguished Indiana banking family at Vincennes, was one of the assistant sergeants-at-arms at the convention. C. H. Ireland of the Bank of Washburn (Ill.) and one of the real "privates," called on Chicago banking acquaintances last week. John B. Jackson, cashier of the Anna (Ill.) National Bank, and his business associate, former Congressman C. T. Chapman, banker, Vienna, Ill., visited Chicago recently. Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Beeby of Alton, Ill., were Chicago visitors last week. Mr. Beeby is the cashier of the banking firm of D. A. Wyckoff & Co., of Upper Alton, which is affiliated closely with the First Trust Bank of Alton. Mr. and Mrs. Beeby were on their honeymoon. Mr. Beeby was an assistant sergeant-at-arms at the republican convention.

N. E. Franklin Talks on Commercial Paper

Some time ago, I was present in an eastern vaudeville house, where one of the monologue artists came out and said: "Well, what shall I talk about?" A little urchin in the gallery shouted, "Talk about a minute and then beat it." Well, I know what I want to talk about, but do not know all about what I am going to talk about, but what I do know about it will, I am sure, not take many minutes in the telling.

The term, commercial paper, is used in defining notes given in mercantile transactions, and to be used for such transactions, and to be paid at maturity, without request for renewal. The term is differently understood in different sections of the country. In the East, it is what is known as business paper, in the South, notes given for taking care of the cotton crop, in the Northwest, elevator and wheat paper are considered prime.

During the past fifteen years, the business of trading in commercial paper has grown from an infant to a full grown industry, the larger cities each having many commercial paper or note brokerage houses.

A bank cannot, even under ordinary conditions, loan all its capital, surplus and deposits, excepting the amount required for reserve, to customers who expect to use the money, not as temporary, but permanent capital, necessitating the renewal of their notes. The greater percentage of a bank's deposits are payable on demand, and it therefore is desirable, and we might say imperative, that it have some sort of quick assets as part of its investments, which in time of stress can be used for raising money without disturbing the obligations of its clients. Commercial paper is one form of quick assets.

During my banking experience, I have been connected with banks dealing largely in the Deadwood financier advises his fellows on a subject full of mystery and near to every banker's heart, at the Belle Fourche convention. Favors registration. Sees future menace to rates purchase of commercial paper, and I have found on several occasions the wisdom of having this class of security in the bank's assets. In time of stringency, a bank's deposits, especially the commercial deposits, are certain to show a decrease, because business men cannot make collections, and must use their bank balances to meet maturing obligations. At these times, for a bank to be of service to the community in which it is located is no small matter, and I claim that carefully selected commercial paper most readily furnishes such means. This class of paper should always be bought, only after as carefully selecting the note broker as the paper itself. For the country bankers, it is always good judgment to have one of their city correspondents pass upon the paper for the reason that in these larger banks men are employed, who make this branch of the bank's business a specialty and this, in a manner, reduces the risk. Good business is the taking advantage of opportunities, with the least possible chance of loss. Statisticians claim that over five billion dollars worth of commercial paper is being discounted by national banks alone, each year. I have not attempted to verify these figures, but presume they are correct and am only quoting them to convince you of the magnitude of the commercial paper business.

Much can be said of what kind of paper to purchase, whether it be single name, two name, secured or unsecured, but I am attempting to view this subject from the standpoint of a country banker, who really relies on the judgment of the broker, and the city banker, in the selection of this class of paper, so will refrain from dwelling on that phase of the argument, except to say to you, never buy the paper of an individual, firm or corporation who offer their notes for discount through two or more brokers.

It seems needless for me to go into any further details as to the merits of commercial paper, believing we are all agreed that it is one of the best quick assets a bank can have, but now comes the perplexing question, how are we going to make this good form of asset better? Business conditions have changed the past ten years, and the safeguarding of every form of business is being resorted to. While the sale of commercial paper has grown from a meager amount to the almost inconceivable figures mentioned a few moments ago, and the number of houses dealing in this class of payables now are numbered in the hundreds, nothing has been done to protect the purchaser, and I believe the time has arrived for action. Not that this business is bordering on dangerous lines, but its magnitude at present, unguarded, leaves an opening for dealings which might not stand strict scrutiny. How are we to safeguard commercial paper? I believe the registration of such paper the only practicable way. For instance, when a firm or corporation desire to discount their paper, they first present the same for registration to some bank or trust company, which should be selected by the American Bankers Association to act in such capacity. It is then delivered by the maker to his broker to be sold. It would only be a short while before every banker, before buying any commercial paper, would insist on its being registered, and if it was not, he would refuse to purchase. This procedure will, I believe, tend to restrict the excessive borrowing now being carried on by many makers of commercial paper. The system of registration of commercial paper has been adopted by several large concerns, they using one of their banks as a registrar. The contention of those that are using this form is that it extends to the maker and to the purchaser a degree of safety not otherwise afforded them. On the other hand, many representing banks and corporations will argue that it is bad form, and that it opens the avenue of publicity of one's business to the public. I believe this argument is the most consistent one advanced in favor of registration, and anyone selling their paper to the public must expect to keep the public advised as to their financial condition. This is an age of publicity, and when refusal of such publicity confronts you, you should refuse to buy.

Another argument that is being advanced against registration is that with the enormous amount of paper sold each year, the loss is practically at a minimum. For the sake of argument, I grant this, but ancient history does not make future history, so why not, while the horse is in the stable, lock the door and use every caution to prevent his being stolen. This argument of minimum loss was formerly used in favor of cotton bills of lading, until some forgeries were perpetrated and large losses made by banks. An effort, I believe, is soon to be made by the American Bankers Association to safeguard this class of securities. To justify my contention as to how little may be known under present conditions by either banks or note brokerage houses of the paper bought or sold by them, I will give you some personal experiences. A couple of years ago, I was in New York, and while in conversation with the president of one of its largest banks, was asked if the bank I was with carried any paper of New York business concerns, and I mentioned several names that we were carrying at that time. One of the names mentioned was described by this banker, and using his own language, "None better, we are carrying a great deal of the same." I left New York two days later, and before arriving in Chicago, secured a morning paper and the first thing that greeted my eyes was the notice of a receiver having been appointed for the "none better" concern. Another time, while in Chicago, my bank wired me to purchase some "paper." I went to one of the Chicago most reliable commercial paper houses and selected the amount of paper we

Tacoma
Secretary Washington Bankers Association

desired, when the broker said, "You have not selected one of the best pieces of paper we have for sale." I accepted his recommendation, adding that to my other selections. Two weeks later, a receiver was appointed for the "best piece of paper" concern. In both of these cases, it developed afterward that the exact amount of paper these concerns had discounted was not known to anyone but to themselves, and not to those who should have known. Registration will take care of this condition. Take a recent failure of a large wholesale house in one of the larger north-western cities. Their paper was scattered from Maine to California, and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, and believe some two hundred or more banks held this paper, ranging from $1,000 to $25,000. While strongly advocating the registration of commercial paper, I am not unmindful of the fact that it is not for me to say that this is the very best scheme to be adopted, but I do believe that nothing has been suggested that provides as an efficient safeguarding of commercial paper as registration. There is one more phase of this subject that I wish to bring to your attention. I have attempted to, in a brief way, impress upon you the excellent character of commercial paper as a quick asset, and also to make plain my argument how to circumscribe this asset with safety, but we bankers of the smaller cities and towns have a danger confronting us which we must look squarely in the face. The time is not far distant when note brokerage houses will be offering for sale the paper of our high-grade customers at a much less rate than these customers now are paying us. The banks of the larger cities will be your competitors to the extent that they will control your loaning rate, and eventually we will see a uniform rate of interest, extending all over the United States, but how are the banks doing business outside of the large centers going to meet these conditions? Our expenses are higher, our field is limited and our risks greater. It is a serious problem, but one that is standing on our threshold armed with commercial weapons and arguments. Are we going to contest it, and if so, how?

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

J. M. Mitchell, president of the American National Bank of Mt. Carmel, has sold to R. I. Bailey, president of the First National of Norris City, a controlling interest in his bank at Browns. Mr. Bailey is a man of large means and his departure from Norris City greatly is to be regretted. Under Mr. Mitchell's management the bank at Browns has had a successful career.

Monmouth Banks Thriving

As shown by the recent call of the comptroller, national banks of Monmouth are in a thriving conditions. The Peoples National shows loans and discounts of $640,252.32; cash on hand, $227,054.45; resources, $945,004.77; deposits, $724,551.87. The Second National shows loans and discounts of $602,947.36; cash on hand, $203,794.39; resources, $916,841.75; deposits, $641,614.41. The National Bank of Monmouth has loans and discounts of $1,145,000; resources of $1,700,000; cash on hand $280,000 and deposits of $1,073,000.

John L. Hamilton

Hoopston citizens feel very much aggrieved over the fact that the Chicago papers have persisted in referring to John L. Hamilton as being from Watseka, instead of from that thriving city. Mr. Hamilton took a prominent part in the affairs of the republican national convention. He is one of the best posted men in the Middle West on the financial banking system of the country.

A Clever Swindle

A clever swindle, whereby a man from Chicago sold to several prominent Tazewell county farmers a hospital which he claimed to own, but which subsequent developments proved was a myth, is alleged to have been consummated in Bloomington. The purchasers paid $13,000 in cash towards the purchase of the hospital, and the balance was made up of notes held by the Central National Bank of Peoria. A bill for an injunction recently has been filed asking the court to restrain the bank from collecting the notes and from disposing of them in any way. The court also is asked to turn over the papers to the complainants.

Illinois Banking Notes

C. H. Turner and H. W. McClure of Atlanta and Thomas Ryan of Lincoln visited Middleton on Friday last. They attended a meeting of the directors of the Farmers State Bank, which has declared a dividend payable July 1st.

The First National of Princeton is inaugurating a Christmas Savings Club plan.

"The Rock Island Union" is another good roads enthusiast. They state that Illinois is one of the foremost producing states in the Union, and that there is no reason why it should be behind in the matter of good roads. They endorse the proposed plan of the Illinois Bankers Association.

Palmer W. Halsey, who recently defrauded the Ridgely National of Springfield out of something like $575, has been apprehended and brought back to Springfield. His arrest was effected by the Burns National Detective Agency, who located the alleged swindler in Kansas City.

J. W. Price, president of the First National of Allendale, died at his home in that city at about noon on June 19th. Mr. Price owned several hundred acres of land in the northern part of Wabash county, and was one of the most prominent business men of that section of the state.

J. C. Scheule, a teller at the Nokomis National Bank, has resigned to accept a position as manager of the Reynolds Wire Company at Dixon. His many friends will miss him greatly, but heartily wish him success in his new undertaking.

The Farmers State Bank of Cuba is making rapid progress in the remodeling of its banking quarters, which it is said will present quite a change after all the work has been completed. The Peoples Bank of Lexington, which is erecting a new building, is making substantial headway in the construction.

Freeport banks, according to information contained in statements issued under the recent call of the comptroller, are in a very flourishing condition. The State Bank leads in the matter of deposits, having $1,230,947.81, and is followed closely by the First National which has $1,159,270.49.

James A. Watts, vice-president of the First National of Nashville, Ill., recently was married to Miss Hedwig Lutz of the same place. The couple will spend their honeymoon in Colorado.

Rolston is to be the cashier of the new bank.

TRUSTWORTHY REPLIES TO FINANCIAL QUESTIONS

"The Readers' Service Department" of Lippincott's Magazine offers its services, without charge, to all readers who desire information upon any financial topic. All inquiries are regarded as confidential, but the privilege is reserved of publishing, unsigned, inquiries and answers which are of general interest. The department is conducted by Edward Sherwood Meade, who also contributes a financial article each month, that in the July issue being on "Industrial Bonds." Among other interesting things, he tells us:

"Even the patent monopoly is subject to such conditions and limitations as to render it of little value in furnishing security for bond issues. A patent expires at the end of seventeen years. The originality of the invention must be tested in court before the patentee can be certain of legal protection in his right. If the invention proves valuable, there are always men or corporations who will attack its originality in the hope of either invalidating the invention in whole or in part, or of receiving money to withdraw their claim. A recent illustration is the invention of the Taylor-White process for the manufacture of tool steel, from which the owners, for a number of years, drew a large income, but which was finally declared to be non-patentable. In this day of accumulated knowledge, it is next to impossible to hit upon something which is absolutely new. Somewhere in the world—it may be in some obscure laboratory, or in a corner of some workshop—the most promising invention has been at least suggested, and a suggestion of anticipation is enough for a contest.

"The value of a patent, moreover, is constantly threatened by the danger of substitution. The end desired may be reached by some other road than the one upon which the patentee has the exclusive right to travel. As soon as the value of a patent is proved, men set to work upon the problem which it has solved in the endeavor to find some other solution, and it is but seldom that one of them does not succeed. The writer knows of a case where a patent was granted for an improvement in a certain device, in which the only change was the substitution of a weak for a strong spring. As a basis for the security of investment, a patent is worthless. Save in the most exceptional cases, no well-informed investor would buy a bond of a company whose earnings were dependent on the monopoly of a patent."

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

The new home of the Second Ward Savings Bank on the triangle bounded by West Water, Cedar, and Third streets, is fast nearing completion and will be ready for occupancy, the officers believe, by September, despite the delay occasioned by the past severe winter. The building conforms to the triangular shape of the property with a 152 foot frontage on West Water Street, 153 on Third Street, and 88 feet on Cedar Street. The structure is two stories in height with Doric columns running from the sidewalk to eaves on all sides. The hand-carved stonework is the richest and most profuse of any building in the city. The main entrances will be on both West Water and Third streets. A mezzanine floor extends about two sides of the interior, leaving the main concourse unobstructed, however, from floor to roof. The floors will be of tile and marble and the walls of marble and stucco. The vaults will rest on concrete foundations erected independent of the building foundations.

One of the features of important local interest about the new building is the fact that all the work on it was let to Milwaukee contractors and that Wisconsin raw materials were used wherever possible.

August O. Paunack

August O. Paunack, formerly cashier of the Commercial National, Madison, has been appointed assistant cashier of the Second Ward Savings Bank. Joseph Lademann becomes assistant manager of the Ninth ward branch. Mr. Paunack, one of the younger generation of state bankers and actively identified with the work of the W. B. A., began his banking career in Madison as a messenger for the Bank of Wisconsin, finally becoming manager of the west side branch of that institution. When the Commercial National was organized in 1908 he was elected cashier and director of the new institution. Mr. Lademann has been in the employ of the Second Ward Savings Bank in various capacities since 1888.

New First National Bank Building Started

The first steel and concrete caissons used in construction work in Milwaukee are now being sunk for the foundation of the new sixteen-story building of the First National Bank. Forty-six of these piers are now in course of construction by a corps of 150 men, working day and night shifts. D. H. Burnham & Co., Chicago, the contractors, expect to complete the building by May, 1913.

W. P. Bishop Gives Favorable Report

With an encouraging report on the wheat and rye crop for 1912, W. P. Bishop, president of the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, returned to the city Tuesday from a trip through the state. "Small grains look better now than ever before," said Mr. Bishop. "While it is hard to say as yet how the barley crop will turn out, I believe there will be as great a yield as last year. Wheat in Wisconsin is looking good and rye promises an equally large crop."

"Forward Wisconsin" Movement

Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association is sending out bulletins this week to all the bankers of the state, asking their support of the "Forward Wisconsin" movement as outlined in the constitution of the Forward Wisconsin League, of which he is treasurer. It is the aim of the league to enlist the majority of the state bankers in the ranks of its membership, and to co-ordinate the present activities of the Wisconsin Bankers Association in encouraging crop improvement with the efforts in the same direction of the new organization.

SECRETARY KAUFFMAN AT TACOMA

In making his annual report at the convention of the Washington Bankers Association this week, Secretary Kauffman attributed the phenomenal success of the state association to the fact that great care has been used in the selection of its officers, the past presidents being among the ablest financiers of the nation. Not a single bank failure has occurred during the past year under the admirable banking law of the state. The failure of a number of private banks, however, suggests the advisability of amending the state law so as to put all persons doing a banking business under state supervision and inspection. The present membership number 385, which is the highest in the history of the organization. Mr. Kauffman believes that they have reached the point where it now is necessary to depend upon the organization of new banks for an increased membership. Almost every bank in the state is a member of the association. The protective committee has done very efficient work during the year just ended, having succeeded in arresting a number of bank swindlers. The executive committee at its February meeting authorized the secretary to renew the contract with the Burroughs Adding Machine Company, whereby members are enabled to purchase adding machines at ten-elevenths of the list price at a saving of from $34 to $50 per machine, resulting in an annual saving of over $2,500. A large percentage of the members have taken advantage of the time lock contract, by means of which their time locks are cleaned and guaranteed for $9 per annum per lock, or an annual saving of from $1 to $6 per lock. It is expected that an agreement soon will be signed whereby every member of the association can purchase typewriters at a heavy discount. The secretary pointed out that the saving effected by these contracts alone is more than sufficient to pay the cost of membership in the association. Negotiations also are pending for the consummation of a contract whereby it will be possible to write burglary policies through the secretary's office. The secretary also reported that action had been taken endorsing the famous "Blue-Sky" law of Kansas, and recommending that the legislative committee take steps to bring the matter before the state legislature and to urge the passage of a similar law for Washington. The association lost two member by death during the past year—L. J. Pentecost, president of the Pacific National of Tacoma, former treasurer and a member of the executive council, and H. W. Smith, cashier of the Olympia National, a former member of the executive council. This is the fourth time that the convention has been held in the city of Tacoma.

NORTH CAROLINA BANKERS AT MOREHEAD CITY

Morehead City, N. C., June 28.—The North Carolina Bankers Association has just concluded its sixteenth annual convention, which was held in the Atlantic Hotel of this city, starting on June 26th. On Wednesday evening the convention was called to order by President J. C. Braswell of Rocky Mount. The address of welcome was delivered by W. L. Arendell of Morehead City, and the response was made by W. S. Blakeney, president of the Bank of Union, Monroe. President Braswell then delivered his annual address, after which the bankers listened to the report of Secretary and Treasurer W. A. Hunt of Henderson. The secretary reported 348 banks as belonging to the association—a net increase of eight over the preceding year. There still are a number of banks in the state which are not members of the association. The members were urged to use every effort to induce these non-members to join, and to point out to them the advantages which they are missing by staying out of the fold. The association is in a prosperous financial condition. Announcements were made, after which the meeting adjourned, and was followed by an informal reception. The second day reports of delegates to the convention of the American Bankers Association were heard, also reports of standing committees. There were addresses by William Reed, assistant cashier of the City National Bank, New York; B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, and the appointment of committees. To-day Hon. Lee McClung, United States treasurer at Washington, delivered an address. New business then was discussed, after which reports of committees were heard, and the election and installation of officers for the ensuing year. This evening at 8:30 o'clock a banquet was held. Delegates attending the convention were invited to open a general discussion of each paper after it was read, and to ask the author questions on any points where there was a difference of opinion.

NEW TRUST COMPANY FORMED

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 24.—The Dominion Trust Company, a new banking institution, succeeds the Guardian Trust Company, which was organized in 1903. The new company continues the business of the Guardian Trust Company, at the latter's address, without interruption. The Dominion Trust Company has an authorized capital of $500,000, which will be increased to $1,000,000 or more later. George E. Reynolds is president and O. S. Decker, first vice-president and chairman of the board of directors. Mr. Decker was president of the Guardian Trust Company. In addition to the regular banking business the company will make a specialty of acting as trustee under corporation mortgage bond issues, and as registrar of stocks and bonds.

DEPOSITS IN PITTSBURGH BANKS

The twenty-nine national banks of Pittsburgh, Pa., in response to the comptroller's call, show total deposits of $217,159,473, the largest in their history, comparing with $211,765,105 on June 7, 1911, and with $217,026,493 on April 18, 1912. The surplus and profits of the twenty-nine banks on June 14th stood at $32,137,118, compared with $31,481,512 on June 7, 1911, and with $31,949,518 on April 18, 1912. The reports of the state banks and trust companies of Pittsburgh, on May 10th last having shown record deposits, the financial institutions of Pittsburgh now have the largest deposits in the history of the city.

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, June 26.—Outside of a slightly better demand from the country, the past week was marked by absolutely no new feature in the local monetary situation. The big local merchants and manufacturers are marking time, or in other words, filling immediate needs, without any effort whatever to expand or seek new enterprise. Banks and merchants, however, are all primed and ready for the signal, which will announce the return of activities, and can fall in line and push ahead with strong sinews. The recent statement showed an exceptionally strong position for St. Louis banks and trust companies, and while undivided profits have not grown or waxed fat, the period of conservatism has served to clean house, and it is doubtful if this region was ever before in fitter form to meet an era of real prosperity. Much depends upon the crop results, even more than on the political issue, and at this stage of development prospects are excellent. In the Central West there has been a bit too much moisture, and not enough growing weather for corn, but aside from its being late by about ten days or two weeks, the corn crop is very promising. Small crops are going to be splendid, fruit in the Ozarks, for instance, indicating the largest yields in years. The hay yield will run well above the average, and while wheat is behind in the middle states, it will show up bumper-wise in Texas, Oklahoma, parts of Arkansas, Kansas and Nebraska. Labor is for the moment at rest, and nothing from that source is apprehended in the near future. Country banks report some buying by merchants in excess of routine, and complaints are more of apathy than poverty in all the principal agricultural districts. Locally, the security market continues dull, but there is no disposition anywhere to liquidate, and a good undertone of strength has been maintained throughout the present month, with slight gains in certain instances. There is a fair investment inquiry for bonds and high-grade banking stocks. With the conventions out of the way it is believed the first step for general betterment will be passed. From now on it will be largely a matter of crops and weather.

Figures on the Call

According to the consolidated statement of the forty-three banks and trust companies, members of the St. Louis Clearing House Association, just compiled by Manager Hoxton, total deposits at the close of business on June 14th were $317,436,576. This is a sharp drop under the previous statement, but a gain of $2,914,673 as compared with June 7, 1911. Total resources aggregated $422,099,390, a gain of $4,624,369 over last year. Total loans were $236,- 355,969, an increase of $9,448,264 over 1911. Cash and exchange totaled $112,076,500, or something like $5,000,000 less than last year. On the other hand, bonds and stocks increased $1,606,844, and the circulation of the nationals gained $933,079. The total capital of the institutions was $41,550,000 and surplus and undivided profits $43,903,075. Institutions having deposits of more than $10,000,000 were as follows: Boatmens Bank, $14,066,387; German Savings Institution, $10,756,114; St. Louis-Union Trust, $30,592,142; Merchants-Laclede National, $14,714,526; Mercantile Trust, $24,013,955; Mississippi Valley Trust, $19,639,731; National Bank of Commerce, $59,793,338; State National, $10,748,466; Third National, $32,985,970, and Mechanics-American National, $31,207,693.

Woman is Bank Heroine

Mrs. Sadie Wood, an attractive young woman of Mammoth Springs, Arkansas, has been the recipient of endless praise and congratulations upon her heroic conduct in the recent holdup of the Citizens Bank of Mammoth Springs, of which she is assistant cashier. A tip was received by the bank that a holdup had been planned, and Mrs. Wood volunteered to stand watch alone in the building at the time when the job was to be executed. This she did, while a posse, well armed, was concealed in the bank vault. As per program the robber entered and at point of pistol made Mrs. Wood hand over the cash. As the man turned to leave the bank the young woman gave the signal agreed upon, and out came the deputies, who without preliminary parley, plugged up the holdup gentleman full of lead.

Commerce vs. Commerce

The National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City has instituted suit against the National Bank of Commerce in St. Louis to recover $7,488, which the plaintiff alleges it lost because the St. Louis bank failed to wire non-payment of two drafts drawn by the Citizens Bank of Eureka Springs, Ark. The drafts were in favor of the Kansas City institution and drawn on the Commerce of St. Louis. B. F. Edwards, president of the National Bank of Commerce in St. Louis, says the suit is the result of a misunderstanding.

T. R. ATKINSON BEFORE NORTH DAKOTA BANKERS

T. R. Atkinson, state engineer for North Dakota, in talking before the bankers of his state last week on the subject of good roads, urged co-operation upon the part of the banks in this most important matter. He said: "You as an association can exert a wonderful influence for better roads in our state, and better roads mean a greater prosperity for the farmer and for you. Each individual member of this association should be a missionary in this movement for better road conditions, just as you are for better farming methods. Each one of us as a citizen of this commonwealth owes to ourselves, to our neighbors and to our children the exerting of our influence for this great movement for better roads. I can show you localities in this state where one enthusiastic good roads advocate has so impressed his enthusiasm upon road officials that the results obtained are the wonder and delight of all who travel. Better roads is a local issue now in many of our communities and the roads of any locality reflect the degree of public enterprise in that locality. I am led to believe that a great obstacle to the improvement of our highways is the selfishness which leads us to think we are best taking care of ourselves when we refuse to do more than our share of a work having for its object better conditions for the whole community. Some of us conclude that when we do more than our neighbor in any public enterprise we have lost that portion of our labor which is represented by what our neighbors did not do. This is a false conclusion, but unfortunately the common conception of human affairs. A man unwilling to do more than his share in a majority of cases does less than his share and often is a burden to society. Let us then as bankers, farmers, business or professional men, stop and consider whether we shall stand in the pathway of progress in this matter of improved conditions on our highways, or shall we individually do our part in forwarding this great movement by insisting that the men we choose to represent us in the legislature shall be men who, having the welfare of our state at heart, will cast their vote and influence towards better road conditions."

ACTUAL value received from their connection with us has increased our accounts from other banks 50% in two years. We therefore invite the business of others with the assurance of mutual satisfaction.

TRANSPORTATION ARRANGEMENT FOR THE SALT LAKE CITY CONVENTION

By OTTO J. KRAMPKOWSKY.

The Transportation Committee reports that although the usual application for reduced fares was made to the various transportation associations, early in January, so far it has only been acted upon by the Trans-Continental Passenger Association. The delegates benefiting by it are those of the North Coast territory, i. e., the lines from Portland, Seattle, Tacoma, Vancouver, Victoria and common points.

Round trip tickets will be sold from this territory to Salt Lake City and return at 1/3 for the round trip, dates of sale being August 18th and 19th; final return limit 15 days from date of sale. No stopovers will be allowed going, but stopovers will be allowed on return trip at all points within final limit. Should the other passenger associations make reduced fares, the matter will be published in the next issue of the Bulletin, or specially prepared pamphlets will be sent to the various chapters affected; otherwise the delegates will take advantage of the summer tourist rate that will be in effect at the time of our convention. These rates are practically one fare for the round trip, with the stopover privileges unlimited.

Chicago delegates to the convention have met and have made arrangements to run a special train to the convention. These arrangements have been made with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad to Omaha; Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, Omaha to Denver; Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, Denver to Salt Lake City; Oregon Short Line, Salt Lake City to Yellowstone National Park. The Convention Special will leave Chicago on Sunday, August 8th, at 10 A. M., arriving at Denver Monday, August 10th, at noon, and be the guest of the Denver Chapter until midnight the same day. The special train leaving Chicago will be made up of the finest "St. Paul" equipment, standard compartment and drawing room sleeping cars, "with berths that are longer, higher and wider," dining car, buffet and observation car.

All delegates that can arrange their trip are invited to come via Chicago, and make their reservations on the special train. Delegates that will necessarily have to travel direct to Denver are expected to be there on Monday to participate in the entertainment arranged for by the Denver Chapter. At Denver arrangements will be made to take the entire party from there to Salt Lake City by special train. Those desiring to return direct to Chicago should use the Oregon Short Line and Union Pacific Railway to Omaha, thence to Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad to Chicago. Those desiring to return through Colorado should use the Denver & Rio Grande to Denver, the Union Pacific or the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, Denver to Kansas City, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, C. B. & Q., or Northwestern Railway, from Kansas City to Chicago.

Later on an official circular will be sent out to all chapters and their delegates, giving full details in regard to the time at points of interest, en route, the manner in which sleeping accommodations are to be procured, rates and routes of round trip tickets to various side trips that can be made when returning from the convention, and all return routes available, in fact, full information covering everything in connection with the trip.

Chicago's full delegation will be in attendance at the Salt Lake City convention, and with their friends have already a party of about 50, and have made arrangements to take the five day trip in Yellowstone Park, via the Wylie Permanent Camping Way, and the total cost of this trip will be $35. It is hoped that all delegates that have the time will arrange to take in the Yellowstone Park trip.

DETROIT BANKS REPORT FAVOR- ABLY

An unusually healthy condition of the Detroit banks is shown by a comparison of the combined statements of the clearing house banks, as issued by the Detroit Clearing House Association on April 18th, the day following the last call, and June 13th, the day previous to the call just issued.

The principal items and the changes were as follows:

Increase Since Last Call

	April 18	June 13	Increase
Loans . . .	$128,147,000	$132,914,000	$4,767,000
Deposits . .	155,103,000	164,625,000	9,522,000
Reserves . .	31,753,000	35,008,000	3,255,000
Cash re- sources . .	42,405,000	47,425,000	5,020,000

Of the large increase in deposits, amounting to $9,522,000, $1,280,000 were savings deposits and $8,242,000 were commercial. The latter is due partially to the primary school fund reflected in the deposits of the state treasurer, which formerly have been dispersed in May, but in the future will not be dispersed until July.

CORPORATE ADMINISTRATION OF ESTATES

At the very time that the progressive forces in the republican party were making the third-term campaign for Theodore Roosevelt, the individual trustee of the estate of the late Roscoe Conkling, who made the great third-term fight for General Grant, was being held in New York City as an embezzler of the funds of the estate. In the days when Senator Conkling was at his zenith in political power, corporate trusteeship had not been developed as it is known at the present time. It is inconceivable that a man of Senator Conkling's great ability would have left his estate to be cared for by private individuals if there had been available well organized trust companies such as exist to-day, with trained men to look after such matters. It was merely by accident in overhearing a telephone message which led to the suspicion that all of the funds of the Conkling estate were not being accounted for. Investigation set upon foot showed that there had been systematic embezzlement of the funds for at least the past five years. A further examination of the records back of that period may disclose other shortages and instances of mismanagement. Had it been possible for Senator Conkling to have placed his affairs in the hands of a competent trust company there would have been no embezzlement, no mismanagement, and a degree of responsibility and accountability never attainable in the case of an individual administrator. There is a lesson to be found in this little incident which up-to-date trust companies will not be slow in presenting to their prospective clients.

BACK TO THE SOIL AND HAPPY

Many who have been disposed to risk a change from city to country life have been deterred by the fact that their training and experience have been entirely in the direction of business, and they fear they cannot adapt themselves to new conditions or ever really learn a new and wholly different occupation. Such will find interesting the story of a woman in the Farm Journal who, with her husband, tried the experiment. He was a well-to-do merchant in a large city, and failed, saving only $750 from the wreck. They found near by an old, run-down farm of 110 acres, which they bought at $36 per acre, making a small cash payment. About half of it was good, level land, the rest trees and brush. They began operations at once, learning how from neighbors, and the first year cut off cord wood enough to pay half the mortgage, and made a good profit on chickens. They then began buying thin cattle and grazing them fat, which paid well, and also raised hay and grain. Every year as they learned more they did better. Gradually they bought more brush land, and cleared it, and the wife says that while the work has been hard, "we have lived on the fat of the land; home-cured hams and sausages, fried chicken, roast turkey, fresh vegetables, delicious fruit and plenty of cream, butter and eggs." The summing up of her experience is worth giving, as it may be of value to some who are contemplating a similar experiment. She says:

"In the city Jack used to come home from his store 'spick and span,' but worried and jaded. Now he comes in from a tremendous day in the field, in overalls and work shirt, grimy, sweaty, but happy and smiling. It's the 'lure of the wild,' he says; and I am sure that a farmer may be as independent as a king, and more secure in every way.

"Was I happy, too? I am ashamed to confess it, I was not; foolish woman that I was. During those days of boundless blue sky and sunshine, of prairie breeze and splendid health and prosperity I grieved and grieved. How I missed the social pleasures of the city, the teas, the receptions, the parties, my literary club! I was, at times, rebellious and bitter. I hated the loneliness and the drudgery. I would cry and beg Jack to take me back to my beloved city.

"Just one more year on the farm,' he would promise.

"Thirteen years have passed. At last we can go back! The farm is clear; it is well stocked with cattle and horses, and we have enough cash in bank to buy us a good home in the city. I can hardly realize it.

"But we are not going back!"

EASY BANKING UNDER NATIONAL SYSTEM

The recent change in the national banking act which permits national institutions to organize in communities of 3,000 inhabitants or less, with a capital as low as $25,000, seems to have been instrumental in increasing the difficulty of the comptroller of the currency in compelling strict compliance with the provisions of the law. This is on account of the increased number of national banks since the new law went into effect. The present comptroller has shown marked efficiency and ability in performing his duty under the new order of things. He has just completed a new form for examiners' reports, with elaborate instructions regarding the details of examination in ascertaining and testing the different items of resources and liabilities. One violation of the law which has had a pernicious influence upon the affairs of the offenders is a disregard of the requirement against excessive loans. The bank examiners in making their reports are required to give the names of the borrowers, the amount of the loans, the value of the securities and the financial standing of the makers and endorsers. Overdrafts are classified as loans. This is a very important matter and should receive close attention. The only remedy open to the comptroller for a violation of this requirement is a proceeding to forfeit the charter of the offending institution. No doubt if this means were adopted it would have a deterrent effect upon those banks which are inclined to be careless in this most important matter. In view of the large number of national banks in existence at the present time it is very difficult to maintain an efficient system of control and supervision, which furnishes a strong argument for reforming the system. It is believed that if the banks themselves could maintain a collective or associated supervision, conditions would be improved somewhat. This would be one of the important functions of the local associations in districts proposed in the report of the National Monetary Commission, and embodied in the bill accompanying it for a National Reserve Association.

ASSOCIATION OF COMMERCE TAKES UP GOOD ROAD MOVEMENT

At the regular noon-day luncheon of the ways and means committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce held in the main dining-room of the La Salle Hotel on Wednesday of this week the subject of good roads was the principal topic discussed, the speakers being the Hon. Homer J. Tice, chairman of the state highway commission on good roads, and Wm. G. Edens, president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, and assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois. Mr. Tice talked on "Good Roads—Their Importance to Farmer and Land Owner," and Mr. Edens on "Co-operation, the Key to a Successful Good Roads Movement." There were present Illinois bankers, business men, representatives of the Illinois press and members of the good roads committees of various business organizations interested in this most important subject, and also representatives of automobile associations. There was a very large attendance to listen to the remarks of these most interesting speakers. Mr. Tice in his talk pointed out that the roads of the state are the means by which the farmer transports his produce to the various markets in which he disposes of it. If there are good roads over which he can do this the cost of transportation necessarily is less than if the roads are in bad condition, which is reflected in the decreased cost to the consumer, and the increased profit to the farmer. He pointed out that a great deal of money has been spent in Illinois for the construction of roads, but that the results obtained from such expenditure have not been commensurate with the amount of money expended. Ninety per cent of the freight of Illinois is hauled over the roads of the state. It therefore will be seen that it is highly important that these roads be in such a condition as best will facilitate the accomplishment of this work. Mr. Tice believes that for every dollar of money expended there should be given to the public one dollar's worth of road. He believes that roads should be built so that they will be serviceable for all seasons of the year, and not only one particular season, and that they should be constructed with such permanency that they will be good not only for the present time, but for all time. He is an enthusiastic advocate of state aid in the accomplishment of this project, believing that the state should bear the greater part of the cost and have absolute authority over the control of matters pertaining to the maintenance and construction of the roads; that a state highway commission is necessary, and that there should be in its employ men who are experienced in matters of this nature and thoroughly competent to discharge the duties of their positions. He believes that their tenure of office should be permanent, and that they should be absolutely free from any political affiliations. He believes in a uniform system of building and maintenance, and that it best can be accomplished by a centralization of authority. He believes that the needs of the state are sufficient to warrant the expenditure of from one and one-half millions to two millions per year in the matter of building serviceable roads; that this expense be taken care of by issuing bonds, and that the funds collected from automobile licenses be used in paying the interest on these bonds, as automobile owners as well as the farmers and general community profit by roads which are kept in good condition. He gave a number of statistics showing the increased cost of transporting the commodities of the farmers over roads which are not kept in good condition, as compared with transportation over roads which are kept up.

William G. Edens, in opening his talk, paid a compliment to S. E. Bradt, chairman of the good roads committee of the Illinois Bankers Association, for the very able report presented by that committee recently. The work of the committee covered about eight months' time, and the investigation of road conditions extended to every county in the state of Illinois. Mr. Edens told of the organization of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, of which he is the president, and of the purposes of the organization, and of the work which it expects to accomplish along these lines. He believes that certain stretches of road should be given attention first and improved, and that after this is accomplished the work should extend to other portions of the state where it is necessary. He also is in favor of using the automobile license fund for the maintenance and construction of the roads. He believes that the best way of succeeding in this laudable enterprise is to obtain the support of the farmers and land owners of the state, as the subject is one which vitally affects their interests. He is in favor of a state highway commission, and the appointment of engineers and experienced men in each county to look after the construction and maintenance of the roads, and also believes that their tenure of office should be permanent and that they should be free from political influences.

At the conclusion of Mr. Edens' remarks a resolution was offered and unanimously carried, which provides that the Association of Commerce appoint a committee on highway improvement, whose duty it shall be to represent the Chicago Association of Commerce in connection with the movement for good roads, and to co-operate with the committees of the various organizations throughout the state who also are interested in the movement.

Both speakers were very loudly applauded. Among the prominent out-of-town bankers who attended the meeting were Col. J. S. Aisthorpe of Cairo, B. F. Harris of Champaign, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, and S. E. Bradt of DeKalb, chairman of the committee on good roads of the Illinois Bankers Association.

CARROLL STATE BANK IN HYDE PARK

Rumor has it that there will be but one new state bank to be located at Fifty-third Street and Lake Avenue instead of two. John A. Carroll & Brother shortly will open as the Hyde Park Trust Company Bank, and the old Hyde Park private bank, owned and controlled by C. L. Norton, is expected to be merged with the new institution. When Saunders left Norton and encouraged Carroll & Brother to open a state institution, Norton also applied for a charter for a state bank. It looked for a short time like local war, but now it is said that Saunders has been eliminated entirely from the new institution, and that Norton will turn over the going business of his concern, which has been cut down under the private bank agitation to not more than $250,000. The bank is expected to open about July 15th. The officers and directors have not been chosen yet.

H. B. Craddick on Imaginative Side of Banking

Imagination is the inverse of analysis. It is the putting together of things, not their separation into parts. It is the relating of one thought or object to another and different one. It is the relating of separate elements or objects. It is dual in nature, manifesting itself in two ways—in range and intensity.

We have viewed to-day a wonder in engineering construction. As we looked over that great agricultural project, did your mind take you in a twinkling to the head waters and source of the Belle Fourche River? If so, that was range and your mind traveled hundreds of miles in an instant.

Or did you see these broad acres under cultivation, the farmer at work, harvesting, marketing, buying, spending, prospering? If so that was intensity.

Imagination then, is the ability of the individual, upon seeing or thinking of an object to build around that object its probable environment, to realize what produced it and what it will produce.

In this connection we might consider various new forms of checks, drafts, certificates, or combinations of these, which have been invented, but very few of which have ever come into common use. To invent them was one thing, to popularize them is an entirely different problem.

The imaginative mind—one able to see business possibilities, to foresee business to be produced, to see a way of reaching that business, and with ability to reach it—is highly essential to successful banking. Advertising is imagination in action, and that is why advertising has come to be also highly essential to banking.

And the degree of force and effect of any given piece of advertising depends upon the forceful, effective imaginative power of the mind which produced it.

It has been my observation that bankers are amply able to analyze the conditions which surround their local institution. Very often, however, they fail to grasp the possibilities and are unable to imagine correctly the effect of certain publicity upon the public mind. His viewpoint is too often analytical. He runs to figures.

Possessing qualities of analysis, it is quite natural, for instance, that he should wish to lay stress in his publicity upon the amount of the capital stock, surplus, total resources in dollars and cents. He also insists on showing total deposits in large black figures.

Advertising expert tells the South Dakota bankers they sometimes stick too closely to analysis, figures and precedent, rather than to improving service and security

Are figures impressive? Not unless one possesses ability and the inclination to analyze. How many people in your community have any real conception of one million dollars expressed in figures and decimal points? Very few.

It takes scant analysis to determine what your bank has to offer the depositor. Just two things—security and service.

Security, of course, is of first importance. Without security there can be no service. The nature of your security should be analyzed for the public. If you can analyze it in words, instead of rows of figures, the public can understand. The national and state laws are pretty well taking care of the way the banks shall be conducted from the standpoint of security, and the public has faith in these laws. The fact that your bank is the oldest or that you have the largest capital or largest deposits of any bank in your community is really of less importance to the individual than that your bank is conducted honestly, courteously, systematically and according to the law. If this were not so the big banks would have all the business, which we know they have not.

But Bank Service—that is a host in itself. It begins with security, its end is not yet known, nor do we want to know it.

The problems of bank service—how to reach the people, how to serve them better, more conveniently, making of banking ordinary business transactions and which it is, how to improve present methods, facilities and equipment, and to extend the usefulness of the bank within the reach of every individual in the community—these are some of the things the imagination may dwell upon with profit to the banker who can devise such ways and means.

Give your imagination full play. Put yourself on the other side of the counter, and try to imagine the viewpoint of the man on the outside. Do this before preparing your advertising if you would have your advertising efficient.

Then keep in mind always that it is not the bank connection which is important, but the reason for the bank connection.

This is the first essential to successful banking publicity. When once a banker gets a firm hold on this fundamental fact, and is able to apply it in its highest efficiency, he will be able to wield his advertising in the most profitable manner.

I have often wondered why the association and group meetings of bankers have failed to take an interest in business producing methods through talks and discussions. There is a saying that, "the best of us have a good deal to learn from the rest of us," and I know of no place where you bankers could exchange ideas and experiences to greater profit than in these gatherings. Not only could you profit from ideas and information from each other, but you could also protect yourselves from the numerous unprofitable advertising schemes being offered throughout the country.

In a few instances, the group meetings have included some phase of advertising in their discussions. The difficulty seems to be to get the banker to tell what he knows to his fellow banker.

Now this was solved cleverly, perhaps unwittingly, in a Wisconsin group last fall. The subject chosen for discussion was "Calendars as Advertising." That sounds quite commonplace, yet nearly every banker present aired his views on calendars as advertising and the discussion brought out some very interesting experiences. The discussion was precipitated by presenting a resolution: "Resolved that the banks of this group discontinue the use of calendars as a method of advertising." Some one imagined, and imagined correctly, that the bankers who would not talk calendars would take sides and discuss a resolution.

I think it is unnecessary to point out to you the very rapid progress and evolution banking publicity has undergone during the past twenty years. But perhaps the following letter will bring out better than I could otherwise illustrate the attitude of bankers in years gone by toward the most ordinary publicity. The letter was written to a business counselor in the early eighties by an eastern city bank and shows the then existing desire to reach out for business but a lack of knowledge of how to proceed in face of seeming obstacles:

"We want more deposits. Specifically, we want the accounts of interior banks. It must not be known that we want this business, or we never can get it. The slightest effort to obtain it—in fact, almost any solicitation of it—would imply that we are not the proper persons to receive it. It is the old dignified conservatives, who do not seem to care for deposits, who get them; the active, pushing house is apt to be viewed with suspicion. Now, conditioned on the fact that we cannot ask for this business, and will not permit it to be known that we want it, will you tell us how we can secure it?"

It is refreshing to compare the condition here set forth with the present day methods of city banks.

Can you imagine a city banker to-day wanting your business and undertaking to secure it without permitting you to sense his intentions? Wouldn't you, in fact, be suspicious of the bank who used secretive methods to obtain your account?

As I said previously, advertising is imagination in action. Or, it may be said to be a mirror, in which is reflected the individual or organization back of it. No small amount of the advertising as done by banks is wasted because there is a failure to give a true reflection of the bank, its security, service, and the personality of the men who, in reality, are the bank.

A safe rule to observe is that: Any means of securing a customer that brings the individual to the bank and the teller's window with the first deposit is highly desirable. Accounts that are opened by agents in the homes or outside the bank seldom develop into desirable ones.

If you would determine conclusively why you should advertise and what you should advertise, present this question for discussion to your directors and associates. Let your conclusions be frank and sincere.

What possible reasons are there why persons should pass all the other banks in our city, and come to this bank with their business?

When you find those reasons, it is only necessary to convince others that your reasons are just and true, to draw business within your doors.

On how to convince people, I wish to quote, in conclusion, from an address of Abraham Lincoln before the Washington Society at Springfield in February, 1842:

"When the conduct of men is designed to be influenced, persuasion, kind, unassuming persuasion, should ever be adopted. It is an old and true maxim 'that a drop of honey catches more flies than a gallon of gall.' So with men. If you would win a man to your cause, first convince him that you are his sincere friend. Therein is a drop of honey that catches his heart, which, say what he will, is the great highroad to his reason, and which, when once gained, you will find but little trouble in convincing his judgment of the justice of your cause if indeed that cause be really a just one. On the contrary, assume to dictate to his judgment, or to command his action, or to mark him as one to be shunned or despised, and he will retreat within himself, close all the avenues to his head and his heart: and though your cause be naked truth itself, transformed to the heaviest lance, harder than steel, and sharper than steel can be made, and though you throw it with more than herculean force and precision, you shall be no more able to pierce him than to penetrate the hard shell of a tortoise with a rye straw. Such is man, and so must he be understood by those who would lead him, even to his own best interests."

F. F. JOHNSON AT IDAHO CONVENTION

F. F. Johnson, cashier of the Boise City National Bank, delivered a very interesting as well as practical address on the subjects of cost and credit accounting at the Idaho convention last week. Mr. Johnson stated that frequently a bank carries an account on its books at a loss to itself. He suggested that a little study and attention to this account often has the effect of enabling the bank to carry it at a profit rather than a loss. He illustrated his remarks by a number of pertinent examples. He strongly urged the urgent necessity of keeping a reliable system of credit information. He suggested that in loaning to corporations it is very advisable to ascertain whether or not the officers signing the notes have the requisite authority; that when loaning against collateral security it also is advisable either to have the proper form of collateral note, or preferably a collateral agreement.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

E. F. Swinney, president of the First National of Kansas City, who has just returned from the East, brings encouraging reports to the bankers and farmers of the Central West. "I firmly believe," said Mr. Swinney, "that this is going to be a big year for western people. Conditions are right in all particulars and especially for the farmers. And when our farmers are prosperous everybody else in this locality is bound to feel the effect. Already many stock men are arranging to market cattle and prices are so high that there is a good profit in the business. We have plenty of money here in the wheat country to handle our crops and it seems to be up to the railroads and harvest hands to do the rest. One does not hear any complaint among the people of the agricultural districts, which is a most unusual sign of contentment. Whatever happens in the East, the West is happy over the outlook."

Banks Respond to Call

The last call of the national banks found a general decrease in deposits in most of the cities of the Central West, due, it is said by well posted financiers, to the withdrawals among farmers to harvest and market their wheat. Loans as a general thing have increased on account of demands from the small country banks for money to move and handle crops. Cattle feeders in Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma are handling large supplies of stock, as the grass is excellent and conditions of the market favorable for high prices. The general financial outlook is very encouraging, as there has been plenty of rain and all growing crops are in good shape.

Daring Bank Robberies

Following closely upon the recent epidemic of bank robberies in Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas, have come several reports of renewed activity of bank bandits in several Oklahoma towns. The most successful of these latter raids was that in which $2,850 was taken from the First State Bank of Bokchito, Okla., early in the morning of June 21st. Bokchito is not far from Durant. Five men did the job, one man remaining in the building to blow the safe while his confederates stood guard outside at various points of vantage. For three hours the man inside the bank worked and the guards held the citizens at bay. When every dollar and bill in the bank had been secured, the gang got away. At Ingersoll, Okla., two nights before the Bokchito robbery, the outside doors of the Bank of Ingersoll were blown down, but the noise awakened citizens who flocked to the bank in such numbers that the robbers made a hasty flight. A similar unproductive attempt was made on the bank at Foyil, Okla., early in the morning of June 22d. Robbers blew down a portion of the rear wall of the bank building but before they could reach the safe they were frightened off. In none of the cases have suspects been captured.

Central West Notes

When the Dallas, Texas, chamber of commerce made its recent tour of western Texas to stimulate trade and business generally in behalf of that city, the Dallas bankers who accompanied the party were R. E. Gahagan, J. D. Gillispie and M. H. Hardie.

The Bankers Trust Company of New York purchased the $1,000,000 bond issue of the Tulsa, Okla., street car company. The bonds draw 5 per cent interest and run for twenty years.

M. C. Parrish, for the past four years president of the Alto State Bank of Alto, Texas, has been elected active vice-president of the First National of Jacksonville, Texas.

Another payment is to be made to the depositors of the defunct Citizens and Farmers State Bank of Arkansas City, Kan., by order of the district court. A final settlement has been agreed upon whereby William A. Wilson, of Kansas City, president of the institution, will turn over $14,000 in cash and a receiver's certificate for $887, which amount he had on deposit at the time of the failure. In return for this the receiver is to assign to Mr. Wilson 180 shares in the Arkansas City Ice and Cold Storage Company.

The St. Joseph, Mo., Bankers Club was organized last week with a large membership of officers and stockholders of all the city banks. At the organization meeting, A. O. Wilson of St. Louis was the guest of honor. J. E. Combs was chairman of the committee on organization and W. S. McLucas was secretary.

By the arrest of two men in Wichita, Kan., last week, the authorities believe that they have captured part of the gang of robbers who dynamited the First State Bank of Tulsa, Okla., a year ago and secured $2,300. The prisoners have not been positively identified.

Col. James H. McCord, of St. Joseph, Mo., has been elected a director of the St. Joseph and Grand Island Railway Company. G. G. Lacy, of St. Joseph, is president of the corporation.

M. L. Turner, president of the Western National of Oklahoma City, and one of the receivers of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad, has gone East on business connected with the receivership.

D. H. Myers, president of the First National of Clay Center, Kan., has been spending several weeks at Excelsior Springs, Mo. He stopped in Kansas City last week on his way to his home.

Among the out-of-town bankers who visited Kansas City's financial district last week were: J. W. Wilcoxson, Carrollton, Mo.; J. E. Deacy, Lawson, Mo.; William B. Mohr, El Reno, Okla.; I. K. Nakidmen, Salisaw, Okla.; T. W. Foster, Burlington, Kan.; J. R. Mulvane, Topeka, Kan.; G. H. Woodhouse, Sharon Springs, Kan.; and V. K. Hoover, Russell, Kan.

The treasurer of Doniphan county, Kan., through the Fidelity Trust Co. of Kansas City, Mo., will on July 1st redeem all its outstanding bonds, amounting to $47,000, issued 20 years ago for 30 years with option of payment in 1912.

New Banking Bill for North Carolina

The tremendous expansion in banking that has taken place in the past few years has resulted in the necessity of conserving the best interest of our several institutions and depositors. To do this, there is no better way than to have suitable laws, to be worthy, and to obtain the entire confidence of the public. While the record of our banks is one to be proud of, and just here I will state: we have had but one failure within the past year, and in that case the depositors probably will not lose anything, yet the laws that have served our purpose no longer keep pace with the great strides made by our people. We must adopt methods that look to greater advancement, progress and security, and form our laws to more nearly forestall any irregularities in the future. We propose to have some good bill to present to the next legislature which you and the people have had ample time to consider.

From the semi-public nature of banking, we are the servants of the public, in a way. The people are demanding more knowledge of corporations, and we should encourage legislation that will strengthen public confidence.

At your last session, upon the recommendation of your retiring president, a committee was appointed to prepare a bill, revising our state banking laws, and submit it to this convention, for its consideration. This committee, after laboring earnestly and conscientiously, devoting a great deal of time and study, submits to you its report, and asks your thoughtful consideration. How well it has performed its work is now for you to judge. This report recommends the inauguration of a "State Banking Department," under the supervision of the corporation commission, with the management vested in a capable superintendent of banks. He is assisted by three examiners, and two examinations a year required of every state bank. There are a great many other valuable recommendations, such as:

Defining the duties of directors.

Method of establishing new banks.

A more definite and expeditious way of handling closed or liquidated banks.

Restrictions of loans and discounts.

Requirements of capital, and many other changes of importance. Before leaving the subject, I want to commend to you this committee's work, and especially that of Col. Bruton, the chairman of the legislative committee, whom we have worked overtime.

The past year has been one of great business activity, with satisfactory results, and blessings have showered us in all lines of business in increased measure. Confidence is re-established, and progress guided by courage is our watchword. "All is well," yet we are recreant to our duty, if we do not aid in improving, so far as we can, our clumsy national financial system. Our nation should have the best financial system of the world. The other countries sit at our feet in all the other lines, yet in our financial system we are far behind the other great nations. Let us use our good influence for some national currency system

President J. C. Braswell, at Morehead City convention, commends work of legislative committee. Says banking is of semi-public nature and should be under supervision and inspection.

Favors creation of state banking department. Growth of the South that will maintain the present state of confidence and reduce the recurrence of panics to a minimum.

should encourage a closer co-operation with the farmers, for whatever benefits the farm reaches directly to the bank, and following the action of many states, I would recommend the appointment of a standing committee of "Agricultural Development and Education," whose duties will be similar to those of a like committee of the American Bankers Association. In order that half of our executive committee may be old members, and be more in touch with the work of the association, I would recommend a change in the by-laws, beginning this session with the election of one half of the committee for a term of one year, and one half to serve two years.

In order that we may advance our foreign trade, and do as the other greater nations, we should endorse the measure now before congress for the acquisition of premises for our diplomatic establishments. We should also encourage the passage of the one cent postage on usual letters.

The South is being recognized as the nation's greatest possession. Its wonderful resources and boundless fields for investment are of world-wide fame, and North Carolina is taking the lead among her sister states.

At no time in the history of banking have our banks been in better condition than at present. In one year the deposits have increased 15 per cent and resources 12 per cent. Our last year's cotton crop was the largest we have ever produced and our farms are raising more home supplies, which produce a more healthy condition and should be encouraged by the banks. From 1910 to 1911 the property valuation of the state increased 20 per cent.

There has been a most wonderful growth in the advancement of North Carolina, which a comparison of the last decade will show. Increase in number of banks 296, from 153 to 449. Bank deposits have increased 330 per cent, from 19 millions to 84 millions. Bank resources have increased 280 per cent, from 34 millions to 131 millions. In 1899 North Carolina stood tenth in the value of manufactured cotton product, fourth in the number of establishments, tenth in number of producing spindles. In 1910 we stood first in number of establishments, second in value of cotton products, third in number of producing spindles. North Carolina has increased in ten years 15.38 per cent in population. Cotton seed products have increased 166 per cent in value. Value of farm property has increased 130 per cent, and in about this proportion in all our industries and products. No state has made greater educational development than our own in the last decade, with an increase in the attendance of the rural schools of 41 per cent. School property has more than trebled, and with the introduction of farm life schools we may expect greater benefits to the agriculturist, and while in 1900 our position was low in comparison with many other states, yet under the leadership of our great educators, it has made such rapid strides that to-day its methods rank with any in the Union.

I will ever feel gratified for the honor, kindness, courtesy and confidence shown me and will hold priceless the friendships made in my association with you as your president.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Deposits in Minneapolis at the last call total $103,646,272, or $12,074,661 more than last year at the same time. From April to June, a time when bank deposits are expected to decline, the total remained practically stationary, at $103,646,272.36 against $103,690,834.79. The outlook for a good crop and the buying that has started made the figures stand up to such a big sum. In the April call the deposits were 103,696,835. Commercial bank deposits are $81,087,716, as compared with $82,692,601 in April and $69,683,272 a year ago. The savings banks that report on call showed $20,010,906, which is $1,168,886 more than a year ago and $220,177 less than in April. Loans and discounts totaled $64,099,050, as against $62,951,472 in April and $57,105,559 a year ago.

Minnesota Banker on Steamer Quincy

Loaded to the guards with Minnesota bankers and their families, say the press reports, the steamer Quincy sank in the Keokuk locks, Mississippi river. Names of the bankers are missing. The boat listed before it sank, as all boats should do. The trouble was, that it caught one side on the walls of the lock and when the water was let out it hung trembling in every limb, then, listing, it sank.

St. Paul Banks

Comment in the St. Paul Pioneer Press on the last call of the comptroller of the currency follows: "The call of the national banks during the week shows deposits close to $50,000,000 for seven St. Paul national banks, and well over $100,000,000 for Minneapolis. The seven national banks in St. Paul reported deposits of $44,509,197, and all Minneapolis banks reported deposits of $103,646,272. These figures do not include the state or private banks in St. Paul, and the total will be swelled by a considerable amount, as some of the smaller banks are large enough to enter the national class if they cared to do so. The loans are $36,616,307 and reserves, $15,510,157. The amount of discounts are at a substantial figure in St. Paul. The national banks show money in the Twin Cities is liberal for all purposes to which it may be called. While it is still several months from crop-moving time, the presence of such liberal supplies of funds will do much to prevent any scarcity in the fall, as it gives the Northwest an excellent start on the project."

Those Who Attended North Dakota Convention

North Dakota's crop prospects pleased Minneapolis bankers who attended the state bankers convention at Jamestown a week ago. In the party were: E. P. Wells and O. M. Corwin, Wells & Dickey Company; P. G. Leeman, First National; J. S. Pomeroy, Security National; Joseph Chapman, Jr., and R. S. MacGregor, Northwestern National; E. J. Grimes, Minnesota Loan and Trust Company; Arthur R. Rogers and Geo. B. Lane. "Everything looks good in North Dakota," said Mr. Pomeroy. "The crops are coming along splendidly, every business man is hopeful and the outlook is for heavy fall business."

Increase Capital

The Minneapolis State has voted to increase its capital from $25,000 to $50,000 and surplus from $4,500 to $10,000. This will be paid in by July 1st, according to President A. W. Harper. The bank was organized three and one-half years ago to serve one of the outside business districts, three miles from the center of town.

At the South Dakota Convention

Several St. Paul and Minneapolis bankers attended the South Dakota convention at Belle Fourche, taking the special train at Huron. The party comprised Theodore Wold, president Scandinavian-American National; Frank J. Mulcahy, Minnesota Loan and Trust Company; Lyman E. Wakefield, Wells & Dickey Company; P. G. Leeman, assistant cashier First National; E. J. Grimes, Minneapolis Trust Company; J. S. Pomeroy, cashier Security National; R. S. MacGregor, assistant cashier Northwestern National; J. W. Wheeler, Capital Trust Company, St. Paul, and H. A. Oace, Merchants National, St. Paul.

Banking Notes

Permanent improvement revolving fund bonds, $325,000, have been sold by the Minneapolis council committee to E. H. Rollins & Sons and the Allerton, Greene & King Company, Chicago, on joint bid of $317,395. The bonds are payable June 1, 1942, and pay 4 per cent.

The Minneapolis Threshing Machine Company, of which F. E. Kenaston, well known banker, is head, has amended its incorporation articles to provide for increase of capital from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000. The company will double its capacity.

Perry Harrison has returned to his desk at the Security National bank after an Eastern trip begun in May. He drove 2,000 miles by automobile with himself at the wheel.

Depositors of the State Bank of Commerce, Winnebago, Minn., have appointed a committee to get funds to offer as a reward for the return of the missing vice-president, H. W. Parker. It was decided at a meeting to employ counsel to look after their interests. Kelsey Chase, bank examiner for the state, will appoint a receiver.

J. C. White, vice-president of the First National, Mabel, Minn., has bought two apartment buildings in Minneapolis for $22,000.

In the Verndale Sun the First National of Verndale, Minn., described the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association members on a trade trip to that city, extending to Winnipeg, as "A natty, nobby, nifty, thrifty throng from Minnesota's magnificent metropolis." One of the shining members of the excursion was George F. Orde, vice-president of the First National, Minneapolis.

The Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce has voted to provide a fund of about $16,500 a year by $30 individual assessments on members to

President Chas. A. McLean to the Washington Bankers

Tells of improving conditions in Northwest. Strong for state supervision of banking as only way to retain public confidence and insure safety. Boosts agricultural and vocational education. The organization

The year 1911 was, on the whole, one of prosperity to the banking interests of this state, although the depression existing during 1910 still persisted, and, in fact, it cannot be truly said that business conditions, though improving, are yet normal. This can be accounted for more by the unprecedented prosperity of the people in the Pacific Northwest during the last decade than by actual existing conditions. Indeed, peace and plenty reigned throughout the state, and our banks, under wise management and careful supervision, were never in better condition.

For the past two years conservative methods have been pursued, with the result that larger reserves are held by the banks of our association than ever before at this season of the year. The glowing promise of immense crops of fruits and cereals will prove the wisdom of this course, and our own banks should be able to finance the harvesting and marketing of these crops, thus keeping within the state this natural increase of wealth. At the same time, it is pleasing to note that the lumber market, which has been dull, now shows a growing demand, and that a revival is being felt in the mining industry.

The banker is interested in all legislation, but he is vitally interested in legislation affecting the banking interests. This year new lawmakers will be elected to go to Olympia to legislate for the people of this state, and it devolves upon the banker, with all other good citizens, to see that proper men are sent; men of character and high purpose; men who are willing to study the bills proposed and sift the good from the bad. To such men our legislative committee can go with honest measures and get an honest hearing, and to such we can safely trust the passing of a banking law that will insure protection to the customer as well as the stockholder, and be the means of raising still higher the present high standard of banking.

I believe in the most careful supervision by both state and national examiners of banks, and that the depositors of every bank deserve the best protection possible against dishonest and incompetent bankers. That protection must necessarily lie in adequate capital, with ample surplus, reasonably large reserves and good, live assets. The confidence of the public can only be retained by these qualifications, with the addition of capable and honest management. To protect well managed banks and their customers the legislature of this state is in duty bound to pass a stringent banking law. Now is the time to begin the campaign by inducing conscientious men to stand in the primaries.

Last year at Wenatchee a committee was appointed consisting of Messrs. J. W. Clise, W. D. Vincent, H. N. Gilbert, George P.

Wiley and E. S. Burgan. This committee was called the Washington State Bankers Association committee on agricultural and vocational education, and is composed of five as able and representative men as we have in our association. They gave a great deal of their time to their duties, and after a careful investigation of conditions, asked for funds to further their work. Your executive council, with the advice of several of the leading bankers of this association, decided to ask for a voluntary contribution from our members to provide the necessary funds. Many bankers, fearing an unwise precedent might be established, and others not understanding the objects to be accomplished, hesitated to make their contribution, so it was thought advisable to postpone action until the meeting of this convention. This afternoon you will hear the report of the committee, and I am sure the work of these able men will be unanimously commended, and that you will provide ample means for its further prosecution.

The state of Washington should produce all the eggs, poultry, ham, mutton and beef consumed within it, and have a surplus to export as well. Beef cattle and sheep produce hides and wool, that in turn demand tanneries and woolen mills employing thousands of men, thus creating a home market for the other products of our farms. If our agricultural committee can in any way stimulate an interest that will increase our production of cattle, hogs and sheep, or be the means of inducing immigrants to locate on our logged off lands; if they can in any way help to demonstrate to our prosperous farmers plans and systems by which the productiveness of our soil can be retained and increased, if they can assist in improving our system of practical education, then no reasonable sum is too large for this association of banks to contribute to their aid. The return will be sure and incalculable.

The Panama Canal is fast being rushed to completion, and in the course of a few months ships will be sailing through it. What its effect will be on our state it is impossible to predict. That it will have an effect on conditions in the Northwest is certain, and it is up to the banker to carefully watch for the changes which very soon surely will be felt. On the whole, I believe we cannot conceive of the immense benefits that will be derived through the stimulus given to trade on the Pacific Coast by this wonderful achievement. The state of Washington, with its untold natural resources, its unexcelled climatic conditions, is on the threshold of an era of further development. The banker must necessarily play a great part in its future, and by the conservative management of his own business, help to make the prosperity that is coming lasting and sure.

An effort has been made during the past year to increase the membership from this state in the American Bankers Association to three hundred, which will entitle us to two members in the executive council of that organization. I trust that during this convention special efforts will be made to get the required number. An additional member on the executive council will be a great benefit to all, and every owner of the little metal sign of the American Bankers Association gets the best kind of insurance for the dues paid. Our own association shows a satisfactory increase during the past year.

It is indeed an honor to be president of this association; one which I have highly appreciated, and I beg to tender my thanks to the officers and members of the several committees for their faithful and courteous co-operation, and especially to your secretary, P. C. Kauffman, with whom it is a pleasure to be associated. His reputation is now national, and without doubt the success of the Washington State Bankers Association is principally due to his untiring efforts on its behalf.

AT THE TACOMA-OLYMPIA CONVENTION

Two of the speakers at the convention of the Washington Bankers Association held in Tacoma and Olympia on June 27th, 28th and 29th were Warren O. Dow, secretary of the Wenatchee Commercial Club, and F. F. Nalder, director of education, Washington State Reformatory, Monroe, the latter speaking on "Agriculture in Washington as a Field of Opportunity for Young Men," and the former on "Agriculture and the Nation." In speaking of the urgent need of agricultural education, Mr. Dow said in part:

"Our public schools should be made better to serve the needs of the people. Curricula should be so formulated that localities could adjust their courses to their needs. They should be made to serve the ninety-five per cent who do not go to college, rather than the five per cent who do go there. The universities should be dominated by the needs of the secondary schools, which in turn are dominated by the needs of the people, rather than the secondary schools dominated by the universities. If our educational system could be worked out along this practical line, and be under the guidance and inspiration of big men, well paid, all honest labor would be dignified. Each member of society would understand the other. Each would have more respect for the other. Neither would consider that his profession had a monopoly upon importance, honor and dignity. Class hatred would in a large measure be eliminated. Greater reconciliation could be effected between labor and capital. Many of our now troubling problems would disappear. It is foolish for us to endeavor to legislate our evils away, without at the same time educating them away. Most of our troubles are troubles through misunderstanding, inability to sympathize and see from the other man's viewpoint. If we inculcate in our schools a system broad and practical, where vocation becomes a matter of natural choice, where many professions are taught under the same roof and treated with the same dignity, where manual training, agriculture, domestic science, classical learning, all by contact learn to sympathize with the other, the foundation for harmonious life and national strength would be laid. Much of poverty and misery would cease. The signal failures of so-called university and college-bred men would be reduced to a minimum, for thus the right man naturally would find the right place, and contentment and efficiency would be the result."

Mr. Nalder strongly urged the adoption of agriculture as a calling, stating that the opportunities for independence presented by it are abundant. He said in part:

"Industrial conditions and tendencies are putting a premium on agriculture as a calling for young men and women. The varied agricultural resources of the state of Washington make it a peculiarly attractive field for young men. Agricultural knowledge must be promoted as an educational propaganda. In western Washington the one thing that capital can do, i. e., put deforested areas in such condition as to make them accessible to ambitious young farmers, should be done as a capitalistic enterprise. Viewed from every standpoint, agriculture presents the best field for a young man to go into in the hope of becoming financially independent. You bankers of the state, as stewards of the economic surplus of the people, cannot do better than to divert some of your capital, with its powerful influence, toward thus enhancing the agricultural wealth of Washington."

Mr. Nalder also favors the teaching of agricultural subjects in the various state institutions of learning, and stated that such subjects are taught in the state reformatory of which he is the educational director.

Washington Convention

Tacoma, Wash., June 28.—The bankers of the state of Washington have just concluded a two days' session of their seventeenth annual convention; the third day's session will be held to-morrow. Headquarters of the convention were at the Hotel Tacoma. The business sessions of the convention were held in the city of Tacoma Thursday morning and afternoon, and the final session will be held to-morrow morning. To-day was given over entirely to the entertainment of delegates and visitors, who were the guests of the bankers of Olympia. The steamer "Nesqually" was chartered for the occasion, and left the municipal dock, Tacoma, giving the party a most delightful ride on Puget Sound to Olympia, where a reception was tendered them in the governor's mansion, and later a real "Old Fashioned Picnic" at Priest Point Park, the party returning to Tacoma by the "Nesqually" in the evening. The entertainment features were arranged for by a committee of the Tacoma Clearing House Association and included a dinner and dance at the beautiful club house of the Tacoma Golf and Country Club at American Lake. To-morrow afternoon there will be a golf contest at the Tacoma Country Club. On Thursday, June 27th, the convention was called to order promptly at ten o'clock in the beautiful assembly hall of the Tacoma Commercial Club. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Mayor W. W. Seymour of Tacoma and Charles E. Brower, president of the Tacoma Clearing House Association. The response was made by Edwin T. Coman, president of the Exchange National Bank, Spokane, after which President Charles E. McLean delivered his annual address, and was followed by reports of officers and of committees, and the appointment of new committees. The convention then adjourned for luncheon. In the afternoon a report was heard from the committee on credentials. The following delivered addresses at this session: Hon. John Perrin, chairman of the board, Fletcher-American National, Indianapolis, and a member of the currency commission of the A. B. A., on "Currency Reform—the National Reserve Association;" Warren O. Dow, principal of the Wenatchee High School, on "Agriculture and the Nation;" Hon. H. B. Dewey, superintendent of public instruction, Olympia; F. F. Nalder, director of education, Washington State Reformatory, on "Agriculture in Washington as a Field of Opportunity for Young Men." To-morrow morning reports of the prize essay contest will be announced. There will be an address on "The American Institute of Banking; Its Purposes and Work," by J. W. Bradley of Spokane, vice-president of the American Institute of Banking, and one on "Bank Publicity" by F. W. Ellsworth, publicity manager of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York City. There will be remarks by visitors, reports of committees, election of officers, installation of the new president, and the selection of seven delegates and alternates to the next annual convention of the American Bankers Association to be held at Detroit the week of September 9th. The greater portion of the program of Thursday afternoon was devoted to agricultural and vocational subjects. The railroad companies agreed to extend the time limit on tickets to July 6th, so as to enable the delegates to remain over in Tacoma and attend the festivities of the Montamara Festo, Tacoma's great carnival of nations, which will open Sunday, June 30th, with a grand open air concert in Tacoma's famous stadium, given by the Arion Club of Victoria and the Orpheus Club of Tacoma, the two leading musical organizations of the Pacific Northwest, and continue with spectacular parades and entertainments.

The Kenney State Bank of Kenney, Austin county, Texas, has been incorporated by Charles Ebert, I. Artmann, John Stoves and others. Another new Texas bank is the Farmers State Bank of Clarendon, Donley county, with $50,000 capital. Its incorporators are: T. J. Cothran, J. A. Barnett, George B. Bugbee and others.

The First State Bank and Trust Company of Abilene, Texas, has filed a charter amendment increasing its capital stock from $55,000 to $100,000.

J. W. Bradley, of the Old National, Spokane, and Vice-President A. I. B., tells Washington bankers of the hopes and aims of the big organization.

Address will inspire interest in the training of skilled bankers by the educational method

As an officer of the American Institute of Banking I wish to thank you, Mr. President, and your executive council for your action in admitting delegates from our chapters to the conventions of the Washington Bankers Association. I am sure that many mutual advantages will result therefrom. I also desire to express our appreciation of your interest and generosity in conducting the prize essay contests of the last two years and of your liberal support given to the officers of our chapters. Such manifestations of your regard for the work of the institute has done much to instill ambition and encourage greater individual effort among our members in the acquisition of practical banking knowledge.

I believe you are all quite familiar with the history of the American Institute of Banking so I will but briefly review it. A little more than twelve years ago the bankers of this country came to realize that the world had entered an age of specialists. Every vocation, profession or trade was demanding experts—men specially or scientifically trained for a particular calling.

Vocational education began to attract the large amount of thought and attention that it has since received. Schools came into existence for the teaching of arts and crafts of many descriptions which it had been previously supposed could not be taught in schools. Educators and practical men discovered that the theory and technicalities of many professions and trades could be learned from books, thus saving the enormous amount of time consumed under the apprenticeship system.

In the banking world, however, no such developments were taking place. There were but two or three recognized schools of finance in the country and they were entirely beyond the reach of the army of American bank clerks. Conservative old bankers contended that their business could not be taught in schools but must be learned as they had learned it, by a lifetime of experience. The fact remained, however, that to keep pace with the rapid strides of industry and commerce men must be trained to meet the advancing requirements of the banker.

It was evident that the growth and development of our large city banks circumscribed the activities of the clerk and more and more prevented his acquisition of general banking knowledge by experience alone. The division of labor was being carried to the point where the average clerk was but a cog in the wheel and could not hope to acquaint himself with the intricacies of more than one or two departments of his bank. The country banker, also, had little or no means of learning about some branches of the business as conducted by his city correspondent or of uniform and improved methods of accounting and handling transits, collections, etc. Banking throughout the country was being conducted by crude heterogeneous methods. The only attempts at uniformity of practice were made through the associations, but that did not reach the heart of the disorders, as it did not educate the clerks who do the work and who are the growing bankers of the morrow. At the same time the heads of the big banking institutions of the country began to observe the lack of official material among their employees. Their methods of training were not developing men of all around banking knowledge; men of personality, executive ability or capacity for the official positions which were opening with increasing frequency as the tension of modern business grew greater and its volume increased.

The American Bankers Association took up the matter at its convention at Richmond in 1900 and a committee was appointed to investigate and report on some method of educating bank clerks in the theory and practice of banking. The report of this committee led to the organization of the American Institute of Bank Clerks, now the American Institute of Banking. The idea was inspired by a few such examples in the country as Joseph Chapman's class of bank clerks in Minneapolis, who had associated themselves together for the purpose of studying commercial law.

The plan met with general approval and there were soon chapters organized in each of the larger cities. The form of organization admitted fraternal and social features but the paramount object was education. An educational director was employed and a bulletin published. A uniform course of study was evolved, embracing a comprehensive grounding in banking and finance and commercial and banking law. The expense of establishing and maintaining the institute was borne for the most part by the parent organization, but the employees rose to their opportunity in a most creditable manner and the success of the plan surpassed all expectations.

In cities where a university or college was located arrangements were generally made to conduct the classes in banking and law in conjunction with the schools and under the supervision of their instructors. In other cities the work was carried on by the classes choosing a leader of their own and then studying the texts as supplied by the educational director, submitting the examination papers to him for correction. It was found that small chapters in small towns did not thrive, so in order to enable the clerk in the country bank to affiliate himself with the movement and secure its advantages the Correspondence Chapter was established. This method is in some respects the most efficient means of instruction. It lacks the inspiration of social contact, but the personal relationship between students and instructors stimulates ambition, and the fact that all lessons must be written insures thought and thoroughness. In correspondence instruction as conducted by the institute, each student is supplied with the serial lesson pamphlets and collateral exercises which constitute the institute study course. The exercises in connection with each lesson are submitted to instructors when done. They are then corrected and returned with such criticisms and suggestions as may be helpful in each case. So far as actual acquirement of knowledge is concerned the advantages of this system fully offset its disadvantages.

Conventions have been held annually of delegates from the chapters for purposes of organization and improving and furthering the usefulness of the A. I. B. as it has come to be called. Of course, some politics enter in, but that only adds zest to the deliberations. At Denver in 1908 the institute was made the educational section of the American Bankers Association but was given complete self-government. It now has about seventy-five chapters in cities located throughout the United States and a total membership of over 12,000.

The original object of the institute, to establish and maintain a uniform and recognized standard of education for the bank clerk, is still rigidly adhered to. The course of study as now constituted is divided into two general parts, each embracing about one year's work. The first part is titled "Banking and Finance," and covers the fundamental principles of economics; the production, distribution and consumption of wealth; the uses and value of money, its demand and supply and their relation to the interest rate; exchange and banking; the history and development of banking in foreign countries; the organization, administration, accounting methods and examination of banks; clearing houses; savings banks and trust companies; loans and discounts; foreign exchange; collections and transits; stocks and bonds and public and private finance. At the conclusion of this course official examinations are generally held before proceeding with the second part or law course.

The law studies are designed to inform the banker on all points of law pertaining to his business and to enable him to decide promptly and intelligently the many problems continually confronting him. The lessons discuss the principles of commercial law; business contracts and their essentials; agency and trusteeship; partnership and corporations; negotiable instruments and the rights and liabilities of parties to bills and notes.

When the final examinations have been satisfactorily passed a certificate is issued signed by the educational director, the officers of the institute and the president of the American Bankers Association. These certificates are coming to be recognized by bankers everywhere and mark their possessors as professional men. As has been stated it was part of the purpose of the organization to unify and

D. L. Heinsheimer

While it is somewhat early in the season, a boom has been started for D. L. Heinsheimer of Glenwood for president of the Iowa Bankers Association when the convention meets at Des Moines next year. Charles Ellis, the well known Charles City banker, is also mentioned in connection with the office. Mr. Heinsheimer is a faithful member of the I. B. A. He retired recently from presidency of the Mills County National at Glenwood after many years of service. During the past year he was a member of the time lock committee. It is thought that the bankers will center upon him for the president to succeed Charles Shade of Rock Rapids and ask that Mr. Ellis not be considered until the following year.

Davenport Savings in New Home

The Davenport Savings, one of the best known of the many good financial institutions at Davenport, is now in its new home on the first floor of the McManus building. This is one of the locations that are desirable for banking purposes and the rooms have been remodeled and put in the best sort of shape. The Davenport Savings first opened its doors April 1, 1870. It had a capital stock of $12,000. The bank has grown, however, and now is capitalized for $300,000 with a patronage that cannot be excelled.

Back from Minnesota Convention

The Iowa delegation which attended the Minnesota Bankers convention consisted of President Shade, Ex-President Curtin, Ex-Treasurer Bagley of Mason City and Secretary Hall of Des Moines. These men report a most enjoyable convention. The subject of improved agriculture was the main topic at the Minnesota convention and the Iowans feel that they have absorbed pointers that will be of great value to them in pushing this cause in Iowa. Ex-President Curtin came from the convention to Des Moines, where he attended a summer race meeting last week. As an admirer and judge of horse flesh, Mr. Curtin does not take a back seat for anyone in Iowa—or elsewhere.

Bank and Corporation Stock Unearthed

J. F. Wall, chief clerk in the revenue department of the state auditor's office, is authority for the statement that the new Iowa law on moneys and credits is responsible for the unearthing of thousands of dollars' worth of bank and corporation stock subject to taxation in Iowa. He says that when the reports are all in and the footings completed, there will be shown a big increase in the moneys and credits columns for which the bank and corporation stocks will be largely responsible.

Iowa Banking Notes

One of the fashionable weddings of northern Iowa was celebrated at the home of Congressman Gilbert N. Haugen, June 26th, when his daughter, Miss Norma, became the bride of J. O. E. Johnson, assistant cashier in the First National at Northwood. Congressman Haugen is president of the institution. The wedding was attended by many out of town guests and was one of the largest of its kind ever held in the state.

Aubrey Reynolds, assistant cashier of the Des Moines National, retires from that institution the first of July to enter the bond business, according to reports in Des Moines banking circles. He is a nephew of George M. Reynolds, Chicago, and of Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National and chairman of the executive committee of the A. B. A.

The Corn Exchange Savings at Elkhart was destroyed by fire in a conflagration that swept the business section one night last week.

A new bank is to be started at Minburn. E. D. Carter, cashier of the Peoples National at Perry, and J. R. Gardiner, well known Dallas county banker, are behind the movement, which promises to attain full speed within a few weeks.

W. J. Dunker has been elected cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Savings at Grand Mound.

The Melbourne Savings has increased its capital stock from $11,000 to $16,500.

The Davenport Savings has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 4 per cent, payable July 1st.

The Farmers Savings at Rudd is now running full blast. Ken E. Penny is cashier. He is a well known figure in Black Hawk county.

The final dividend is being paid to the creditors of the defunct First National at Chariton. The dividend now being paid is 4 per cent, making a total of 45⅓ per cent. It has been four years and eight months since Frank

R. Crocker's suicide revealed the insolvency of the institution.

The State of Blairsburg and the Ames Savings at Ames are among the progressive Iowa institutions which are planning new banking structures.

A new bank has been formed at Mondamin to be known as the Mondamin Savings, with a capital stock of $35,000. J. L. McClannahan will be president.

President M. C. Terry of the Savings of Brighton has sold his interest in that institution, so it has been reported in Des Moines, although the name of the purchaser is not known here.

The First National at Spencer has begun work on the third and second floors of its structure. It expects to make extensive improvements.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

This was a bad week for bankers in northwestern territory. It saw the indictment of six on ten counts and the issuing of a warrant for another. The warrant is for E. H. Spicer, cashier of the Shelton National, Shelton, Neb., who disappeared and is accused of having left a shortage of between $10,000 and $20,000. Bank Examiner Nicholson, after going over the books, discovered some discrepancies and called them to the attention of the cashier. Spicer offered to make an explanation if given a little time. The little time was occupied in getting out of the building, jumping into an auto and "beating it." A bundle of currency amounting to $500 is said to have disappeared about the same time. When last seen, Spicer had driven his car up to the Rock Island station in Lincoln and boarded the Chicago-Denver train.

The other bankers in trouble all are connected with the defunct Meade County National of Sturgis, S. D. Those indicted by the recent grand jury are D. A. McPherson, its president, who is also vice-president of the First National Bank of Deadwood; Cashier Harold M. Cooper, and Directors H. E. Perkins, H. O. Anderson, Frank M. Stewart and Chas. Francis. The cashier and directors are indicted for receiving money after the bank was known to be insolvent, and for being accessories to the crime, and the president and directors are indicted for having permitted stockholders to borrow more than 50 per cent of the capital.

In this connection, Mrs. Carrie L. Perkins, wife of the vice-president of the bank, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, her liabilities consisting of stock in the bank on which she cannot pay the assessment that has been levied.

Sioux City Banks Have Increased Deposits

A considerable increase in deposits and a remarkably large cash reserve in proportion to deposits is shown by the national bank statement for June 19th of local institutions. The salient figures of each are as follows:

	Available Cash	Deposits
First National . . .	$2,507,383.99	$7,228,707.13
Security National. .	1,413,638.46	3,995,775.11
Live Stock Nat'l . .	1,018,399.95	2,358,283.02
Bank of Commerce .	510,477.01	984,760.66
Northwestern Nat'l .	420,732.66	1,136,857.98

Among the Visiting Bankers

A. W. Ewart, president of the National Bank of Commerce, Pierre, S. D., was in Sioux City Saturday on his way home from the Republican convention at Chicago. Mr. Ewart is the Republican nominee for treasurer of South Dakota. C. T. Chubb, president of the Algona (Ia.) State, is in Sioux City visiting.

C. J. Wohlenberg, cashier of the Holstein (Ia.) Savings Bank, was in Sioux City on business Monday. W. A. Schaetzel, president of the Union County Bank, Elk Point, S. D., was transacting business at the First National Monday. John C. Clary, president of the Commercial Bank of Hornick, Iowa, was in Sioux City on business Tuesday.

South Dakota Banks

A compilation of statistics on South Dakota banks indicates that between the last bank call and that of April 20th, the total money on deposit in banks increased by $2,636,650, to a total of more than $73,000,000, of which $23,000,000 was in the hands of national banks, and $3,000,000 in savings banks or departments, bearing interest. The checking accounts amounted to $31,000,000. The report is on 532 state and 102 national banks.

Banking Notes

Because the county commissioners refused to permit liquor selling in the town of Orient, S. D., even after the Teutonic community there had voted in favor of license, the one bank in the town is the object of a boycott by some of the people, who are withdrawing their money and threatening to start a bank of their own. It is said that deposits amounting to $80,000 are affected by the efforts to get even with the offending cashier.

C. B. Holiday, of Mason City, Ia., and F. A. Ayres, of Lyton, Ia., have purchased the interest of C. B. Pope in the bank of Estalline, S. D. Mr. Holiday will become a director and assistant cashier, taking the place of Mr. Pope.

The controlling interest in the Farmers and Merchants State, Wessington, S. D., has been sold to J. D. McNair and outside interests. Mr. McNair becomes the new president.

The First National of Terrill, Ia., will erect a $15,000 building.

John J. Large, vice-president of the First National of Sioux City, has been spending two weeks traveling over the territory, particularly central and eastern Iowa.

T. A. Black, vice-president of the Security National, with his wife, is attending the state convention at Belle Fourche, S. D. He will investigate the big government irrigation project while there.

TOURS OF YELLOWSTONE PARK

The American Tourist Association, with headquarters at 1418 Marquette Building, Chicago, is offering this year three very attractive tours of the Yellowstone Park, leaving Chicago July 2d, 10th and August 10th respectively. The first tour provides for eleven days in the Park, and consists of an extra day at each hotel, voyage on Yellowstone Lake, ascent of Mt. Washburn, all side trips in the Park, exclusively chartered stages, a day in both St. Paul and Minneapolis and carriages and automobiles. Tour No. 2, in addition to the things provided for in the first tour, with the exception of visiting St. Paul and Minneapolis, provides for a day in Salt Lake City, a day in Glenwood Springs, ascent of Pike's Peak, Crystal Park auto drive, Garden of the Gods drive and a day in Denver. Tour No. 3, in addition to the attractions provided by tour No. 2, furnishes two extra days at Cañon Hotel and a day in Minneapolis. The impression that one can make a successful tour of what aptly has been described as "Wonderland" seems to have been gaining general currency. One cannot adequately cover this wonderful country in less than eleven days. Indeed, twenty, or even thirty, would not be too much. Tour No. 1 enters and leaves the Park by Gardiner, Mont.; tour No. 2 is made via the Western Gateway; tour No. 3 enters the Park by the western entrance and leaves via Gardiner. Names of prospective travelers should be sent to the association as soon as a decision to join is reached. It is very important that names be sent early, as the number is limited, and it is necessary for the management to know what sleeping and dining car accommodations to provide and to arrange for registration at the Park hotels. Names may be withdrawn if it subsequently proves impossible to go. It is advisable to secure tickets four or five days in advance. In case anyone is unable to go the entire amount paid will be refunded. All arrangements can be made through the American Tourist Association, 1418 Marquette Building, Chicago.

IN THREE YEARS

In the three years from 1909 to 1912 the American Trust, St. Louis, has trebled its deposits.

HEBGEN ARCH, YELLOWSTONE RIVER

Superintendent of Farmers Institutes Talks to Bankers

H. H. Stoner at Belle Fourche shows how they can help South Dakota farmers. Practical talk by practical man

I have been requested to talk to you a few minutes upon the "Relationship Between the Banker and the Farmer." You men are bankers and I am a farmer, and it seems to me that no more pertinent subject could be discussed at this meeting. If I view the subject from my standpoint, it may not exactly harmonize with your ideas of the matter, but if it does not, I hope opportunity may be given for a free discussion of the subject.

South Dakota is purely an agricultural state and its wealth lies almost exclusively locked up in its lands. With the exception of the richest one hundred square miles on the face of the earth, known as the Black Hills region, South Dakota depends upon her agriculture to make her one of the leading states of the Union. In order that this may be consummated it is absolutely essential that a hearty co-operation be made to exist between the man who deals in money and the man who deals in soil. It has been stated, and rightly, too, I presume, that between seventy and eighty millions of South Dakota deposits belong to the farmers of South Dakota. This, in itself, should be an incentive to a closer relationship between the banker and the farmer. But while this is true in South Dakota, it is not the case in the older states of the East. There, the farmer, instead of leading the band, plays second fiddle, and in some instances he is reduced to beating the drum; and if he ever gets to beating the drum in South Dakota the whole band will more or less disintegrate. It is to prevent the farmer from being reduced to the drummer in the South Dakota band that I wish to talk to you to-day.

It is to be regretted that the farmer needs to be prodded in the rear occasionally in order to make him keep up with the procession, and the banker is about the best prodder with whom I have ever come in contact, and I am inclined to think, that for the welfare of this great commonwealth of ours, it would be well for him to constitute himself the Great High Mogul Prodder. Now, I would not dare say this were I not a farmer myself.

There are great potentialities locked up in the soil—potentialities sufficient to feed the world for all time, but it takes something more than muscle to unlock them and it requires something more than chance to conserve them after they are unlocked. When the Pilgrim Fathers landed on Plymouth Rock they found a land teeming with fertility. They had only to plant in order to reap a harvest. Here, corn and wheat and oats and barley were grown with unstinted plentitude without a single thought for the future. With plow and harrow and sickle and scythe they robbed the land of its fertility and left it a mere skeleton of its former self. And when the lands of Virginia would no longer support them in opulence they pulled up stakes and moved over into Ohio into newer pastures and to virgin soil. Here, in turn, they practiced the same system of land spoliation—taking all away and giving nothing in return. And then they moved over into Indiana, and then into Illinois; their eyes forever feasting on the land of the setting sun, where ran more babbling brooks, and greener fields nodded in the breeze. But the West is gone, a halt has been called, and we are brought face to face with a problem which must be solved or the ghoulish cry of hunger will be heard reverberating throughout the length and breadth of this land of ours in the not far distant future.

When southern Illinois was first settled it was christened the "Land of Egypt," because the yield of crops in this locality was equal to that of the valley of the river Nile, but it was settled by a horde of land robbers; the very life-blood of the soil was taken away from it and nothing was returned in its stead; so the inhabitant of southern Illinois who once held the proud distinction of living in the most fertile spot on the face of the earth now blushes with shame when forced to admit that he lives in "Egypt." The phosphorus which nature originally put into the soil in southern Illinois is exhausted and it can be replaced only by the expenditure of hard cash. Into Illinois, the once boasted best agricultural state, they are to-day hauling commercial fertilizers not by the wagon load, or the car load, but by the train load, and they are paying millions of dollars a year for it; and now these same fellows are moving over into South Dakota, and unless an eye is kept on them, they will soon reduce our fair young state to penury. To forestall this wanton waste of fertility, I wish to speak for a time on the means by which this can be prevented.

There are ten elements necessary for the sustenance of plants. Three of these are found in the air and seven of them are found in the soil. We have no control over the atmospheric elements but we do have more or less control over the plant-food elements that are found in the soil. The elements in the soil which are necessary for the growth of vegetation are nitrogen, phosphorus, potash, lime, magnesia, sulphur and iron. Only three of these, however, are of particular interest to the farmer. They are the first three named: nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. These are the elements that first become exhausted in the soil. In practically all soils in South Dakota there is an abundance of lime, magnesia, sulphur and iron, but some of the agricultural lands of the West are poor in nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. A recent experiment, however, made at the Highmore Experiment Station, would seem to indicate that there is an abundance of phosphorus and potash in our South Dakota soil, but the same experiment proves beyond cavil that our soils are wanting in nitrogen content. Several plots of soil were treated by an application of commercial fertilizers. To one plot was added nitrogen, to another phosphorus, to another potash, to another nitrogen and phosphorus, to another nitrogen and potash, to another phosphorus and potash and to another was added nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. In every instance where potash or phosphorus was applied the yield was less than on the check plot which was situated in the immediate vicinity, but wherever nitrogen, whether alone or in combination with either potash or phosphorus or both the yield was decidedly greater than it was in the check plot. Where nitrogen was alone added the yield was much greater than anywhere else. This would tend to prove that the crying need of our soils in South Dakota is for nitrogen, and for nitrogen alone; and I want to make it plain, if I can in this talk to-day, how the nitrogen content of our soils may be increased.

It must be understood that the plant foods which the soil contains were present in the original rock out of which the soil was made. When I say this, I must take exception to one of the plant foods, and that is nitrogen. Six of the seven elements necessary in the soil for the production of plants are natural ingredients of the soil; they were present in the rock out of which the soil was made, but nitrogen is not a natural ingredient of the soil. When the earth was made, nitrogen was left out. All of the nitrogen that the soil contains has been added to it from the outside. The source of the nitrogen in the soil is the humus which the soil contains. Humus is vegetation in a state of decomposition. Vegetation while growing absorbs nitrogen from the soil, and when the plant is mature it contains all the nitrogen that the growing plant obtained from the soil and when the plant dies and is turned under by the plow, it still retains all the nitrogen which the growing plant obtained from the soil. That plant finally decomposes, it rots or decays, in other words, and it still, at this time, retains all the nitrogen that the plant obtained from the soil. This then, is the source of the nitrogen content of the soil, and this is the element over which we have absolute control. If we control the humus of our soil we control the nitrogen content of the soil. If we would add nitrogen to our soil we must do it by adding humus to the soil, and in order to add humus to the soil it is absolutely essential that every particle of vegetation that grows on the land, or as much, at least, as is possible, should be returned back to the land to be converted into humus.

I remember well one day when the old home smoke house got on fire. It was worth not to exceed $15 and it had about $7 worth of meat in it. I can see on my father's face to-day the look of anguish as with hat off and disheveled hair he quickly turned the windlass on the well, and I can hear the screams of my poor mother as she stood paralyzed with hands aloft, and how my older sister and I carried water in a frenzy of haste and threw on the blazing building, and my poor little brother and sister as they screamed in unison with my mother, but to no avail; the whole structure burned to the ground. The gloom that settled on the face of that family, as we stood around the ruins of that $15 smoke-house and $7 worth of meat made an impression upon my mind that can never be eradicated from my memory, and yet, that very afternoon, we went into the cornfield and burned up $220 worth of fertility in cornstalks and not a tear was shed and not a wail heard.

One ton of oats straw contains 12 pounds of nitrogen, two pounds of phosphorus and 21 pounds of potash, and the commercial value of this, if we went into the open market to purchase fertilizers, would amount to $3.30. One day, a year ago last March, our train was stalled in the southeastern part of this state. This happened about 8 o'clock in the evening. I looked out from my car window and counted 19 bonfires on the south side of the track. I did not count them on the north side. These 19 bonfires were straw stacks going up in smoke, and in every ton of that straw that was being burned there was wasted, yes, actually wasted, $3.30 worth of fertility. If a farmer has more money than he needs; if he is fixed like Rockefeller or any other "feller" and wants to get rid of his money, it would look much better for him some morning when he is building the kitchen fire to put $330 of money in his pocket-book and stick it into the kitchen stove and burn it up. This would answer the purpose equally as well as setting fire to a 100-ton oats strawstack and it wouldn't make nearly as much smoke, and all of his neighbors in twenty miles of him would not know what a wasteful farmer he was.

We raise two staple crops in this state, corn and small grains, and happily for the sanitary conditions of our soil, the poisons which emanate from the one is not particularly obnoxious to the other. Roughly speaking, it requires about two years for the soil, by natural means, to absorb and remove the poisonous matter added to it during the growth of a single crop, and taking advantage of this fact, then, we can see our way out of the difficulty. If small grain is raised on the land this year, and poisons are added thereby which it will require two years time for the soil to remove, and as corn is not materially affected by this poison, then, by planting corn next year on that same land the required time is given for the soil to purify itself of the small grain poisoning; and by following the corn with small grain the next year, the soil will have had time to purify itself of the poisons which the corn left behind. This is one reason, and a very important reason, why crops should be rotated, to keep the soil in a healthy, sanitary condition.

And now, what can the banker do to stop this wanton waste of fertility and loss in crop yields? And what can he do to increase the happiness, the thrift and the well-being of his farmer friend? The whole country is aroused by the necessity of practicing a better system of farming. Organization after organization is being formed in the Northwest for the purpose of increasing the agricultural output. The Council of Grain Exchanges is spending a million dollars to educate the farmers, with the end in view, that bread sufficient may be raised to feed our population. North Dakota has organized herself into a Better Farming League, and is placing an agricultural expert in every county, in order that the farmers may be taught advanced methods of farming. You ask "what can I do"? When you get home, gentlemen, call your farmers together, have them form a farmers' organization, help them to do it, and see to it that they stay organized, and then when something good comes along like Bert Ball and his million dollars for better agriculture they will be in shape to get part of it. Nothing can be done except by united effort. The reason that the farmer has not made more of himself is because he has been playing the game all alone; it is every fellow for himself, and the devil for the hindmost. The Farmers' Institute, an organization supported by the tax payers of the state, is visiting every town and hamlet in South Dakota, where its presence is welcome, and we are laying before the farmers the necessity of conserving the fertility and the moisture of the soil, of practicing a more rational system of crop rotation, of raising more and better stock. In short, we are trying to make of the farm a home where prosperity and contentment may reign supreme; but, we cannot do it alone; we must have your help. No other class of men are in a better position to render assistance to the farmer. If he has money, you handle it; if he needs money you loan it to him; you are at once his friend, his neighbor, and his benefactor. Get in closer touch with him, gentlemen. Take him into your confidence, invite him into your private office and talk these matters over with him. If he is making a mistake, tell him of it. If he is making a success, learn how he is doing it, and then tell his neighbors about it; and then when a farmers' institute is billed for your town see to it that every farmer in your territory is apprised of its date and insist that he and his family take a day off and attend it. Have your business men offer a small premium for the best farm products displayed at the meeting. That is the way to have a successful farmers' institute in your town. Show the farmer that you are interested in him, and he will become interested in himself.

NEXT STEP IN AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENT

President J. L. Snyder of the Michigan Agricultural College told the bankers at Kalamazoo recently that "The next great step in agricultural development will be better business on the part of the farmer. This must come through co-operation. The business must be made large enough to justify the employment of a business manager and business methods.

"Agriculture includes many more persons than those who till the ground. All humanity is dependent upon the products of the soil. Manufacturing, commerce, social development and all progress would wane if agriculture were to decline. It is almost appalling when one stops to think how absolutely dependable we are, individually and as a nation, on the little crust of earth from six inches to a foot thick which covers this globe. All humanity has an inherent and inalienable interest in this thin crust of soil. Certain men may hold a legal title to it but it belongs to humanity, and every person, regardless of his business or his social status, is tremendously interested in agriculture whether he appreciates it or not.

"Because of our abundant food supply in the past, due to our large acreage of fertile land, this problem has not forced itself upon the attention of our people until recently. But we are now becoming awake to the fact that our public domain is gone. There is now practically no more good land open to settlers. The land under cultivation has been and is being robbed of its fertility. The consumption of our staple foods is rapidly overtaking production, and as a consequence higher and higher prices prevail. This condition has led all thoughtful people to stop and consider what the result will be if nobody cares.

"It is not the farmer's problem any longer; he is in position at last where he can take care of himself. He is nearest to the base of supplies and will be the last one to suffer. The question as to whether the output from our farms shall increase in the future as fast as our population increases is of the greatest concern to every business, professional and laboring man in our country. It is therefore peculiarly gratifying that the leading business men—the bankers—should show an earnest desire to assist in bringing about better agricultural conditions. They are in position to render most valuable service. Many of them own farm property. This will make it easy for them to co-operate with the farmers along the line of organizations such as have been mentioned. In a certain section of Illinois the bankers have taken the initiative in this matter and are co-operating with the farmers and bearing a large proportion of the expense of experts who are employed to teach the farmers better methods of production.

"The bankers are in position to take the initiative in developing a system of financing agriculture. Such systems have been of untold value in the uplift of agriculture in Germany, France and other European countries. To place American agriculture on a permanent and successful basis, a system similar to that in use in the countries just mentioned must be put in force in this country. The members of this and similar organizations can very properly undertake this great and beneficial work. Agriculture is our greatest industry and the only industry which embraces in its interests all humanity. It is therefore fitting and proper that all, regardless of business or profession, should lend a hand. Make farming a better business, and people will return to the land. Make rural life and social and educational conditions better in the country and young people will not so readily be drawn away from the farm.

"The proportion of our people living in cities has about reached the maximum. If it still increases, those living on the land cannot produce sufficient food for all, and the prices of food will become so high that people will be forced to the country to find food and remunerative labor. It is to be hoped that this undesirable condition may be avoided by the helpful co-operation and assistance of such progressive and intelligent organizations as the Bankers Association of Michigan."

FIELD OF AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF BANKING

elevate the practices of banking, to raise the standard of its requirements and to make of the occupation of banking truly a profession. Literally speaking a professional man is one who is master of one of the sciences. We believe that banking is a science. It has not yet been entirely formulated but is in process of evolution. No one will deny that it has certain basic principles which if adhered to bring success and if disregarded precipitate failure. Herbert Spencer says, "What we call learning a business really implies learning the science involved in it."

It is the purpose of the American Institute of Banking to assemble, correlate and classify all available knowledge of the banking business, to deduct therefrom the basic facts and build with them the rudiments of this science. These elements of knowledge can be learned from books just as any other science can, but it is here that the superiority of our system of education manifests itself. As the institute does not confine itself to the knowledge acquired by experience and observation alone, it also does not confine itself to book learning only, but in the successful blending of the two does it reach the highest perfection in the dissemination of practical knowledge. John Ruskin stated a truth when he said, "The doing that makes commerce is born of the thinking that makes scholars." We are trying to teach the bank man to think, and then to act and to know the whyfore of his action.

The Institute still is young and it has much yet to learn in the task it is undertaking, but its field of usefulness is unlimited. In some chapters where the members have completed the prescribed course of study they have taken up more advanced work or particular studies and research in special branches of the banking business. In some of the larger chapters they have elementary work for the junior clerks embracing such studies as penmanship, English composition and public speaking. Debating has been a favorite field of endeavor in many places and some inter-chapter debates on the big banking problems of the day have exhibited such knowledge of the subjects by the contestants that their views have attracted the attention of bankers and statesmen. One chapter that I know of has a committee to investigate and report on all legislation affecting banking in that state. This it seems to me is a splendid idea. Bankers should not only keep themselves informed on banking legislation, but all affairs affecting the public interests. The banker can have a large influence in his community and it should be used to good purpose in public affairs.

BANK TAXATION IN MICHIGAN

Attorney H. H. Smith, of the Michigan Bankers Association, spoke at the Kalamazoo convention recently on the taxation of banks and bank deposits, reviewing the Michigan laws and customs on the subject in a very exhaustive manner. In concluding his remarks he said:

I have only intended in this brief address to outline the general question of bank taxation as applied to the property represented by the shares of stock in a bank. I have not intended to discuss, except by the briefest reference, the taxation of the deposits in the banks. In the year 1903 the State Tax Commission in its report dealt extensively with the taxation of credits. They pointed out that $210,000,000 of bank deposits in the State were then subject to taxation, and that the law was ample in its provisions to bring this property upon the assessment rolls; and they suggested that the bank deposits could be reached by requiring the banks to report the same and assessing them directly to the banks. This recommendation, however, has never been received with any warmth of approval either by the banks or by the depositors if, indeed, it could have been wrought into a constitutional law. In fact the trend of opinion has been away from the taxation of credits upon the ad valorem basis, and towards the taxation of credits under a specific tax. Since that date the mortgage tax law, which in the same report the Board of State Tax Commissioners discussed, but without approval, has been written upon the statute books, and though not enthusiastically approved by the bankers of the state, has, we think, demonstrated that it can bring upon the assessment rolls a great increase of values and consequent increase of revenue without any great loss to the banks and with some considerable gain to the investing public. In the report of the Commission on Inquiry, to which I have already referred, there is a distinct recommendation for the taxation of all securities, credits, upon a specific basis, and it is, we think, safe to say that the proposal to tax bank deposits to the bank has been relegated to obscurity. That these deposits are still as always subject to taxation to the individual is just, but the bank is not the keeper of the depositor's conscience, and upon him must rest the duty of reporting to the assessing officer the amount of his funds upon deposit.

In the City of Detroit some question has been made as to the nature of a bank deposit, and an attempt is in progress to treat the bank deposit as a chattel and not as a credit, so that the depositor cannot offset against it his indebtedness. The practical effect of such a ruling will, of course, be to wipe out this class of credits, for they are credits, and reduce the taxable property by just the amount they now appear upon the rolls, since if they are to be taxed as chattels, they will be withdrawn in the first week in April, and disappear entirely from the assessment rolls of the state. There could be no better illustration of the impossibility of reaching, under our present business system, by any inquisitorial methods, that form of property known as credits, and the taxation of the same on any ad valorem basis.

It is not the purpose of this address to attempt any solution of the general problem of taxation. It is only my purpose to attempt to clearly set forth the system of bank taxation in Michigan, and to suggest that the banks of Michigan now pay a greater rate upon the real value of their property, much of which if in the hands of individuals would be exempt from taxation, than does the private citizen, the farmer, manufacturer or the business man. The system under which the banks are assessed has in it many suggestions that could, with great prospect of improvement, be applied to the present system of taxing general property values of the state. But the banker can perform a service to the business community of Michigan, to its municipalities and its state government, in reference to all taxable property. He can hold up to every other taxpayer the example of a bank that pays upon the book value of its property, not upon 60 per cent of its cash value, as does the farm, not upon from 40 to 60 per cent of its cash value, as does the manufacturer and the residence owner and, by the encouragement of honest valuations, he can promote the movement for the just and equal distribution of the burdens of the state, and at the same time relieve his corporation of a considerable proportion of the taxes which it now pays at a higher valuation than almost every other form of capital within the state of Michigan, excepting the railroads.

all the time during his absence. The total figures now run almost to twenty-six millions.

CHARLES N. STEVENS, cashier of the City National at Evanston, is for the coming year president of Group 4 of the Illinois Bankers Association. He has been moved to issue a little "preachment"—as Hubbard would say—covering the purpose of making a bank statement. This is included in his folder for June 14th, which shows deposits of two and one-third millions.

BY bearing down just a little Col. Robert J. Lowry's national bank at Atlanta will round the five-million corner by the next statement. It lost out this time only "by a nose."

THOMAS B. PATON, general counsel of the American Bankers Association, has issued an opinion in pamphlet form on the congressional investigation of banks and trust companies which now is going on.

IF you do not receive a copy, and would like to look it over, address Mr. Paton at 5 Nassau Street, New York, which is the new address for "11 Pine Street."

"THE BANK WITH THE DIAMOND" is the new descriptive title of D. C. Wills in his advertising matter for the Diamond National at Pittsburgh.

"CRAZY SNAKE," chief of the Creek Indians in Oklahoma, is dead. He left a very handsome savings bank account and other provisions for his family with the First National of Seminole. The Indians of this tribe are among the most prosperous of the citizens of Oklahoma.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR REYNOLDS of the Des Moines National, in issuing his statement, makes use of this quotation: "Service, strength and satisfaction are the three essentials which make for the success of any business. They have been conspicuously exemplified in the policy of this bank, and its relations with its customers."

SECURITY NATIONAL of Minneapolis, of which J. S. Pomeroy is cashier, prints a view of the milling district of that great flour center on the front page of its statement-folder.

WE hear that another attempt is to be made at Peoria to decapitate the ex-presidents of the Illinois association from their on-the-council-for-life prerogatives. The "progressives" describe them as belonging chiefly to the "reactionaries," whatever that may mean.

WE suspect that George Woodruff will be running for governor one of these times. He's been "with" the farmer stuff right along and now he's started a bank for them. Now for the chin whiskers, George!

IT is denied that Hearst and Harrison slept together at Baltimore, but they were "keeping company" when the steam roller passed over.

PRESS reports sent out from the North Dakota convention announcing the election of Mrs. Batcheller of Fingal to membership on the Big Council have been corrected. Mrs. Batcheller will sit as a member of the nominating committee from her state. This in itself is something new in A. B. A. circles.

NO sooner had the existing title and trust companies of Chicago been consolidated than a new concern, styled "The Federal Title and Trust Company," was incorporated. This keeps up the custom in such matters.

CASHIER FRED W. KIESEL shows deposits of seven and one-half millions in the California National at Sacramento. The bank has a capital and surplus of a million and a quarter. W. E. Gurber is president.

CH. HUTTIG, president of the Third National at St. Louis, has sent out formal announcement that his new vice-president, Frank O. Watts, of Nashville, will assume active duties July 1st.

MR. HUTTIG also writes that he confidently looks forward to resuming active duties at the bank at the end of his summer vacation in September. His friends and patrons of the bank are invited to call.

FOR the chairmanship of the Big Council there continues to be frequent mention of Jedyard Cogswell of Albany, also Joseph Wayne, Jr., of Philadelphia and T. R. Davis of Cincinnati. Northwest members of council are laying plans for the elevation of Joseph Chapman, Jr., to that distinguished position.

THE statement sent out by the Wisconsin National of Milwaukee shows just short of eighteen millions in deposits. This bank makes a specialty of bank and corporation accounts, and allows very liberal terms in handling them. L. J. Petit is president and L. G. Bournique is cashier.

SECURITY TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK, J. F. Sartori, president, publishes a very handsome house organ under the title of "The Savings Depositor." This little publication also is a boom-organ for the city of Los Angeles.

ALEX. D. CAMPBELL of the Hanover National accompanies the statement of that sterling organization with a personal letter, which, with their vast number of correspondents, entails considerable work. The deposits of other banks and bankers with the Hanover are nearly two to one as against individual deposits. They equal more than three-fifths of the total deposits, which are around one hundred and twelve millions.

SG. BAYNE, president of the Seaboard National, New York, sends out a little folder along with the bank statement, entitled "Great Irishmen." In this article Mr. Bayne denies the statement made recently in a New York paper that "Ireland never has produced a single man of note in the arts or sciences, nor contributed anything toward the advancement of humanity."

THE members of Group 1, Illinois, the mother group, met at Moline on the Steamer "W. W.," endorsed George Woodruff of Joliet for chairman of the executive council, and instructed their representatives on the council to support his candidacy. This action was taken on the recommendation of Nelson H. Greene of Moline and was seconded by Charles Boyden, cashier of the Farmers State Bank of Sheffield. Ex-President of the Association Phil Mitchell attempted to stem the tide on account of his long-time friendship for Col. Aisthorpe of Cairo, but the members of Group 1, appreciating the work which has been done by Mr. Woodruff and his associates in developing the group system, were not inclined to discourage the youngsters.

CASHIER.

PRESIDENT KAUFMAN IS OPTIMISTIC

New York, June 27.—Louis G. Kaufman, president of the Chatham and Phoenix National Bank, one of the straight commercial banks in the Wall Street district, is of the opinion that the business of the country is in a position to move ahead and expand despite the disquieting features of the present political situation. Mr. Kaufman bases his view upon the strong cash position of the country's mercantile interests.

"Never in the history of banking, so far as I am conversant with it," said Mr. Kaufman, "has there been a time when the mercantile interests of the country have been so sound financially. Increased railroad facilities, low freight and express rates, have all contributed to obviate the necessity of an accumulation of stocks in merchants' hands. The result has been that the majority of merchants buy only for current needs, unless they endeavor to anticipate higher prices later on. This means that fewer stocks are now being carried."

"As for instance, I have before me the statement of a well-to-do merchant. This statement discloses the fact that he has upward of $60,000 cash on hand; more than $150,000 bills receivable, all of which are good, and only $40,000 in merchandise. This is but typical, so that it is reasonable to presume that the mercantile interests of the country are practically immune from the dangers of a money panic. It is this liquid condition of assets throughout the country that makes me feel optimistic of the future."

GIFT OF LIFE INSURANCE TO BANK STAFF

Byron L. Smith, president of the Northern Trust Company, completed arrangements to insure every employee of that bank. The insurance will be taken out in the Equitable and the amount of the policies will reach a quarter of a million dollars. It is said to be the largest amount of "group" insurance ever taken out by a banking institution. The Northern Trust is the first bank in Chicago to insure its employees. Beginning with July 1st every person working for the bank from the office boy to the president will receive a certificate from the bank which will be similar to a life insurance policy. It will be for an amount equal to a year's salary, except in the case of high salaried employees, where a maximum has been set. Each employee may name his beneficiary. The bank will pay the premiums monthly to the Equitable. No physical examination will be required. The rates are decided upon for groups of 100, and no employee can be left out. His policy ends automatically when he leaves the service of the institution. The directors of the bank who adopted the plan expect to get a greater degree of efficiency from the employees through insuring their lives. They believe it will make positions more permanent.

Thomas Hanbeck has been chosen vice-president of the Farmers and Traders at Bonaparte, Iowa.
